MANUAL

of SEROLOGIC TESTS for SYPHILIS

1949

This manual, prepared with the assistance of the originators of each test technic, was assembled at the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory, U. S. Marine Hospital, Staten Island 4, N. Y. Director: J. F. Mahoney, Medical Director, Public Health Service, FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY. The manual supersedes Supplements 9 and 11 to VENEREAL DISEASE INFORMATION and VD–Graphic 85.

PREFACE

At the Assembly of Laboratory Directors and Serologists which met in Hot Springs, Ark., in October 1938, the Committee on the Need of Adherence to Conventional Technic in the Performance of Reliable Serologic Tests for Syphilis made the following recommendation:

"One of the most important factors responsible for nonadherence to the originator's technic is the failure of many serologists and serologic technologists to keep abreast of new developments. It is imperative that obsolete methods be abandoned. One source of difficulty has been the publication of desirable new modifications in technic by the originators of reliable serologic methods in a number of journals or books, some or all of which are not read by the serologist. To overcome this deficiency, this committee recommends the publication, in complete detail, of the technical procedures to be observed in the performance of each of the reliable, evaluated serologic tests for syphilis now commonly employed in this country. It is recommended that such a publication should be issued by the United States Public Health Service in collaboration with the originators of reliable methods as a supplement to THE JOURNAL OF VENEREAL DISEASE INFORMATION."

It is for the purpose of carrying out these recommendations that the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory of the United States Public Health Service has collaborated with the test author-serologists in assembling the data for this manual.

During the 4 years that have elapsed since the laboratory manual "Technics of Serodiagnostic Tests for Syphilis—1944" was published many changes in testing methods have been introduced. Principal among these have been those associated with the use of antigens prepared from cardiolipin and lecithin.

Those testing procedures that have been modified through alteration of technic or the incorporation of new reagents since 1941 have not been subjected to the scrutiny of an evaluation study such as was employed in the Washington Serology Congress of that year. All listed procedures employing cardiolipin-lecithin antigen are in this category.

Each serologist who has originated a serologic test for syphilis is working to improve his test. The Public Health Service plans to issue revisions of this manual containing latest changes of these technics from time to time.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A test technic is composed of equipment, reagents, volumes, time periods, temperatures, and orders of procedure. Each of these factors may be of equal importance and none can be disregarded with impunity. Technicians who make arbitrary changes in recommended technics must assume full responsibility for the test results.

Although serologic tests for syphilis are not absolutely specific and some serums and spinal fluids have the capacity to react positively in one test and negatively in another, analyses of conflicting serologic results in terms of diagnosis or prognosis cannot be made by the technician. These decisions lie only within the province of the physician. Valid serologic test findings are, however, obtained when (1) standardized reagents and adequate controls are used, (2) technic recommendations are strictly adhered to, and (3) results are reported as specified for each procedure.

Each technician should test every new lot of reagent in parallel with one that is being used and has acceptable reactivity before the new lot of reagent is placed in routine use. This procedure is recommended regardless of the source from which the new reagent is obtained. Other factors to be considered in the control of serologic tests are discussed in the following paragraphs.

Antigens

Standardization of an antigen is accomplished when the antigen produces reactions in qualitative and quantitative tests with serums and spinal fluids that are identical with those obtained with a standard antigen. Antigens prepared from different lots of beef heart powder may have dissimilar reactivities even though identical extraction procedures are employed, so a means of adjustment is sometimes necessary. Methods that may be used for the final adjustment of antigens are contained in technic outlines for each test. Cardiolipin and purified lecithin referred to in this text are products that have been isolated and purified by published methods (1, 2) and that meet prescribed chemical and serologic assay standards.

Complement Fixation

Antigens may be more or less reactive than a standard antigen for a given procedure and may possess an undesirable capacity to fix the complement fraction of guinea pig serum at low temperature.

Selection of the dilution at which an antigen is maximally reactive may not be an adequate means of standardization since all antigens used at their optimum dilutions may not be equally reactive in the designated testing procedure. Final acceptance of an antigen must be based on comparative tests with a standard antigen.

The ability of antigens to fix guinea pig serum complement at low temperatures is ascertained by pretesting complement serums as described in complement-fixation technics. When two or more antigens are used simultaneously for pretesting guinea pig serums, a greater number of unsatisfactory complement-antigen combinations may be elicited by one antigen than by another. Antigens that are minimally reactive in this nonspecific manner are preferred.

Cardiolipin-lecithin antigens appear to be free of the fraction responsible for this nonspecific fixation of complement. Pretesting of guinea pig serums and the use of egg white may be omitted when this type of antigen is employed. Cardiolipin-lecithin antigens, although assembled according to designated formulas, should be checked as recommended for beef heart extract antigens.

Flocculation

Beef heart extract antigens that cannot be adjusted to standard reactivity by the means described in the test technic should be discarded. Extracts should then be prepared from other batches of beef heart powder.

Adjustment of cardiolipin-lecithin antigens to standard reactivity levels can usually be accomplished by slight alteration of the lecithin content.

Sheep Cells (Red Corpuscles)

Sheep cells may be too resistant or too susceptible to the hemolytic action of complement and hemolysin. As the reactivity level of a complement-fixation test is influenced by the quality of sheep cells employed, particular attention should be given to the cells used. The effects of bacterial contamination on sheep cell reactivity are unpredictable and only aseptically collected sheep blood in sterile containers is recommended for use in complement-fixation tests.

Red corpuscles from an occasional sheep will be found to be exceptionally resistant to the hemolytic action of complement and hemolysin. Whenever blood from an untested sheep is drawn, comparative complement and amboceptor titrations should be made, employing other sheep cells of acceptable quality.

Sheep cells are too fragile for use when a saline suspension of washed cells, prepared as prescribed by a test technic, shows any degree of hemolysis when stored overnight at 6° to 8° C.

The only recommended solution, in either of these instances, is to discard unsatisfactory cells and to obtain another supply of sheep blood.

Complement

Guinea pig blood may possess the following undesirable properties: (1) Complement activity less than prescribed minimum, (2) complement activity greater than prescribed maximum, or (3) the complement fraction partially or completely fixed by other portions of the serum in combination with the antigen used.

Low complement titers may be caused by improper feeding or housing of guinea pigs or, most commonly, through loss of reactivity during storage of guinea pig serum. Complement serum stored as liquid (with preservative added) at refrigerator temperature or in the frozen state should be adequately protected from partial drying as a result of evaporation. Aliquots sufficient for 1 day's use should be placed in containers to avoid complement destruction due to repeated warming to room temperature.

Some technicians are deceived by restoring dehydrated complement serum to only one-half or two-thirds of the original serum volume and then omitting the serum concentration factor when calculating complement dilution. Substandard serum may be made to appear adequately reactive in this way. This practice, used to circumvent technic restrictions, is to be discouraged.

Individual guinea pig serums may possess complement in higher titer than is optimum for some technics. The pooling of serum from several guinea pigs will usually avoid this condition.

The property of nonspecifically fixing its complement fraction in the presence of antigen at low temperature is possessed by some guinea pig serums. Pretesting of complement, as described in each technic, will allow the selection of a suitable complement-antigen combination. However, a complement satisfactory for use with one antigen may not react in an acceptable manner with another. The antigen-guinea-pig-serum combination that is used for pretesting should be used for the test proper.

Hemolysin (Sheep Cell)

Stock, glycerinated (50 percent) sheep red cell hemolysin can be stored at refrigerator temperature for long periods of time with little loss of reactivity. A more rapid lowering of titer will be noted in the diluted hemolysin solutions. When a marked drop in titer is found or if precipitate is seen in the diluted hemolysin, this reagent should be discarded and reprepared from stock hemolysin.

A sudden drop in hemolysin titer may also be caused by the complement, sheep cells, or saline solutions used; comparative tests should be made to determine which reagent is at fault.

Distilled Water

Distilled water of poor quality may result from failure to clean the still or bottle trap as frequently as needed. The kind of tap water used and the number of hours per day that the still is in operation will determine the frequency of cleaning. When a bottle or tank trap is attached to the water still, attention should also be given to keeping this section clean.

Distilled water will absorb ions of alkaline or acid gases present in the laboratory and may in this way become unsatisfactory for use in serologic tests. For this reason the use of freshly distilled water is frequently recommended.

Saline solutions and distilled water, if stored, should be placed in hard-glass containers that are tightly stoppered to avoid changes due to ion transfer from the glass or absorption from the air.

Equipment

Water bath temperatures should be checked each time during the day that they are used. Refrigerator temperatures should be checked daily with a thermometer that is placed in the part of the refrigerator that is occupied by the test racks. Temperature should again be noted when the refrigerator is first opened in the morning if complement-fixation tests (16- to 18-hour fixation) are stored.

The speed of shaking and rotating machines should be checked by the technician each time they are used, and marked variation from prescribed speeds should not be tolerated.

Centrifuges should be equipped with tachometers so that speed may be checked and controlled. The inside of centrifuges should be occasionally cleaned to prevent dust particles from being blown into specimens.

Automatic pipetting machines should be checked daily for correct volume delivery. Should readjustment be found necessary, volume of 25 or 50 deliveries may be collected and measured in a certified graduated cylinder.

Glassware

Only chemically clean glassware should be used in the serology laboratory. Tubes and pipettes from which protein solutions have not been completely removed will acquire a brown film. This film can usually be removed by submersion in sulphuric-acid-dichromate cleaning solution.

Whether alkaline or acid solutions are used for cleaning, rinsing should be adequate to remove all traces of cleaning solutions. Daily spot testing of glassware with indicator paper or solutions will insure against the release of chemically contaminated glassware to the testing laboratory.

Tubes, slides, or pipettes that become etched or scratched to a degree that will interfere with test readings should be discarded and replaced.

GENERAL EQUIPMENT

The following items of equipment and glassware, commonly found in the serology laboratory, have been omitted from the lists appearing in the text under each test heading in order to avoid repetitious listing.

Equipment

1. Centrifuge, with tachometer.
2. Filter paper, 32 mm. to 250 mm.
3. Filter pump, for water connection.
4. Interval timers.
5. Microscope.
6. Microscope lamp.
7. Racks, wooden or wire, for specimen tubes.
8. Refrigerator, 6° to 10° C.
9. Stop watch.
10. Thermometers, appropriate for water baths and refrigerator.
11. Water baths, 37° C. and 56° C.

Glassware

1. Bottles, glass-stoppered, Pyrex, 100 ml.- to 1-liter capacities.
2. Cylinders, graduated, 50 ml.- to 1-liter capacities.
3. Flasks, Erlenmeyer, 25-ml. to 2-liter capacities.
4. Funnels, fluted, 65-mm. to 200-mm. diameters.
5. Pipettes, serologic, graduated to tip:
   - 0.1 ml., graduated in 1/100 ml.
   - 0.2 ml., graduated in 1/100 ml.
   - 1.0 ml., graduated in 1/100 ml.
   - 5.0 ml., graduated in 1/10 ml.
   - 10.0 ml., graduated in 1/10 ml.
6. Tubes, specimen, of suitable sizes for blood and spinal fluid collection.

Eagle Flocculation Tests With Serum or Spinal Fluid

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Kahn shaking machine (275 to 285 oscillations per minute, with 1½-inch stroke).
2. Paraffin-ring maker.

Glassware

1. Bottles, screw cap, vinylite or tinfoil lined, 15 ml.
2. Slides, 2 x 3 inches.

Reagents

1. Eagle Flocculation Antigen. (See "Preparation of Antigen," p. 11).

2. Saline Solutions.

a. 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution: Weigh 850 mg. of dried sodium chloride (A.C.S.) and add to 100 ml. of distilled water. The salt may be weighed and dispensed into corked tubes to avoid daily weighing. Saline solution should be prepared fresh daily as required.

b. 4-percent sodium chloride solution: Weigh 4 gm. of dried sodium chloride and add to 100 ml. of distilled water. Sodium chloride may be previously weighed and dispensed as described above.

Preparation of Serums

1. Remove serums from clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serums in 56° C. water bath for 20 to 30 minutes or at 60° to 62° C. for 3 minutes.

3. Recentrifuge any specimen in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Preparation of Spinal Fluids

1. Centrifuge and decant all spinal fluids to remove cellular and particulate debris. (Grossly contaminated and bloody fluids are unsatisfactory for testing.)

2. Spinal fluids are examined without preliminary heating.

Qualitative Tests With Serum or Spinal Fluid

1. Prepare primary antigen suspension as follows:

a. Pipette one volume (1, 2, or 3 ml.) of Eagle flocculation antigen into a 15-ml. bottle.

b. Blow two volumes (2, 4, or 6 ml. respectively) of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution into the bottle containing the antigen from a pipette which has a sufficiently large bore to make the admixture of antigen and saline rapid and complete.

c. Stopper the bottle containing the antigen suspension and place in the refrigerator.

d. Age the primary antigen suspension in the refrigerator for 24 hours. The suspension is then usable for a period of 5 days, during which it must be kept refrigerated.

2. Arrange test tubes (100 x 13 mm. outside diameter) in suitable racks so that there is one tube for each serum and spinal fluid to be tested, and for positive serum, negative serum, and saline controls. Number the tubes to correspond to the identifying numbers of serums and spinal fluids.

3. Pipette 0.4 ml.[1] of each heated serum, control serums, and saline into correspondingly numbered tubes.

4. Pipette 1 ml. of each spinal fluid into correspondingly numbered tubes.

5. Prepare the secondary antigen suspension immediately before use as follows:

a. Calculate the amount of secondary antigen suspension required to allow 0.2 ml. for each serum test and 0.1 ml. for each spinal fluid test. Allow a slight excess to compensate for loss in pipetting.

b. Prepare the secondary antigen suspension by blowing one volume of primary antigen suspension into eight volumes of 4-percent sodium chloride solution. The following formulas are used to calculate the volume of primary antigen suspension and 4-percent sodium chloride solution needed to prepare the required amount of secondary antigen suspension.

$$\frac{\text{Volume of secondary antigen suspension required}}{9} = \text{Volume of primary antigen suspension to be used}$$

$$\text{Volume of primary antigen suspension} \times 8 = \text{Volume of 4-percent sodium chloride solution to be used}$$

[1] 0.2 or 0.1 ml. of heated serum may be used in smaller test tubes (7- to 8-mm. inside diameter) with proportionately smaller amounts of secondary antigen suspension.

Example:

63 ml. secondary antigen suspension required.

$\frac{63}{9} = 7$ ml. primary antigen suspension required.

7 ml. $\times$ 8 = 56 ml. 4-percent sodium chloride solution required.

6. Add 0.2 ml. of the secondary antigen suspension to each serum and to the saline control, and 0.1 ml. to each spinal fluid.

7. Shake tube racks for 5 minutes on a Kahn shaking machine. (The tests may be shaken vigorously by hand for 5 minutes and then placed in the 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes when a Kahn shaking machine is not available.)

8. Centrifuge all tubes at 1,500 to 2,000 r.p.m. for 10 minutes.

9. Remove tubes from centrifuge and examine macroscopically before window or artificial light source, using a dark background.

10. Read and record those reactions which are positive macroscopically as evidenced by coarse aggregation of antigen particles suspended in a comparatively clear fluid.

11. Examine the contents of each tube in which the aggregation is questionable or entirely lacking by pipetting a portion of the contents into a paraffin ring on a glass slide and observe microscopically.

12. Read and record the reactions observed microscopically according to the following descriptive outline.

Positive . . . . . Definite clumping of antigen particles.
Doubtful . . . . . Slight clumping of antigen particles.
Negative . . . . . Absence of clumping, with uniform distribution of antigen particles.

13. Report recorded results in accordance with the following outline.

Macroscopic Reading	Microscopic Reading	Report
Positive	(Not made)	Positive
Questionable	Positive	Positive
Questionable	Doubtful	Doubtful
Negative	Positive	Positive
Negative	Doubtful	Doubtful
Negative	Negative	Negative

Note: Zonal reactions are rarely encountered in which strongly positive serums give a negative result in the routine test with whole serum but which are strongly positive when serum is tested in serial dilution. When there is reason to suspect that such an inhibition of reaction has taken place, a 1:10 dilution of the serum in normal saline should be tested.

Quantitative Eagle Flocculation Test With Serum or Spinal Fluid

1. Prepare serial dilutions of serum or spinal fluid in the proportions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, 1:32, 1:64, and higher if necessary, by the following method:

a. Pipette into each of six (or more) tubes, 0.4 ml. of 0.85-percent salt solution for serum dilutions or 1.0 ml. for spinal fluid dilutions.

b. Add 0.4 ml. of heated serum or 1 ml. spinal fluid to the first tube and mix.

c. Transfer 0.4 ml. from the first to the second tube and mix (serum).

OR

Transfer 1.0 ml. from the first to the second tube and mix (spinal fluid).

d. Continue transferring and mixing from one tube to the next (0.4 ml. of serum mixtures or 1.0 ml. of spinal fluid dilutions) until all dilutions have been made.[2]

2. Test each dilution of serum or spinal fluid as indicated under "Qualitative Tests With Serum or Spinal Fluid" (page 8).

3. Record the reaction obtained with each dilution.

4. Report results according to the highest dilution giving a positive reaction when the next highest dilution yields a negative finding.

Example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
+	+	+	+	—	—	Positive, 1:16 dilution
+	+	+	—	—	—	Positive, 1:8 dilution

[2] The following dilution method is preferred by Dr. Harry Eagle:

Serum: Place decreasing amounts of serum into a series of tubes and adjust volumes to 0.4 ml. by the addition of 0.85-percent saline solution as indicated below:

Tube No.	1	2	3	4	5	6	etc.
Whole serum	0.2	0.1	..	..	..	..
1:8 serum	..	..	0.4	0.2	0.1	0.05
0.85-percent saline	0.2	0.3	..	0.2	0.3	0.35
Final dilution	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64

Spinal fluid: Place decreasing amounts of spinal fluid in a series of tubes and adjust .he total volume as indicated below:

Tube No.	1	2	3	4	5	6	etc.
Whole spinal fluid	0.5	0.25	..	..	..	..
1:8 spinal fluid	..	..	1	0.5	0.25	0.1
0.85-percent saline	0.5	0.75	..	0.5	0.75	0.7
Final dilution	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64

When a positive reaction is followed by a doubtful in the next higher dilution, an interpolated calculation of titer is made.

Example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
+	+	+	+	±	—	Positive, 1:24 dilution
+	+	+	±	—	—	Positive, 1:12 dilution

Eagle Flocculation Antigen

Preparation of Antigen

Reagents:

1. Dried, powdered beef heart.[3]
2. Ether, anesthetic.
3. Alcohol, absolute ethyl.
4. Cholesterol.
5. Corn germ sterol.

Procedure

1. Weigh 50 gm. of dried, powdered beef heart.

2. Transfer to a glass-stoppered, 1,000-ml. flask and add 250 ml. of cold anesthetic ether.

3. Extract at refrigerator temperature for 15 minutes with frequent shaking.

4. Filter rapidly by suction and discard the ether filtrate.

5. Return the beef-heart powder to the flask and repeat the extraction and filtration three additional times, using 250 ml. of cold ether each time.

6. After the last extraction and filtration, wash the powder on the filter with 100 ml. of fresh ether.

7. Spread the powder on a sheet of clean filter paper and allow to dry at room temperature until free of ether odor.

8. Return the powder to a clean dry flask and add 250 ml. of absolute ethyl alcohol.

9. Stopper tightly and extract for 5 days at 20° to 37° C. Shake the flask each day.

10. Filter the alcohol extract into a graduated 250-ml. cylinder and wash the moist beef heart powder with portions of fresh absolute alcohol until the total volume equals 250 ml.

11. Transfer the alcoholic extract to a flask, stopper tightly, and chill to —10° to —25° C. Allow to remain at that temperature for 1 hour.

12. Filter rapidly with suction and discard the flocculent precipitate.

13. Add 6 mg. of cholesterol and 6 mg. of corn-germ sterol to each milliliter of antigen. Solution of the sterols may be aided by warming in a water bath at 56° C.

Antigen should be stored at room temperature in the dark in tightly stoppered containers. Check each lot of antigen with one of known reactivity by performing comparative tests on known negative, weakly positive, and strongly positive serums.

Rectification of Antigen

If the antigen proves insensitive, or if negative results are granular in appearance, the antigen can sometimes be rectified by the following procedure:

1. Place 20 ml. of antigen extract (without cholesterol or corn-germ sterol added) in a small evaporating dish.

Table 1.—A method of rectifying Eagle flocculation antigen

A. Preparation of antigens with varying concentrations of tissue extractives Antigen No.

	1	2	3	4	5
Doubly concentrated alcohol extract fortified with 0.6 percent each of cholesterol and corn germ sterol, ml.	1.6	1.2	1.0	0.8	0.6
Solution of 0.6 percent cholesterol and 0.6 percent corn germ sterol in absolute alcohol, ml.	0.4	0.8	1.0	1.2	1.4
Concentration of tissue extractives relative to original extract	1.6×	1.2×	1.0×	0.8×	0.6×

B. Method of testing rectified antigens

Antigen No.	Dilutions of positive in negative serum							Remarks
	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64	Negative serum
1 . . .	+	+	+	±	−	−	−	Negative reactions smooth.
2 . . .	+	+	+	+	±	−	−	Negativereactionssmooth (optimum mixture).
3 . . .	+	+	+	+	±	−	−	Negative reactions granular.
4 . . .	+	+	+	+	+	−	−	Negative reactions granular.
5 . . .	+	+	+	+	±	±	±	Negative reactions granular.

Conclusion: Each 12.0 ml. of the original alcohol extract should be concentrated to 10.0 ml. before addition of sterols. In the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory, some beef heart powders that produced antigens that did not respond to the prescribed methods of rectification have been altered by preliminary extraction with acetone (5 ml. to each gram of powder for 18 hours at room temperature) so that satisfactory antigens for the Eagle flocculation test were obtained.

2. Place the evaporating dish in a water bath at 56° C. and allow antigen to concentrate to 10 ml.

3. Transfer antigen to a small bottle and add 60 mg. each of cholesterol and corn germ sterol. Warm bottle in 56° C. water bath to aid solution of sterols.

4. Weigh 600 mg. each of cholesterol and corn germ sterol. Dissolve in 100 ml. of absolute alcohol.

5. Dilute 1.6 ml., 1.2 ml., 1.0 ml., 0.8 ml. and 0.6 ml. of the concentrated antigen extract containing 0.6 percent cholesterol and 0.6 percent corn germ sterol with 0.4 ml., 0.8 ml., 1.0 ml., 1.2 ml., and 1.4 ml. respectively of absolute alcohol containing 0.6 percent cholesterol and 0.6 percent corn germ sterol.

6. Prepare serial dilutions of a known positive serum in a known negative serum.

7. Test each of the five antigens with these serum mixtures. That antigen which detects the smallest amount of syphilitic serum and which shows no evidence of aggregation with negative serum represents the optimum ratio of extract to alcohol mixture.

Table 1 illustrates the method of preparing and testing antigen with varying concentrations of tissue extractives as described above.

Eagle Complement-Fixation Tests

Equipment and Glassware

Glassware

1. Tubes, centrifuge, graduated, 15 ml.
2. Tubes, centrifuge, with neck, 50 ml.

Preparation of Serums

1. Remove serums from blood clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serums at 56° C. for 20 to 30 minutes or at 60° to 62° C. for 3 minutes. Previously heated serums should be reheated for 5 minutes at 56° C. on day of testing.

Note: If complement-fixation reactions of maximum sensitivity are desired, it is necessary first to remove the natural anti-sheep hemolysins from serums. This may be accomplished in the following manner:

a. Pipette 1 ml. of each unheated serum into a small (12 x 75 mm.) tube and place in the refrigerator for 15 or more minutes.

b. Add one drop of washed, packed, sheep red cells to each serum and mix well.

c. Return all tubes to the refrigerator for 15 minutes.

d. Centrifuge all tubes and separate serums by decanting. Avoid washing cell residue from side walls or bottom of tubes.

e. Heat serums at 56° C. for 20 to 30 minutes or at 60° to 62° C. for 3 minutes. Previously heated and absorbed serums should be reheated for 5 minutes on the day of test.

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

1. Centrifuge and decant all spinal fluids to remove cellular and particulate debris.

2. Heat all spinal fluids received through the mail, or stored for three or more days, at 56° C. for 15 minutes to inactivate thermolabile anticomplementary substances.

3. Fresh spinal fluids are tested without preliminary heating.

Reagents

1. Normal saline solution (0.85-percent):

a. Weigh 8.5 gm. of dried sodium chloride (A.C.S.) for each liter of saline solution. The salt may be weighed and dispensed into corked tubes to avoid daily weighing. Saline solution should be prepared fresh daily.

b. Dissolve salt in freshly distilled water and filter into flask having glass or cotton gauze stoppers.

c. Place portion of saline, sufficient for diluting complement to be used in the complement-fixation test, into the refrigerator, allowing remainder to stand at room temperature.

2. Antigen dilution:

a. Place the required amount of antigen in a flask (See "Preparation of Eagle Complement-Fixation Test Antigen" page 23). Pour the designated amount of saline slowly into the antigen. The quantity of antigen dilution needed may be calculated from the number of tubes containing antigen in the test and in the titrations. The dilution factor is listed on the antigen bottle label. The test dose is 0.4 ml. of diluted antigen.

Example:

	Antigen		Saline
Designated antigen titer 1:120	1.0 ml.	+	120 ml.
	0.6 ml.	+	72 ml.
Designated antigen titer 1:160	1.0 ml.	+	160 ml.
	0.4 ml.	+	64 ml.

b. Diluted antigen is allowed to remain at room temperature.

3. Complement serum:

a. Cell-free guinea pig serum can be obtained by centrifuging tubes of blood and decanting serum from the clots when the laboratory practice is to bleed guinea pigs the day before the complement-fixation tests are performed. Serums from three or more guinea pigs should be pooled and returned to the refrigerator.

b. Dehydrated complement serum should be restored to original volume by adding the prescribed amount of buffered diluent or distilled water. Rehydrated complement should be stored in the refrigerator.

c. Complement serum stored in the frozen state should be returned to the liquid state by being placed at room temperature or at 37° C. only long enough to melt. As protein content of these serums will tend to collect at the bottom of the tube during thawing, these tubes of serums should be adequately mixed by inversion and returned to the refrigerator (6° to 10° C.).

d. Pretest complement to obtain a predictably satisfactory combination with antigen. (See "Complement Pretesting" page 23.)

4. Hemolysin dilution:

a. Prepare 1:100 stock hemolysin dilution as follows:

Saline solution (0.85-percent)	94.0 ml.
Phenol (5-percent in saline)	4.0 ml.
Glycerinized hemolysin (50-percent)	2.0 ml.

Phenol solution should be mixed well with saline before glycerinized hemolysin is added. This solution keeps well at refrigerator temperature but should be discarded when found to contain precipitate.

b. Dilutions of hemolysin are prepared by further diluting aliquots of the 1:100 solution.

5. Preparation of sheep red cell suspension:

a. Filter an adequate quantity of preserved sheep blood into round-bottomed centrifuge tubes.

b. Add 10 to 15 volumes of saline to each tube.

c. Centrifuge tubes at a force sufficient to throw down cells within 5 minutes.

d. Remove supernatant fluid by suction through a capillary pipette, taking off upper white cell layer.

e. Pour cells into graduated centrifuge tube, resuspend in second portion of saline solution, and recentrifuge until constant cell volume is obtained. Usually 10 to 15 minutes at 2,000 to 2,500 r.p.m. will suffice.

f. Read the volume of packed cells in the centrifuge tube and carefully remove supernatant fluid.

g. Prepare a 3-percent suspension of sheep cells by washing them into a flask with a volume of saline calculated by use of the following formula:

$$\frac{\text{Volume of packed cells}}{3} \times 97 = \text{volume of saline required}$$

Example:

Volume of packed cells 3.3 ml.

$$\frac{3.3 \text{ ml.}}{3 \text{ ml.}} \times 97 = 106.7 \text{ ml. saline required.}$$

h. Place flask of cell suspension in refrigerator when not in use. Always shake flask before using to secure an even suspension of cells since the cells settle to the bottom of the flask when allowed to stand.

Qualitative Serum Tests

1. Arrange test tubes (13 x 100 mm.) in racks so that there are two tubes for each serum, including positive and negative control serums. Number first row of tubes to correspond to the serums being tested.

2. Pipette 0.2 ml. of saline into each tube of the first row.

3. Pipette 0.6 ml. of saline into each tube of the second row.

4. Add 0.2 ml. of heated serum to the two tubes of the test.

5. Add 0.4 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement serum to each tube.

Note: A 1:10 dilution of complement is prepared by adding 9 ml. of cold saline to each 1 ml. of complement serum.

6. Add 0.4 ml. of diluted antigen to each tube of the front row.

7. Mix the contents of the tubes by shaking the rack well, and place in the refrigerator at 6° to 8° C. for 3 to 4 hours.

8. Prepare antigen and cell control tubes as follows:

a. Antigen control tube:

0.85-percent saline	0.4 ml.
Antigen dilution	0.4 ml.
Complement, 1:10	0.4 ml.

b. Cell control tube:

Saline	1.2 ml.

9. Place antigen and cell control tubes in the refrigerator with the test proper.

10. Prepare four sets of complement control tubes in the following manner:

a. Arrange test tubes in a rack so that there are four sets of four tubes each, numbered from 1 to 4.

b. Pipette 0.4 ml. of saline into tubes numbered 1.
Pipette 0.6 ml. of saline into tubes numbered 2.
Pipette 0.7 ml. of saline into tubes numbered 3 and 4.

c. Add 0.4 ml. of diluted antigen to all tubes.

d. Add 0.4 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement to tubes numbered 1.
Add 0.2 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement to tubes numbered 2.
Add 0.13 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement to tubes numbered 3.
Add 0.1 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement to tubes numbered 4.

e. Mix the contents of the tubes by shaking the rack well and place in the refrigerator.

11. Perform hemolysin titration according to the following outline:

a. Place seven 13 x 100 mm. test tubes in a rack.

b. Prepare a 1:1200 dilution of hemolysin by pipetting 11 ml. of saline into a 25-ml. Erlenmeyer flask and adding 1 ml. of 1:100 stock hemolysin solution.

c. Prepare a series of hemolysin dilutions from the 1:1200 dilution as follows:

	Final dilution of hemolysin
	1:1200	1:1400	1:1600	1:2000	1:2400	1:3000	1:4000
1:1200 hemolysin, ml. . .	0.4	0.34	0.3	0.24	0.2	0.16	0.12
0.85 percent saline, ml. . .	None	0.06	0.1	0.16	0.2	0.24	0.28

d. Prepare a 1:25 dilution of complement by adding 0.2 ml. of guinea pig serum to 4.8 ml. of salt solution and add reagents to tubes as indicated in table 2.

Table 2.—Technic of hemolysin titration (1)

	Hemolysin dilution
	1:1200	1:1400	1:1600	1:2000	1:2400	1:3000	1:4000
	ml.	ml.	ml.	ml.	ml.	ml.	ml.
Hemolysin dilution . . .	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4
Complement, 1:25	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4
3-percent cell suspension .	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.4
0.85-percent saline . . .	0.8	0.8	0.8	0.8	0.8	0.8	0.8

e. Place rack in 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

f. Remove rack from water bath and read hemolysin titration.

The titer of hemolysin is the highest dilution that produces complete hemolysis.

12. Check hemolysin titration in the following manner:

a. Prepare three small lots of sensitized cells (about 8 to 12 ml.), by mixing equal parts of diluted hemolysin and 3-percent cell suspension. The three hemolysin titers used should bracket the observed titration point as follows:

Example: Observed titration equals 1:2000 dilution.
Therefore, sensitize cells with hemolysin diluted:
1:1600 (next lower titer).
1:2000 (observed titer).
1:2400 (next higher titer).

Volumes of dilute hemolysin and cell suspension that may be used in preparing the small quantities of sensitized cells required are presented in the following outline:

Titer	1:100 Stock hemolysin solution	0.85-percent saline	3-percent cell suspension
	ml.	ml.	ml.
1:1200	0.4	4.4	4.8
1:1400	0.3	3.9	4.2
1:1600	0.3	4.5	4.8
1:2000	0.2	3.8	4.0
1:2400	0.2	4.6	4.8
1:3000	0.2	5.8	6.0
1:4000	0.1	3.9	4.0

b. Remove three sets of complement controls from the refrigerator and place in the 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

c. Remove complement controls from the water bath, and add 0.8 ml. of each lot of sensitized cell suspension to each tube of one set of complement control tubes. Mix by shaking.

d. Place rack containing the three sets of complement control tubes in 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

e. Remove rack from water bath and observe degree of hemolysis.

Note: The first two tubes of the complement titration should be completely hemolyzed; tube 3 should be partially hemolyzed, and tube 4 should show little or no lysis. Any error in the hemolysin titration becomes immediately apparent. If the first tube only is completely hemolyzed, the cells have been inadequately sensitized, and more hemolysin should be added. If three tubes show complete lysis, an excess of hemolysin has been used.

f. Select as the correct hemolysin titer that dilution of hemolysin which is found to meet the above stated condition.

13. Prepare a sufficient quantity of sensitized cell suspension so that 0.8 ml. may be added to each tube of the serum tests and all remaining controls plus 0.4 ml. for each tube of the spinal fluid tests. Equal parts of hemolysin (diluted according to the verified titer) and of the 3-percent cell suspension, each contained in small beakers, are mixed by pouring back and forth several times. Volumes of dilute hemolysin and 3-percent cell suspension that may be used in preparing approximately 100 ml. of sensitized cells are illustrated in the following outline:

Final titer	1:100 Stock hemolysin solution	0.85-percent saline	3-percent cell suspension
	ml.	ml.	ml.
1:1200	4.0	44.0	48.0
1:1400	4.0	52.0	56.0
1:1600	3.0	45.0	48.0
1:2000	2.5	47.5	50.0
1:2400	2.0	46.0	48.0
1:3000	2.0	58.0	60.0
1:4000	1.5	58.5	60.0

14. Remove racks of serum tests, including the remaining set of complement control tubes and antigen and cell control tubes, from the refrigerator after the 3- to 4-hour period and place in the 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

15. Remove racks from water bath and add 0.8 ml. sensitized cell suspension to each tube.

16. Mix contents of the tubes thoroughly by shaking and return racks to the water bath for the final incubation of 20 to 30 minutes.

17. Observe the degree of hemolysis in the four tubes of the complement control set. Tubes 1 and 2 should show complete hemolysis, and tube 3 partial hemolysis, after 20 to 30 minutes at 37° C. water bath incubation. If tubes 1 and 2 require 20 minutes to clear, the racks of serum tests are read after 20 minutes of final incubation. If tubes 1 and 2 require 30 minutes to clear, the racks of serum are read after 30 minutes of final incubation. The antigen control should be completely hemolyzed. The cell control should show no hemolysis.

18. Remove each rack from the water bath at the end of the final incubation period. Record observed hemolysis and report as described under "Reading and Reporting."

Reading and Reporting

1. Observe the results of qualitative tests with serum or spinal fluid and report in accordance with the following outline:

Test tube reading (containing antigen)	Control tube reading (without antigen)	Report
Complete or almost complete hemolysis	Complete hemolysis	Negative.
Partial hemolysis	Complete hemolysis	Doubtful.
No hemolysis, or barely perceptible hemolysis	Complete hemolysis	Positive.
No hemolysis, or partial hemolysis	No hemolysis, or partial hemolysis	Anticomplementary.

Test Proper	Serum Control	Reading of Result
Complete lysis	Complete lysis	NEGATIVE
Partial lysis	Complete lysis	DOUBTFUL
No lysis	Complete lysis	POSITIVE
Partial lysis	Partial lysis	ANTICOMPLEMENTARY
No lysis	No lysis	ANTICOMPLEMENTARY

Qualitative Spinal Fluid Tests

1. Arrange test tubes (13 x 100 mm.) in racks so that there are two tubes for each spinal fluid, including positive and negative spinal fluid controls.

2. Pipette 0.2 ml. of saline into each tube of the first row. Pipette 0.4 ml. of saline into each tube of the second row.

3. Add 1.0 ml. of spinal fluid to the two tubes of the test.

4. Add 0.2 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement serum to each tube.

Note: A 1:10 dilution of complement is prepared by adding 9 ml. of cold saline to each 1 ml. of complement serum.

5. Add 0.2 ml. of diluted antigen to each tube of the first row.

6. Mix contents of tubes by shaking rack well and place in the refrigerator at 6° to 8° C. for 3 to 4 hours.

7. Complete the tests as described in "Qualitative Serum Tests" (page 16) except that 0.4 ml. of sensitized cell suspension is added to each tube of the spinal fluid tests instead of the 0.8 ml. prescribed for tests with serum.

8. Report observed results as outlined under "Reading and Reporting" (page 19).

Quantitative Tests With Serums or Spinal Fluids

Preparation of Serum or Spinal Fluid Dilutions

1. Place test tubes (13 x 100 mm.) in racks, allowing six tubes for each serum or spinal fluid to be tested. Include pairs of tubes for positive serum, negative serum, antigen and cell controls.[3]

[3] The following method for preparing serum and spinal fluid dilutions is preferred by Dr. Harry Eagle:

Serum: Place decreasing amounts of serum in a series of tubes, and bring the total volume number to 0.4 ml. with 0.85-percent saline, as indicated below:

						Control
Tube No.	1	2	3	4	5	6
Whole serum, ml.	0.2	0.1	.....	.....	.....	0.2
1:8 serum, ml.	.....	.....	0.4	0.2	0.1	.....
0.85-percent saline, ml.	0.2	0.3	.....	0.2	0.3	0.6
Final dilution	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	.....

Spinal fluid: Place decreasing amounts of spinal fluid in a series of tubes, and bring the total volume number to 1 ml. with 0.85-percent saline, as indicated below:

						Control
Tube No.	1	2	3	4	5	6
Spinal fluid, ml.	1.0	0.5	0.25	.....	.....	1.0
1:8 spinal fluid, ml.	.....	.....	.....	1.0	0.5	.....
0.85-percent saline, ml.	.....	0.5	0.75	.....	0.5	0.2
Final dilution	1:1	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	.....

2. Pipette 0.6 ml. of saline into tube 1, and 0.4 ml. into tubes 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 for each serum.

3. Pipette 1 ml. of saline into tubes 2, 3, 4, and 5, and 0.2 ml. into tube 6 for each spinal fluid.

4. For each serum:
   Add 0.6 ml. heated serum to tube 1.
   Mix and transfer 0.4 ml. to tube 6 (serum control) and to tube 2.
   Mix tube 2 and transfer 0.4 ml. to tube 3.
   Mix tube 3 and transfer 0.4 ml. to tube 4.
   Mix tube 4 and transfer 0.4 ml. to tube 5.
   Mix tube 5 and discard 0.4 ml.

5. For each spinal fluid:
   Add 1.0 ml. of spinal fluid to tubes 1, 2, and 6.
   Mix tube 2 and transfer 1.0 ml. to tube 3.
   Mix tube 3 and transfer 1.0 ml. to tube 4.
   Mix tube 4 and transfer 1.0 ml. to tube 5.
   Mix tube 5 and discard 1.0 ml.

Testing Procedures

1. Add 0.4 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement serum to each of the six tubes of the serum tests (containing diluted serum).

Note: A 1:10 dilution of complement is prepared by adding 9 ml. of cold saline to each 1 ml. of complement serum.

2. Add 0.2 ml. of 1:10 dilution of complement serum to each of the six tubes of the spinal fluid tests (containing diluted spinal fluid).

3. Add 0.4 ml. of diluted antigen to each of the first five tubes of the serum tests.

4. Add 0.2 ml. of diluted antigen to each of the first five tubes of the spinal fluid tests.

5. Mix contents of tubes by shaking the rack well and place in the refrigerator at 6° to 8° C. for 3 to 4 hours, and then at 37° C. for 30 minutes.

6. Add 0.4 ml. of sensitized cell suspension to each tube of the spinal fluid tests and 0.8 ml. of sensitized cell suspension to each tube of the serum tests and complete the tests as described under "Qualitative Serum Tests" (page 16).

7. Results are reported in terms of the highest dilution of serum or spinal fluid that produces a positive reaction.

Complement Pretesting

It is essential to pretest individual complement serums to insure that they are not inactivated by antigen under the conditions of the complement-fixation test (2). This may be carried out as described in table 3.

Table 3.—Method of preselection of complement (2)

	Hemolytic activity of complement after incubation without antigen under conditions of test				Hemolytic activity of complement after incubation with antigen under conditions of test

Preparation of Eagle Complement-Fixation Test Antigen

A cholesterolized alcoholic extract of beef heart muscle is employed. Powdered beef heart[4] may be used.

1. Weigh 50 gm. of beef heart powder and transfer to a 500-ml. glass-stoppered Erlenmeyer flask.

2. Add 250 ml. pure anesthetic ether (5 ml. per gram powder) and incubate for 15 minutes at 30° to 37° C. with frequent shaking.

[4] Obtainable from the Difco Laboratories, Inc., Detroit, Mich.

3. Filter through fat-free filter paper with suction. Discard this and all other ether extractions.

4. Add 250 ml. pure anesthetic ether to the moist powder and repeat extraction as before.

5. Repeat ether extraction for a total of four times.

6. Wash beef heart powder with 100 ml. of fresh anesthetic ether while the powder is in the filter funnel.

7. Remove powder from funnel and allow to dry at room temperature until free of ether.

8. Place powder in ether-free, glass-stoppered Erlenmeyer flask and add 5 ml. absolute alcohol per gram of powder. Note the quantity of alcohol employed.

9. Extract beef heart powder for 5 days at room temperature while stored in a dark place.

10. Filter alcoholic extract through fat-free filter paper.

11. Wash powder in the filter funnel with small portions of fresh alcohol until the volume of the combined alcoholic filtrate and washings is equal to the quantity of alcohol originally used for extraction.

12. Add 0.6 mg. of cholesterol to every milliliter of alcoholic extract.

13. Warm antigen (cholesterolized alcohol extract) in a 56° C. water bath until the cholesterol is in solution. This antigen should be stored at room temperature.

Tests for Anticomplementary and Hemolytic Activities of Antigen

Each lot of antigen should be tested once for its anticomplementary and hemolytic activities, to insure that these undesirable properties are not so pronounced as to interfere with its use in the test.

1. Anticomplementary titration of antigen

   a. Prepare dilutions of antigen in the following manner:

Final dilution of antigen	1:1	1:2	1:3	1:4	1:6	1:8	1:12
Antigen, ml.	0.4	0.2	0.13	0.1	0.07	0.05	0.035
0.85-percent saline, ml.	none	0.2	0.27	0.3	0.33	0.35	0.37

   b. Complete test as indicated in table 4.

   c. Conclusion: In this example (table 4), antigen is not anticomplementary in greater than 1:6 dilution.

c. Conclusion: In this example (table 5) antigen is not significantly hemolytic.

Determination of Antigen Titer

The optimum dilution of antigen need be determined only once with each lot of antigen.

1. Prepare 1:40 antigen dilution by slowly pouring 39 ml. 0.85-percent saline solution into a flask containing 1 ml. of antigen. Then prepare dilutions of antigen according to the following outline:

Final dilution of antigen	1:40	1:80	1:100	1:120	1:160	1:200
1:40 antigen dilution, ml.	8.0	4.0	3.2	2.7	2.0	1.6
0.85-percent saline, ml.	None.	4.0	4.8	5.3	6.0	6.4

2. Prepare dilutions of a heated, strongly positive serum according to the following outline:

Final dilution of serum	1:1	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
Serum, ml.	4.0	2.0	1.0	0.5	0.25	0.125	0.062
0.85-percent saline, ml.	None.	2.0	3.0	3.5	3.75	3.9	4.0

3. Perform the titration as outlined in table 6. Recordings illustrate a typical titration result.

Table 6.—Determination of optimum antigen dilution.

Antigen dilution	Result of the complement-fixation test on serum diluted with salt solution
	1:1	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64	1:128
1:40	[1]+	+	+	[2]±	[3]—	—	—	—
1:80	+	+	+	+	±	—	—	—
1:100	+	+	+	+	+	—	—	—
1:120	+	+	+	+	+	±	—	—
1:160	+	+	+	+	+	±	—	—
1:200	+	+	+	+	+	—	—	—

[1] + = positive (no hemolysis).
[2] ± = doubtful (partial hemolysis).
[3] — = negative (complete hemolysis).

4. The most reactive dilution is considered the optimum antigen dilution. The example shown in table 6 indicates that the antigen tested was most reactive in dilutions of 1:120 or 1:160. In preparing the antigen for daily use in the test, the correct volume of salt solution is slowly poured into one volume of antigen. The antigen dilution should be opalescent and homogeneous, containing no visible granules.

HINTON TESTS

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Kahn shaking machine (275 to 285 oscillations per minute, with 1½-inch stroke).
2. Maximum-minimum thermometer.

Glassware

1. Test tubes,[1] 100 x 11¼ mm. outside diameter (O.D.).
2. Flasks, Erlenmeyer, 125-ml. or 250-ml., with inverted V-shaped ridge in bottom that produces two semicircular compartments (Hinton flasks).

Reagents

1. Hinton Indicator. (See "Preparation of Glycerinated Hinton Indicator (Regular)," page 28.)

2. 5-percent sodium chloride solution:

a. Weigh 5 gm. of previously dried sodium chloride (A.C.S.).

b. Add sodium chloride to 100 ml. of freshly distilled water and heat solution in an autoclave at 15 pounds' pressure for 15 minutes.

c. Store salt solution in glass-stoppered bottles at room temperature.

3. 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution:

a. Add the required amount (8.5 gm. to each liter) of dried sodium chloride to freshly distilled water. This solution need not be heated and should be prepared on the day used.

4. 50-percent solution of glycerine:

a. Mix equal volumes of Baker and Adamson's glycerine (reagent) and distilled water. This solution keeps indefinitely.

Preparation of Serum

1. Remove serums from clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat the serums in the 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes. Serums should not be heated before the day of testing. If it is necessary to retest a specimen, use serum freshly separated from the clot, if available.

3. Recentrifuge any specimen in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Preparation of Glycerinated Hinton Indicator (Regular)

1. Pipette one part of Hinton indicator into one compartment of a Hinton flask.

Note: Not less than 1 ml. nor more than 5 ml. of Hinton indicator should be mixed at one time.

2. Pipette 0.8 part of 5-percent sodium chloride solution into the other compartment of the flask. Care should be used in pipetting the salt solution into the flask in order to avoid premature mixing of the solutions.

3. Mix contents by shaking the flask very rapidly from side to side for exactly 1 minute.

4. Let the mixture stand exactly 5 minutes.

5. Add 13.2 parts of 5-percent sodium chloride solution and shake flask vigorously.

6. Add 15 parts of 50-percent glycerine solution and shake flask until the suspension is homogeneous.

7. Store in a glass-stoppered bottle or flask in the refrigerator. This suspension, referred to as glycerinated indicator solution, remains usable for at least 3 weeks.

Standard Hinton Tests With Serum

1. Arrange test tubes (100 x 11¼ mm. O. D.) in suitable racks so that there is one tube for each serum to be tested and for positive and negative serum controls. Number tubes to correspond to the identifying numbers of serums.

2. Pipette 0.5 ml. of each heated serum into its corresponding tube.

Note: Occasionally very strongly positive serums will elicit a negative reaction when 0.5 ml. of serum is employed as the testing quantity. When this type of reaction is suspected, 0.1 ml. serum should also be tested in addition to the 0.5-ml. quantity of serum.

3. Pipette 0.5 ml. of the glycerinated Hinton indicator into each serum tube.

Note: Flask containing glycerinated Hinton indicator should be shaken when taken from refrigerator. Remove quantity of glycerinated indicator needed and return flask to cold storage immediately.

4. Shake racks of tubes by hand until visual inspection indicates that serums and glycerinated indicator are well mixed.

5. Shake rack of tubes on Kahn shaking machine for 5 minutes.

6. Remove the rack from the shaking machine and place in 37° C. water bath for 16 hours.

Note: The water bath must be uncovered during this period. The bath should be equipped with maximum and minimum thermometers, and the temperature should not fall below 34° C. nor rise above 39° C. for reliable tests.

Reading and Reporting

1. Place a shaded cylindrical fluorescent (daylight) lamp 18 or more inches long in front of a darkened background. The lamp tube should be slightly above the level of the eyes.

2. Remove each tube from the rack carefully without disturbing contents.

3. Hold the tube at a 45° angle, at eye level, close to lamp shade.

4. Look for clarification of the fluid and for presence or absence of a ring of white flakes or white coarse granules at the meniscus.

5. Lift the tilted tube slightly above eye level and look through it towards the darkened background to determine the presence or absence of flocculation.

6. Report findings as follows:

Positive . . . . . White flakes or white coarse granules at the meniscus, and definite flocculation when tubes are gently shaken.

Negative . . . . . Absence of ring or band of floccules, and no flocculation or granularity when tubes are gently shaken. Hemolyzed or bacterially contaminated serums frequently produce a whitish ring which is strongly adherent to the tube.

7. Centrifuge all tubes in which clear-cut negative or positive readings cannot be made at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

8. Remove tubes from centrifuge and read reactions as previously described.

9. Report findings as follows:

Doubtful . . . . . Those reactions demonstrating coarse granulation at the meniscus, and definite flocculation when tubes are gently shaken.

Negative . . . . . All specimens failing to react as described under "Doubtful" above.

10. Report those specimens as "unsatisfactory" which are hemolyzed or bacterially contaminated, unless the reaction is strongly positive.

Rapid Hinton Test With Serum

1. Heat fresh serum for 3 minutes at 60° C.

2. Arrange test tubes (100 x 11¼ mm. O.D.) in suitable racks so that there is one tube for each serum to be tested and for positive and negative serum controls.

3. Pipette 0.5 ml. of serum to be tested into properly numbered test tubes.

4. Add 0.5 ml. of glycerinated indicator to each serum tube and shake on shaking machine for 10 minutes, after preliminary hand shaking, to mix contents of tubes.

5. Remove rack of tubes from shaking machine and place in the 37° C. water bath for 20 minutes.

6. Remove tubes from water bath and centrifuge at 2,000 r.p.m. for 10 minutes.

7. Remove tubes from centrifuge without agitating contents.

8. Read each tube as described under "Reading and Reporting" (page 29).

9. Report observed results as follows:

Positive	Plainly visible flakes at the meniscus, and well-marked flocculation when tubes are gently shaken.
Negative	Absence of ring or band of floccules at the meniscus, and no flocculation when tubes are gently shaken.
Unsatisfactory . .	Those specimens hemolyzed or bacterially contaminated, unless the reaction is strongly positive.

Note: Results may be checked by placing the tubes in the refrigerator until they can be placed in a 37° C. water bath for 16 hours and then reread.

Quantitative Hinton Test

Preparation of Serum Dilutions

Note: Negative serum is used as a diluent. This may be pooled from the previous day's testing. However, if a considerable number of quantitative tests are to be done, it is desirable to use Seitz-filtered negative serum which has been merthiolated with a 1:500 solution of merthiolate at the rate of 5 ml. per 100 ml. of the pooled serum.

1. Set up a row of dilution tubes (100 x 11¼ mm. O. D.) numbered from 2 to 10, and add 1.5 ml. of negative serum to tube 2, 1 ml. to tubes 3, 4, and 5, 0.5 ml. to tubes 6, 7, 8, and 9, and 1 ml. to tube 10.

2. Add 1.0 ml. of the patient's serum to tube 2.

3. Mix and transfer 1.0 ml. from tube 2 to tube 3. Continue this procedure through tube 10. This results in the following approximate dilutions: 1:2.5, 1:5, 1:10, 1:20, 1:30, 1:45, 1:67, 1:100, 1:200.

4. Set up a series of six testing tubes (100 x 11¼ mm. O. D.) numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 10, and pipette 0.5 ml. of the patient's serum into tube 1.

5. Transfer 0.5 ml. diluted serum from dilution tubes 2, 3, 4, 5, and 10 to testing tubes of the same number. As dilution tubes 6, 7, 8, and 9 contain only 0.5 ml. of diluted serum, they become a part of the testing tube series completing the sequence from 1 to 10.

6. Add 0.5 ml. glycerinated indicator to each tube and shake by hand to insure adequate mixing of serum and indicator.

7. Shake rack of tubes on Kahn shaking machine for 5 minutes.

8. Place rack of tubes in uncovered, 37° C. water bath for 16 hours.

9. Read reactions as described under "Reading and Reporting" (page 29).

10. Report results in terms of the greatest serum dilution that produces a positive reaction, i.e., positive in 1:8 dilution, positive in 1:16 dilution, etc.

Preparation of Stock Indicator From Beef Heart Powder

A cholesterolized alcoholic extract of dehydrated beef heart [2] is employed.

1. Weight 100 gm. of beef heart powder and transfer to a 1-liter glass-stoppered Erlenmeyer flask.

2. Add 400 ml. pure anesthetic ether and shake thoroughly by hand for 10 minutes.

3. Allow powder to settle, then pour off ether through filter paper, discarding this and all subsequent ether extractions.

4. Scrape moist powder from filter paper and return to original flask.

Note: Do not allow main portion of extracted tissue to dry between extractions.

5. Add 400 ml. anesthetic ether to the moist powder and repeat extractions as before.

6. Repeat ether extractions for a total of five times.

7. Remove powder from flask, dry at room temperature until ether-free, and weigh.

8. Place dry powder in a glass-stoppered bottle and add 95-percent ethyl alcohol (5 ml. of alcohol for each gram of powder).

9. Extract for 3 days at room temperature, shaking contents of flask vigorously by hand three times each day.

10. Filter alcoholic extract through fat-free paper into a glass-stoppered flask.

11. Add 0.4 gm. of cholesterol (Merck's C.P.) to every 100 ml. of alcoholic extract.

12. Warm cholesterolized alcoholic extract in a 37° C. water bath until the cholesterol is in solution. This solution is referred to as stock indicator and should be stored at room temperature.

13. Stock indicator should be tested against an indicator found to be wholly satisfactory as determined by both clinical and serologic means.

[2] Obtainable from Difco Laboratories, Detroit, Mich.

Note: Occasionally, adjustment of the lipoidal concentration is necessary for the preparation of a satisfactory stock indicator. A procedure has been described whereby lipoidal concentration can be changed as may be required (1).

Qualitative and Quantitative Tests With Cardiolipin-Lecithin Indicator

1. Glycerinated indicator is prepared from stock indicator, containing cardiolipin and purified lecithin, in the same manner as described for stock indicator made from powdered beef heart.

2. Tests are performed and results read and reported as described for the regular Hinton indicator.

Preparation of Stock Indicator From Cardiolipin and Lecithin

Indicator for the Hinton tests may be prepared from alcoholic solutions of cardiolipin, lecithin, and cholesterol. It has been stated (2) that best results were obtained with an indicator containing 0.7 ml. of cardiolipin solution (8.92 mg. per milliliter), 1.0 ml. of lecithin solution (30.91 mg. per milliliter) and 2.5 ml. of cholesterol solution (4.0 mg. per milliliter).

The following statement was recently received from Dr. W. A. Hinton:

"Stock Hinton indicators have been prepared from cardiolipin and lecithin manufactured according to the direction of Pangborn, and the tests performed with these indicators thus far have been more accurate than those performed with indicators made from extracts of beef heart. Our experience has been confined to the use of three batches of lecithin and cardiolipin prepared in Dr. Pangborn's laboratory and one batch prepared in a commercial laboratory. Until cardiolipin and lecithin of specified concentration and potency are obtainable commercially, it will be impossible to give a brief description of how to adjust the amounts of these substances for optimum results."

Davies-Hinton Tests

Davies-Hinton Flocculation Test for Spinal Fluid

Reagents

1. Glycerinated Hinton indicator (see "Preparation of Glycerinated Hinton Indicator" page 28).

2. 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution:

a. (See "Reagents for Hinton tests" page 27).

3. 3.0-percent sodium chloride solution. Add the required amount (3 gm. to each 100 ml.) of dry sodium chloride to freshly distilled water. This solution should be prepared on the day used.

4. Hinton negative human serum:

a. Select one or more clear Hinton-negative serums and retest in accordance with the "Rapid Hinton Test with Serum" technic (page 29), employing the following two indicated quantities:

Tube 1: 0.5 ml. serum and 0.5 ml. glycerinated Hinton indicator.
Tube 2: 0.1 ml. serum and 0.5 ml. glycerinated Hinton indicator.

Note: When large numbers of spinal fluids are tested, it is convenient to pool Seitz filter and merthiolate (1:10,000) serums and then to perform rapid Hinton tests as above. Store tested serum at 8° to 10° C. for not more than 3 weeks. Avoid the use of cloudy serum.

5. Gum acacia, 20-percent solution:

a. Place 20 gm. of white, powdered gum acacia (U.S.P.) in a 4-ounce bottle.[3]

b. Add 100 ml. of 3-percent salt solution.

c. Place bakelite cap on bottle loosely (do not screw cap on).

d. Place bottle in the autoclave and heat at 15 pounds' pressure for 15 minutes.

e. Remove bottles from autoclave, screw cap on tightly, shake well to completely dissolve the acacia, and maintain in a sterile condition.

Preliminary Test of Hinton Negative Serum and Gum Acacia Solution

1. For every 10 spinal fluids to be tested mix 5 ml. Hinton negative serum with 5 ml. 20-percent gum acacia solution.

2. Perform a rapid test as follows:

a. Into a test tube (100 x 11¼ mm. O.D.) pipette 0.6 ml. of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution, 0.2 ml. of freshly mixed acacia-serum mixture, 0.2 ml. glycerinated Hinton indicator, and mix well by shaking.

b. Place tube in a 37° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

c. Centrifuge tube at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

d. A satisfactory acacia-serum mixture yields a negative reaction.

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

Centrifuge and decant spinal fluid. Fluids which are visibly contaminated with bacteria are unsatisfactory for testing. A bloody spinal fluid may be tested after being cleared by centrifuging but should be reported as unsatisfactory for testing if a positive reaction is produced.

---

[3] Flint-glass bottles with bakelite screw caps and vinylite liners are satisfactory.

Spinal Fluid Flocculation Test

1. Arrange test tubes (100 x 11¼ mm. O.D.) in racks so that there are 4 tubes (one behind the other) for each spinal fluid to be tested and for positive and negative spinal fluid controls. Number tubes to correspond to the identifying number of each fluid.

2. Pipette 0.6 ml. of each spinal fluid into the correspondingly numbered tube in the first row, 0.4 ml. into the tube in the second row, 0.2 ml. into the tube in the third row, and 0.1 ml. into the tube in the last row.

3. Add 0.2 ml. of acacia-serum mixture to every tube.

4. Add 0.2 ml. of glycerinated Hinton indicator to every tube.

5. Shake racks of tubes vigorously until contents become completely homogeneous.

6. Place racks of tubes in a 37° C. water bath for 16 hours.

7. Remove all tubes from water bath and centrifuge at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

Reading and Reporting

1. Remove tubes from centrifuge gently, without disturbing contents.

2. Before a suitable artificial light (see "Reading and Reporting" of Hinton tests, page 29), tap each tube gently at the base while holding it near the top.

3. Report as positive all spinal fluids that show definite floccules, dispersing downward from the meniscus, in any of the four tubes.

4. Recentrifuge all other tubes at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

5. Remove tubes from the centrifuge and reexamine with tapping as previ ously described.

6. Report as follows:

Positive	Definite floccules dispersed downward from the meniscus in one or more of the four tubes.
Doubtful	Questionable flocculation in any tube.
Negative	Absence of flocculation and a ground-glass appearance in all tubes.

Davies-Hinton Microflocculation Test

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Rubber caps.[1]
2. Rubber bulbs, for capillary pipette.

---

[1] Listed as No. 3 vial stoppers in No. 68 stock by West Co., 1117 Shakamaxon Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Glassware

1. Glass tubes, 80 x 2.5 mm. inside diameter.

2. Capillary pipette (10 x 1 cm. diameter, with capillary pipette approximately 1 mm. in diameter).

Preparation of Serum

1. Collect blood in glass tubes (80 x 2.5 mm.).

2. Remove cap from one end of tube and use a wire to loosen clot from side of tube.

3. Place capped blood-collection tube into a labeled 13 x 100 mm. test tube and centrifuge at high speed for 10 minutes. Recentrifuge if serum is not well separated.

4. Add water to 13 x 100 mm. test tubes containing capped blood-collection tubes (clot downward) and place in 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes.

5. Remove tubes from water bath and discard water from test tubes.

6. Remove cap from serum end of collection tube and notch tube with a glass file just above junction of clot and serum.

7. Hold the collection tube horizontally, break it, and discard part of tube containing clot.

Test Procedure

1. Transfer each serum to two glass (80 x 2.5 mm.) collection tubes. One tube should contain a column of serum about 2.5 cm. in length and the other a column 0.5 cm. to 1.0 cm. long.

2. Add to the tube containing the 2.5-cm. column an amount of glycerinated Hinton indicator equal to the amount of serum in the tube. Use capillary pipette for indicator. Care should be taken not to allow air to separate serum and indicator.

3. Add an amount of glycerinated Hinton indicator equal to approximately five times the amount of serum contained in the second tube (0.5-cm. to 1.0-cm. column of serum).

4. Mix the serum and Hinton indicator in each tube by tilting the liquid toward alternate ends of the tube 10 times.

5. Cap both ends of the two collection tubes and place them in test tubes (13 x 100 mm.) that are identically numbered.

6. Fill test tubes containing capped collection tubes with water and place in 37° C. water bath for 16 hours.

7. Remove tubes from water bath, pour water from test tubes, and centrifuge test tubes containing capped collection tubes for 5 minutes at approximately 2,000 r.p.m.

Reading and Reporting

1. Read results under the low-power objective of the microscope, with only enough light so that aggregates at the meniscus are readily visible. The stage of the microscope should be tilted approximately 30° from horizontal and the tube should be placed under the lens with the meniscus uppermost.

2. Observe the degree of clumping, if any, at the meniscus, and report results as follows:

Positive	Definite, discrete, compact clumps at the meniscus in either tube. (Gentle thumping of the tube may help float clumps into view.)
Negative	No clumps visible in either tube. Amorphous, cloudy, granular particles at the meniscus are also interpreted as negative.
Doubtful	Few small clumps at the meniscus of either tube. In such instances, clumps should be redispersed by thumping the tube with a finger and the tube recentrifuged for 3 minutes. The test is reported doubtful if small clumps are again visible at the meniscus, but positive if large, compact clumps are then present in either tube.

KAHN TESTS

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Kahn test tube racks.
2. Vial racks.
3. Kahn shaking machine (275 to 285 oscillations per minute, with 1½-inch stroke).
4. Microscope mirror.
5. Fluorescent lamp (adjustable).
6. Gooseneck-type lamp with blue inside-frosted bulb.

Glassware

1. Test tubes, Kahn, 75 x 12 mm. outside diameter.
2. Pipettes, Kahn, to deliver 0.25 ml. graduated in 0.0125 ml. for antigen suspension.
3. Pipettes, 1.0 ml. graduated in 0.01 ml.
4. Vials, Kahn antigen suspension, with flat bottom, 55 x 15 mm. inside diameter.

Reagents

1. Kahn standard antigen. (See "Preparation of Kahn Standard Antigen" page 54.):

a. The antigen should be stored at room temperature in the dark. The antigen bottle in daily use may be kept in a mailing container to avoid exposure to light.

b. The antigen should not come into contact with rubber or cork because both contain alcohol-soluble elements which affect specificity. Stoppers should be covered with high-grade tinfoil or vinylite.

c. Changes in antigen due to aging are generally reflected in the appearance of negative reactions; if these reactions become too sharply clear or if they become cloudy, the antigen should be retitrated and restandardized.

2. Kahn Sensitized Antigen. (See "preparation of Kahn sensitized antigen" page 45.)

3. Saline solution:

a. Weigh 9.0 gm. of dried, chemically pure sodium chloride (reagent quality) for each liter of saline solution. The salt may be weighed and dispensed into corked tubes to avoid daily weighing.

b. Dissolve salt in freshly distilled water. Shake solution thoroughly to assure complete mixing. Filter and store in stoppered flasks.

Preparation of Serums

1. Remove serums from clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serums in 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes. After removal from the water bath, serums should be allowed to remain at room temperature for at least 10 minutes so that all specimens will return to room temperature before being tested. When reexamination of the specimen is required, the serum is reheated for 10 minutes if retesting is accomplished within 2 to 24 hours of the initial heating period, or for 15 minutes if the retesting is accomplished more than 24 hours after the initial heating period.

3. Recentrifuge any specimen in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test With Serum

1. Arrange test tubes in standard Kahn racks so that there are three tubes for each serum to be tested, including positive serum, negative serum, and saline controls. Number the first row of tubes to correspond to the serums being tested.

2. Prepare standard antigen suspension as follows:

a. Measure into an antigen suspension vial the amount of saline, according to titer, required for the given amount of antigen.

Note: The titer on the bottle of the antigen will state the amount of saline that must be mixed with 1 ml. of antigen in order to produce a suspension of standard reactivity. Usually 1 ml. of antigen makes sufficient suspension for 20 tests. Less than 1 ml. or more than 2 ml. of antigen should not be measured in one mixing vial.

b. Measure into a second antigen suspension vial the necessary quantity of antigen.

c. Pour the saline into the antigen, and without stopping, pour the mixture back and forth 12 times, without allowing vials to drain during mixing period.

d. Allow the antigen suspension to stand for 10 minutes before using. The suspension is not to be used after standing more than 30 minutes from the time of mixing.

3. Place thumb over mouth of mixing vial and shake gently to suspend antigen particles.

4. Pipette 0.05 ml. of antigen suspension directly to the bottom of each tube of the front row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

5. Pipette 0.025 ml. of antigen suspension directly to the bottom of each tube of the middle row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

6. Pipette 0.0125 ml. of antigen suspension directly to the bottom of each tube of the back row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

7. Add 0.15 ml. of each serum to the designated set of three tubes containing 0.05 ml., 0.025 ml., and 0.0125 ml. of antigen suspension respectively.

Note: Complete the addition of antigen suspension and serums to one rack before adding antigen suspension and serums to another rack.

8. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds, after antigen suspension and serum have been added to all tubes in that rack.

9. Permit serum-antigen suspension mixture to stand for 3 to 7 minutes at room temperature.

10. Shake rack of tubes for 3 minutes in Kahn shaking machine.

11. Remove rack from shaking machine. Add 1.0 ml. of saline to each tube of the front row, and 0.5 ml. of saline to each tube of the middle and back rows.

Note: Add saline to one rack and complete reading before adding saline to another rack.

12. Shake rack by hand gently for a few seconds to mix contents of tubes.

13. Read each tube of the rack immediately after the addition of saline. (See "Reading of Results" and "Reporting Results" page 40.)

14. Reread each tube 15 minutes after the first reading was taken, in all instances where a negative reaction was not obtained on the first reading.

Table 1.—Outline of standard (qualitative) Kahn test with serum

Reading of Results

Method of Reading by Window Light

1. Have but one source of light coming from a single window, directly in front of the reader.

2. Shade the upper and lower portions of the window, limiting source o light to a narrow section.

3. Dim other sources of light in the room.

4. Hold rack in front of the exposed section of window.

5. Differentiate positive and negative reactions by the clear opalescence o the negatives and by turbidity or clouding of the positives and, in the cas of strong positives, by the presence of floccules.

6. Lift each tube showing any degree of turbidity or clouding several inche above the eye level and slant it to a nearly horizontal position in order t spread the fluid into a thin layer.

7. Note size and number of visible floccules.

Method of Reading by Microscope Mirror (Recommended)

1. Place a microscope mirror flat on the work bench with the concave sid upward.

2. Adjust a reading lamp (daylight bulb or fluorescent tube) above the mir ror so that the bulb image is not visible but so that the tube can be held withi cone of light.

3. Place each tube to be read in a slantwise position with the lower portio of tube about 1 to 2 inches above the mirror.

4. View the image of tube contents in the mirror and note degree of floccu lation.

Recording Results

Record degrees of flocculation in accordance with the following outline:

4+	Relatively large floccules suspended in a clear medium.
3+	Medium-sized floccules suspended in a clear or very slightly cloudy medium.
2+	Fine floccules easily distinguishable in a somewhat cloudy medium.
1+	Very fine floccules distinguishable in a somewhat cloudy medium.
±	Extremely fine floccules just distinguishable in a somewhat cloudy medium.
Negative . . .	An opalescent medium free from visible particles.

Reporting Results

1. Report test results as positive, doubtful, or negative as illustrated in fo lowing tables.

2. In all reactions where the greatest degree of flocculation is produced b the lesser amounts of antigen suspension (tubes 2 and 3) the following scheme of reporting may be used:

Sum of pluses in 6 tube-readings [1]	Report
22 to 24	Positive (4+).
16 to 21	Positive (3+).
10 to 15	Positive (2+).
5 to 9	Doubtful (1+).
4	Doubtful (±).
3 or fewer	Negative.

[1] ± tube readings are disregarded.

3. The manner of reporting other types of reactions is described in tables 2 to 8.

Supplementary Kahn Tests With Serum

Supplementary Test No. 1

1. Pipette 0.025 ml. antigen suspension (see "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum," paragraph 2, page 38) to the bottom of each of two tubes (numbered 1 and 2).

2. Add 0.025 ml. serum (previously heated) to tube 1 and 0.05 ml. serum to tube 2.

3. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds to mix contents of tubes. Allow to stand 3 to 7 minutes.

4. Shake rack on Kahn shaker for 3 minutes.

5. Remove rack from shaker, add 0.3 ml. saline to each tube, and shake to mix.

6. Read immediately as described under "Reading of Results" (page 40). A 2+, 3+, or 4+ reaction in either tube is considered a positive reaction.

Supplementary Test No. 2

1. Prepare serum dilutions 1:5, 1:10, and 1:20 in the following manner:

a. Pipette into 3 tubes (numbered 1, 2, and 3) 0.8, 0.5, and 0.5 ml. of saline, respectively.

b. Add 0.2 ml. serum to tube 1 and mix.

c. Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 1 to tube 2 and mix.

d. Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 2 to tube 3 and mix.

2. Pipette 0.01 ml. antigen suspension (see "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum," paragraph 2, page 38) to the bottom of three Kahn tubes (numbered 1, 2, and 3).

3. Add 0.15 ml. of the 1:5, 1:10, 1:20 dilutions of serum to tubes 1, 2, and 3, respectively.

4. Shake rack by hand 10 seconds to mix contents of tubes. Allow to stand 3 to 7 minutes.

5. Shake rack in Kahn shaker for 3 minutes.

6. Remove rack from shaker, add 0.5 ml. saline to each tube, and shake to mix.

7. Read immediately as described under "Reading of Results" (page 40). A 2+, 3+, or 4+ reaction in any of the three tubes is considered a positive reaction.

829688°—49—4

Control System for the Standard Kahn Test

1. Positive serum, negative serum, and saline controls should be tested with each antigen suspension.

2. Results obtained with serums or spinal fluids should not be reported if typically positive and negative reactions are not produced by the three control fluids. Failure to obtain negative reactions with negative serum and saline or positive reactions with the positive serum control may be caused by (1) improperly prepared saline, (2) unsatisfactory antigen, (3) incorrectly prepared antigen suspension, or (4) by using antigen suspension more than 30 minutes old. Ideally the control tests should be included at the end of each set of tests.

Quantitative Kahn Test With Serum

1. Prepare serum dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, 1:32, 1:64, and higher if necessary, in the following manner:

a. Pipette into each of six (or more) tubes, 0.5 ml. of 0.9 percent salt solution.

b. Add 0.5 ml. of heated serum to the first tube and mix.

c. Transfer 0.5 ml. from the first to the second tube and mix.

d. Continue transferring and mixing from one tube to the next until all dilutions have been made. Allow the mixing pipette to remain in the last tube.

Note: Serum dilutions should be employed in the test soon after they have been prepared.

2. Prepare antigen suspension as previously described by mixing standard Kahn antigen with 0.9-percent salt solution.

3. After the antigen suspension has stood 10 minutes (but not more than 30 minutes), place the thumb over the mouth of the mixing vial containing the suspension and shake gently to obtain a smooth suspension of antigen particles.

4. Pipette 0.01 ml. antigen suspension to the bottom of six (or more) numbered Kahn tubes.

5. Add 0.15 ml. of the 1:64 dilution of serum to the antigen suspension contained in tube 6.

6. Add 0.15 ml. of the 1:32 dilution of serum to the antigen suspension contained in tube 5.

7. Continue addition of 0.15 ml. of decreasing dilutions of the serum to tubes 4, 3, 2, and 1 respectively.

8. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds and then allow to stand 3 to 7 minutes.

9. Shake rack in the mechanical shaker 3 minutes.

10. Remove the rack from the shaking machine, and add 0.5 ml. of 0.9-percent salt solution to each tube.

Note: Add saline to one rack and complete reading before adding saline to another rack.

11. Shake rack by hand a few seconds to mix contents of tubes.

12. Read each tube of the rack immediately after the addition of 0.9-percent salt solution.

13. Note the titration end point, i.e., the highest dilution of serum in which 4+, 3+, or 2+ reactions are observed.

14. Compute the quantitative titer by applying the formula S=4D, where S is the potency of the serum in terms of Kahn units and D is the highest dilution demonstrating definite flocculation.

Examples:

a. Highest dilution demonstrating definite flocculation is 1:64. S=4 × 64 or 256 Kahn units.

b. Highest dilution demonstrating definite flocculation is 1:16. S=4 ×16 or 64 Kahn units.

15. Reports of 3 units, 2 units, and 1 unit are given as quantitative test results when only negative reactions are obtained by the quantitative procedure on serums producing 3+, 2+, or 1+ reactions, respectively, in the qualitative Kahn test.

Note: It has been the practice in U. S. Public Health Service laboratories to quantitate only those serums producing 4+ reactions in the qualitative Kahn test.

Dr. Kahn recommends that quantitative tests be performed on serums producing 3+ or 4+ reactions in the qualitative test.

Presumptive Kahn Test With Serum

Performance of the Presumptive Kahn Test With Serum

1. Arrange Kahn test tubes in a rack so that there is one tube for each serum to be tested, including positive serum, negative serum, and saline controls. Number tubes to correspond to the serums being tested.

2. Prepare a sensitized antigen suspension as follows:

a. Measure into a glass mixing vial the proper amount of saline required to prepare sensitized antigen suspension with 1.0 ml. of sensitized antigen (see "Method for Adjusting the Titer of Sensitized Antigen" page 47).

b. Measure 1.0 ml. sensitized antigen into a glass mixing vial.

c. Pour the saline into the antigen and as rapidly as possible pour the mixture back and forth 12 times without waiting to drain the vials.

3. Allow antigen suspension to stand 10 minutes before using. (Discard antigen suspension after it has aged more than 30 minutes.)

4. Place thumb over mouth of mixing vial and shake gently to suspend antigen particles evenly.

5. Pipette 0.025 ml. of sensitized antigen suspension directly to the bottom of each tube.

6. Add 0.15 ml. of heated serum to each corresponding tube.

Note: Complete the addition of sensitized antigen suspension and serum to one rack before adding sensitized antigen suspension to another.

7. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds.

8. Allow rack to stand 3 minutes at room temperature.

9. Shake rack of tubes for 3 minutes in Kahn shaker.

10. Remove rack from shaking machine and add 0.5 ml. of saline to each tube.

Note: Add saline to one rack and complete reading before adding saline to another.

11. Shake rack by hand a few seconds to mix contents of tubes.

12. Read each tube of the rack as described under "Reading of Results" (page 40), immediately after the addition of saline.

13. Report results as follows:

Reporting presumptive Kahn tests with serum

Reading	Report
4+	Positive.
3+	Positive.
2+	Doubtful.
1+	Negative.
±	Negative.
—	Negative.

Method for Adjusting the Titer of Sensitized Antigen

1. Prepare standard Kahn antigen suspension as described under "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum" (page 38).

2. Prepare three sensitized antigen suspensions as follows:

a. Measure into a glass mixing vial (labeled A) the indicated amount of saline required to prepare sensitized antigen suspension with 1.0 ml. of sensitized antigen.

b. Measure into a second glass mixing vial (labeled B) 0.05 ml. more than the indicated amount of saline required to prepare sensitized antigen suspension with 1.0 ml. of sensitized antigen.

c. Measure into a third glass mixing vial (labeled C) 0.05 ml. less than the indicated amount of saline required to prepare sensitized antigen suspension with 1.0 ml. sensitized antigen.

d. Measure 1.0 ml. sensitized antigen into each of three glass mixing vials, labeled A, B, and C, respectively.

e. Pour the saline from vial labeled A into the antigen containing vial also labeled A, and, as rapidly as possible, pour the mixture back and forth 12 times without allowing time for vials to drain.

f. Do the same with the contents of vials B and vials C.

3. Allow antigen suspensions to stand for 10 minutes before using. Antigen suspensions are not to be used after standing more than 30 minutes.

4. Arrange four sets of three Kahn tubes each in a standard Kahn rack, and label the sets, S, A, B, and C, respectively.

5. Pipette 0.025 ml. of standard antigen suspension to the bottom of three tubes labeled S.

6. Pipette 0.025 ml. of sensitized antigen suspension A into tubes of set A.

7. Pipette 0.025 ml. of sensitized antigen suspensions B and C into tubes of sets B and C.

8. Add 0.15 ml. of heated positive control serum to one tube of each set.

9. Add 0.15 ml. of heated negative control serum to another tube of each set.

10. Add 0.15 ml. of saline to the third tube of each set.

11. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds.

12. Permit rack to stand for 3 minutes at room temperature.

13. Shake rack of tubes for 3 minutes in mechanical shaker.

14. Remove rack from the shaker and add 0.5 ml. saline to each tube.

15. Shake rack by hand a few seconds to mix contents of tubes.

16. Read and compare the tubes of each set containing the positive contro serum, negative control serum, and saline.

17. Choose that sensitized antigen suspension for testing serums which con forms to the three following conditions.

a. The positive control demonstrates flocculation of the antigen suspen sion-serum mixture.

b. The negative serum and saline controls are free from particles o flakes.

c. Negative serum and saline reactions with sensitized antigen suspen sion show the same degree of opalescence as the negative serum an saline reactions with the standard antigen suspension.

Note: When sensitized antigen suspensions elicit cloudier reaction with negative serum and saline than those obtained with standard ant gen suspensions, it is necessary to increase the saline titer, generally b 0.05 ml., rarely by 0.1 ml.

When sensitized antigen suspensions elicit clearer reactions with negativ serum and saline than those obtained with standard antigen suspension it is necessary to decrease the saline titer, generally by 0.05 ml., rare by 0.1 ml.

A sensitized antigen suspension is satisfactory for the performance o the presumptive test only when the negative serum and saline reaction with the sensitized antigen suspension show the same degree of opale cence as the negative serum and saline reactions with the standar antigen suspension.

Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test With Spinal Fluid

Preparation of Saturated Solution of Ammonium Sulfate

1. To 500 gm. of reagent quality ammonium sulfate add 500 ml. of doub distilled water in a clean 3- to 5-liter pyrex flask.

2. Bring contents to boil and continue boiling until solution becomes clea

3. Allow solution to cool to room temperature.

4. Filter solution through paper.

5. Store in glass-stoppered bottle at room temperature.

Preparation of Concentrated Globulin Solution of Each Spinal Fluid

1. Centrifuge and decant all spinal fluids, to remove cellular debris and particles.

2. Pipette 1.5 ml. of the spinal fluid into a Kahn test tube.

3. Add 1.5 ml. of saturated solution of ammonium sulfate to the 1.5 ml. of spinal fluid.

4. Place thumb (protected with rubber) over mouth of tube and shake vigorously to mix contents.

5. Place mixture in a 56° C. water bath for 15 minutes, to hasten precipitation of the globulin.

6. Remove tube from water bath and centrifuge tube at 2,000 r.p.m for 15 minutes. (The globulin precipitate will be found packed at the bottom of the tube.)

7. Decant and discard supernatant fluid.

8. Drain inverted tube for 10 minutes on filter paper and use a strip of filter paper to remove any remaining drops of supernatant fluid.

9. Add 0.15 ml. saline to centrifuged globulin precipitate, holding point of pipette close to bottom of tube to avoid washing down any ammonium sulfate that may be adhering near the mouth of tube.

10. Tap base of tube gently to redissolve the globulin.

Note: When the globulin does not completely dissolve in 0.15 ml. of saline, add 0.05 ml. more saline and shake tube gently. If globulin is still insoluble repeat with 0.05 ml. additional saline. In rare instances, the globulin will still be incompletely soluble. Then the clear globulin solution is separated from the insoluble protein by centrifuging. If centrifuging does not lead to a clear supernatant fluid, a trace of talc or kaolin is then added to the mixture and tube is recentrifuged. The clear supernatant fluid (which is the globulin solution) is removed and is then ready for testing with the antigen suspension.

Performance of Qualitative Kahn Test With Spinal Fluid Globulin Concentrate

1. Arrange Kahn test tubes in a rack so that there is one tube for each spinal fluid concentrate to be tested, including positive spinal fluid, negative spinal fluid, and saline controls. Number tubes to correspond to the spinal fluids being tested.

2. Prepare standard antigen suspension as described under "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum" (page 38).

3. Place thumb over mouth of mixing vial and shake gently to suspend anti gen particles.

4. Pipette 0.01 ml. of standard antigen suspension directly to the bottom o each tube.

5. Add 0.15 ml. of spinal fluid globulin concentrate to each correspondin tube.

Note: Complete the addition of antigen suspension and globulin concentrat to one rack before adding antigen suspension and globulin concentrate t another.

6. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds after antigen suspension and spina fluid concentrates have been added to all tubes.

7. Shake rack of tubes for 4 minutes on mechanical shaker.

8. Remove rack from shaking machine and add 0.5 ml. of saline solutio to each tube.

Note: Add saline to one rack and complete reading before adding saline t another.

9. Shake rack by hand a few seconds to mix contents of tubes.

10. Read each tube of the rack over a microscope mirror, as described unde "Reading of Results" (page 40), immediately after the addition of salin

11. Report in accordance with table 9.

Table 9.—Reporting standard and presumptive Kahn tests with spinal fluid

Quantitative Kahn Test With Spinal Fluid

Quantitative spinal fluid tests are performed on spinal fluids producing pos tive reactions in the qualitative Kahn test.

1. Prepare dilutions of spinal fluid as indicated in the following table.

Table 10

Tube	Amount of spinal fluid (ml.)	Amount of saline solution (ml.)	Designated dilution
1	Quantity available.	None.	[1]1:10
2	0.2	0.1	1:15
3	0.2	0.2	1:20
4	0.1	0.2	1:30
5	0.1	0.3	1:40
6	0.1	0.4	1:50

[1] Whole spinal fluid is considered a 1:10 dilution since the qualitative test is performed on spinal fluid globulin concentrated 10 times.

2. Prepare standard antigen suspension as described under "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum" (page 38).

3. Place thumb over mouth of mixing vial and shake gently to suspend antigen particles.

4. Pipette 0.01 ml. of the antigen suspension directly to the bottom of a Kahn test tube. One tube is required for each dilution of spinal fluid being tested.

5. Add 0.15 ml. of diluted spinal fluid to each tube, starting with the highest dilution.

6. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds.

7. Shake rack in Kahn shaker for 4 minutes.

8. Remove rack from shaker, add 0.5 ml. saline to each tube, and read immediately.

9. Note the highest dilution of spinal fluid giving a positive reaction (4+, 3+, or 2+).

10. Calculate the Kahn units according to the formula $S=4D$, where S is the potency of the spinal fluid in terms of Kahn units and D is the highest dilution demonstrating definite flocculation.

Example:

(a) Spinal fluid positive at 1:10 dilution (designated) $10 \times 4 = 40$ Kahn units.

(b) Spinal fluid positive at 1:40 dilution (designated) $40 \times 4 = 160$ Kahn units.

11. Retest spinal fluids that produce only negative reactions in the designated dilutions in the following manner.

a. Prepare a spinal fluid globulin concentrate as described under "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Spinal Fluid" (page 48).

b. Add a sufficient quantity of saline to the globulin solution to make a 1:5 dilution (0.15 ml. globulin solution plus 0.6 ml. salt solution).

c. Perform a one-tube test as prescribed for testing spinal fluid dilutions.

d. If this 1:5 dilution gives a positive reaction, the quantitative titer i 20 Kahn units; if it gives a negative reaction, the titer is equivalent t the reading obtained with the undiluted globulin solution.

Kahn Standard and Microflocculation Test With Cardiolipin Antigen

Preparation of Cardiolipin Antigen

Note: Cardiolipin antigen for the Kahn tests consists of cardiolipin (0.1 percent), purified lecithin (1.0-percent), and cholesterol (0.025-percent) i absolute alcohol. This formula may not exactly be applicable to all lots o lecithin and cardiolipin but it provides a workable base from which smal variations in the lecithin to cardiolipin ratio will be sufficient to render diffe ent lots of these reagents into suitable antigens.

Cardiolipin Antigen in Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test With Serum

Note. These tests should be conducted in parallel with duplicate tests usin Kahn standard antigen (5).

1. Arrange test tubes in standard Kahn racks so that there are three tube for each serum to be tested, including positive serum, negative serum, an saline controls. Number the first row of tubes to correspond to the serur being tested, using a different colored wax pencil than that used in numbe ing tubes for tests with Kahn standard antigen.

2. Prepare cardiolipin antigen suspension exactly as described unde "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum" (page 38) and allow to stan at room temperature for 10 minutes. (Discard after 30 minutes.)

3. Place thumb over mouth of vial and shake gently to suspend antige particles.

4. Pipette 0.05 ml. of the antigen suspension directly to the bottom of ea tube of the first row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

5. Pipette 0.025 ml. of antigen suspension directly to the bottom of each tu of the middle row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

6. Pipette 0.0125 ml. of antigen suspension directly to the bottom of ea tube of the back row of the Kahn rack, employing a Kahn antigen pipette.

7. Add 0.15 ml. of each serum to the designated set of three tubes containi 0.05 ml., 0.025 ml., and 0.0125 ml. antigen suspension, respectively.

Note: The heating of the serum for 30 minutes at 56° C., the absolute clari of the serum, and the set-up of the 3-tube test are the same as in the Ka test with standard antigen. The serums should be employed soon after the heating period.

8. Shake rack by hand for 10 seconds, after antigen suspension and serums have been added to all tubes.

9. Permit serum-antigen suspension mixture to stand for 3 to 7 minutes at room temperature.

10. Shake rack of tubes for 3 minutes in Kahn shaking machine (275 to 285 oscillations per minute).

11. Add 0.3, 0.1, and 0.1 ml. of 1.2-percent salt solution to tubes 1, 2, and 3, respectively.

Note: In this respect the Kahn test with cardiolipin antigen differs from the Kahn test with Kahn antigen, in which 1.0, 0.5, and 0.5 ml. of 0.9-percent salt solution are added to tubes 1, 2, and 3, respectively.

12. Read each tube of the rack immediately after adding the 1.2-percent salt solution and agitating rack gently to mix the ingredients.

Note: The reading of Kahn results with cardiolipin antigen is essentially the same as the reading of Kahn results with Kahn antigen except that each tube is read only once. (See "Reading of Results" under "Standard (Qualitative) Kahn Test with Serum" page 40.)

13. Average the results of the Kahn test with cardiolipin antigen in the same manner as in the Kahn test with Kahn antigen and report as illustrated.

Reporting Kahn tests with cardiolipin antigen

Total number of pluses in in 3 tube-readings[1]	Report
11 or 12	Positive (4+).
8 to 10	Positive (3+).
5 to 7	Positive (2+).
3 or 4	Doubtful (1+).
2	Doubtful (±).
1 or 0	Negative.

[1] Plus-minus readings are disregarded.

14. Centrifuge, for 10 minutes at 2,000 r.p.m., negative and borderline reactions with cardiolipin antigen in those instances in which positive or doubtful reactions were obtained with Kahn antigen. (Centrifuging tends to clump the particles and clear the medium.) Record individual tube readings as positive (relatively large clumps), moderately positive (moderate-sized clumps), weakly positive (small but definite clumps), and negative (no definite clumps). Base final result on average of three tube-readings by considering positive as equivalent to 3+; moderately positive as equivalent to 2+ and weakly positive as equivalent to 1+. (Relatively large clumps are designated as 3+ instead of 4+ in order that the final results will b on a lower sensitivity scale than reactions not requiring centrifugation (6)

Cardiolipin Antigen in the Kahn Microflocculation Test

1. Employ in the microscopic procedure the same cardiolipin antigen su pension, described above, used in the 3-tube test.

2. Let the cardiolipin antigen suspension age 10 minutes before using, an discard it after it has aged for more than 30 minutes.

3. Serum, free from particles, is heated at 56° C. for 30 minutes.

4. Deposit on a paraffin-ringed slide 0.05-ml. amounts of the serums.

5. Mix the antigen suspension well by drawing it up several times in a tube culin syringe with a 23-gage needle. Hold syringe vertically over the seru and permit a drop of the suspension to fall in the center.

6. Rotate slide (circumscribing a 2-inch circle) 150 to 160 times per minu for 4 minutes.

7. Read results microscopically at 50 × magnification, as follows:

Negative	Microscopic field shows evenly distributed, very small, nonaggregated particles.
Doubtful (±)	Microscopic field crowded with numerous small aggregates or clumps.
Doubtful (1+)	Slightly larger aggregates, somewhat less crowded.
Positive (++)	Larger aggregates, with a corresponding clearing of the field.
Positive (+++)	Relatively large aggregates scattered through the clear field.
Positive (++++)	Few large clumps in a clear field.

Preparation of Kahn Standard Antigen

Glassware and Equipment

1. Side-arm filter flask, Pyrex.
2. Buchner filter funnel, porcelain.
3. Filter paper of proper size for Buchner funnel.
4. Tinfoil, thin, high grade.

Reagents

1. Powdered beef heart:

The powdered beef heart may be purchased[1] or prepared in the laboratory follows:

[1] Obtainable from Difco Laboratories, Detroit, Mich., or Armour Laboratories, Chicago,

a. Remove fat and connective tissue from three or more fresh beef hearts.

b. Mince tissue by passing through meat grinder three or four times.

c. Spread in a thin layer on a porcelain platter or glass plate and dry under a current of air from one or more electric fans for 6 hours.

d. Break material into small pieces and cover with cheesecloth.

e. Continue drying until small pieces are brittle.

f. Powder the particles in a mortar or appropriate grinder.

2. Ether:
Anesthetic ether of standard make should be employed. The use of ether containing small quantities of alcohol should be avoided.

3. Alcohol:
Ethyl alcohol with an alcohol content not less than 95 percent. If possible, it should be prepared from absolute ethyl alcohol by the addition of the required amount of distilled water as determined by tests with an alcohol hydrometer.

4. Cholesterol:
High-grade, C. P., ash-free cholesterol should be employed.

Method of Preparation of Alcoholic Extract

1. Weigh 100 gm. of powdered beef heart and place in a one-liter Erlenmeyer flask fitted with a tinfoil cork or glass stopper.

2. Add 400 ml. of anesthetic ether.

3. Stopper the flask and shake at frequent intervals for 10 minutes.

4. Place filter paper in a Buchner funnel, fitted to a sidearm filter flask by means of a one-hole rubber stopper.

5. Pour the contents of the 1-liter extraction flask into the funnel and filter rapidly by suction.

6. Transfer the moist beef heart to a sheet of filter paper.

7. Break the material into small pieces and return immediately to the 1-liter extraction flask.

8. Add 300 ml. of ether to the flask, stopper, and shake at frequent intervals for 10 minutes.

9. Pour the contents of the flask into the funnel, using a fresh filter paper, and filter by suction.

10. Again transfer the moist beef heart to a sheet of filter paper.

11. Break the material into small pieces and return immediately to the extraction flask.

12. Repeat steps 8, 9, and 10 for a total of four ether extractions.

13. Spread the moist beef heart on a clean sheet of filter paper and dry wit the aid of a spatula until the powder is free of ether odor.

14. Invert the flask in which the ether extraction was carried out until th ether odor has disappeared.

15. Weigh the dried, ether-free powder and return to the flask.

16. Add 5 ml. of 95-percent alcohol for each gram of powder.

17. Stopper the flask and shake intermittently for 10 minutes.

18. Allow to stand for 3 days at room temperature (about 21° C.) in th dark.

19. Shake flask intermittently for 10 minutes and filter contents. Refilter, i necessary, to remove all visible particulate material.

20. Store at room temperature in the dark as stock solution.

Cholesterolization of Alcoholic Extract

1. Weigh, on an analytical balance, 6 mg. of cholesterol per milliliter of a coholic extract antigen.

2. Transfer cholesterol to a glass-stoppered bottle or Erlenmeyer flask, o suitable size.

3. Add the proper amount of alcoholic extract, measured with a graduate cylinder of suitable size.

4. Tightly stopper flask and place in a warm water bath to hasten solutio of the cholesterol, shaking flask intermittently.

5. After cholesterol is entirely dissolved, allow antigen to cool to room tem perature, and filter through fat-free paper.

Standardization of Antigen

The purpose of standardization is to render a newly prepared antigen com parable to a Kahn standard antigen. The following three steps are employe

1. Determination of titer.—Determine the minimum amount of 0.9-perce salt solution to be added to 1 ml. of antigen to produce a suspension of aggr gates that completely disperses upon the addition of designated aliquots salt solution.

2. Determination of sensitivity and specificity.—Test antigen at its tit with syphilitic and nonsyphilitic serums, employing standard antig simultaneously as a control.

3. Correction of antigen.—Correct antigen to standard requirements, wh sensitivity and specificity are not identical to those of standard antigen.

Determination of Titer

1. Measure with a 1.0-ml. or 2.0-ml. pipette (graduated in 0.01 ml.) 0.9, 1.1, 1.3, 1.5, 1.7, and 1.9 ml., respectively, of 0.9-percent salt solution into six antigen suspension vials.

2. Measure with a 1.0-ml. pipette into each of six similar vials 1 ml. of the 0.6-percent cholesterolized antigen to be titrated (a standard antigen control should be set up at the same time at the titer indicated on the label).

3. Prepare antigen suspensions by mixing the 1-ml. quantities of antigen with the varying amounts of salt solution. Empty the salt solution into the antigen and as rapidly as possible (without waiting to drain the tube) pour the mixture back and forth 12 times. Permit the mixture to stand for 30 minutes instead of the usual 10-minute period.

4. Test for the dispersibility in salt solution of the lipid aggregates present in the antigen-salt solution suspensions as follows:

a. Set up seven series of three Kahn test tubes each.

b. Pipette 0.05, 0.025, and 0.0125 ml. quantities of each of the six antigen suspensions (after thorough agitation) to the bottom of the tubes, in series, using a 0.25-ml. antigen pipette.

Note: A different Kahn antigen pipette should be used for each antigen suspension.

c. With a 1-ml. pipette, add 0.15 ml. salt solution to each of the 21 tubes.

d. Shake the rack of tubes vigorously for 10 seconds by hand and then for 3 minutes in a shaking machine at a speed of 275 to 285 oscillations per minute.

e. Add 1 ml. salt solution to the tubes containing the 0.05-ml. amounts of antigen suspension, and 0.5 ml. to the remaining tubes. Shake the rack by hand to mix the ingredients and observe whether the mixtures are opalescent or contain aggregates.

A typical titration picture may show cloudiness in the 3-tube test containing the antigen suspension which was prepared with 0.9 ml. and with 1.1 ml. of salt solution. These suspensions contain aggregates which were not completely redispersed in salt solution. The tests containing the antigen suspension which was mixed with 1.3 ml. of salt solution may appear opalescent, exactly like the standard antigen control. The other three tests with antigen suspensions containing 1.5, 1.7, and 1.9 ml. of saline may appear clearer than the control. In this case the titer of the antigen would be 1 ml. of antigen plus 1.3 ml. of salt solution, i.e., 1.3 ml. is the smallest amount of salt solution which, when added to 1 ml. of antigen, produces aggregates capable of complete dispersion upon the further addition of salt solution. The following tabulation illustrates a typical antigen titration. The "normal" range of titers for standard antigen may vary from 1 + 1.1 to 1 + 1.5.

Typical antigen titration

Antigen +0.9-percent salt solution (ml.)	Appearance of mixture
1+0.9	Cloudy, nondispersible aggregates.
1+1.1	Slightly cloudy, fine, nondispersible aggregates.
1+1.3	Opalescent (titer).
1+1.5	Slightly clearer.
1+1.7	Too clear.
1+1.9	Almost water clear.
Control
1+1.4	Opalescent.

Antigen suspensions made with progressively increasing volumes of salt solu tion, i.e., 0.9, 1.1, 1.3, 1.5, 1.7, and 1.9 ml., usually show a correspondingl progressive increase in the clarity of mixtures of antigen suspension and sal solution. Rarely, however, an antigen suspension will show a "titration zone. That is, cloudiness and nondispersible aggregates may appear again beyon the titer, for example, in the tubes containing 1.7 ml. or 1.9 ml. of salt solutior This factor indicates that this particular antigen has a very short workabl range and it is best not to employ this antigen for general use.

Note: After the titer of an antigen has been established, the next step is t determine whether the sensitivity and specificity of the antigen are comparabl to those of standard antigen. This is accomplished by testing a number o serums simultaneously with the antigen in question and a standard antiger

Determination of Sensitivity and Specificity

1. Preparation of serums:
A series of serums with graded reactivities may be prepared from pooled Seitz-filtered, positive and negative serums by combining selected proportion of these serums so that the desired number of strongly and weakly reactin specimens are obtained. These prepared specimens may be used for all pre liminary testing but only selected individual serums are adequate for fina checking of antigen reactivity. All serums should be heated before being used

2. Preliminary testing of newly prepared antigen:
Prepare antigen suspensions with both antigens in accordance with their re spective titers. After both antigen suspensions have stood for 10 minutes, con duct tests with at least 10 serums exactly as described under "Standard (Qual tative) Kahn Test with Serum," page 38. If identical reactions are obtaine with both antigen suspensions, final checking as described below may b accomplished.

3. Final checking of newly prepared antigen:
Obtain at least 50 serums that show varying degrees of reactivity in the Kah test and 50 negatively reacting serums. Perform tests, using both antige suspensions simultaneously, as described under "Standard (Qualitative Kahn test," page 38.

Each serum should be tested with both antigens in the same rack so that time factors will be constant. Two readings must be made in each instance where recordable reactions are observed during the first reading. The two readings are necessary since some antigens that produce standard first readings may allow readable particles to redisperse at a rate different from that of standard antigen. In this instance the final report on a given specimen could be less or greater than that obtained with standard antigen. If the results produced by the new antigen are equal to those of the standard antigen, the newly prepared antigen may be considered to have standard reactivity.

Correction of Antigen

The sensitivity of newly prepared antigen may be greater or less than that of standard antigen. In either case correction to standard requirements can usually be accomplished. The reagents commonly necessary for antigen correction are listed below:

Standardization of Kahn standard antigen

Antigen Reactivity	Method of Adjustment
Less sensitive than standard	1. Addition of cholesterolized alcohol. 2. Addition of sensitizing reagent. 3. Addition of sensitizing reagent plus cholesterolized alcohol. 4. Addition of Bacto-Kahn undersensitive correction solution. 5. Addition of an oversensitive antigen. 6. Decreasing the amount of salt solution in antigen suspension.
More sensitive than standard	1. Reducing the amount of cholesterol. 2. Addition of cholesterolized alcohol. 3. Addition of an undersensitive antigen. 4. Increasing the amount of salt solution in antigen suspension. 5. Addition of Bacto-Kahn oversensitive correction solution. 6. Concentration of lipids.

1. Preparation of cholesterolized alcohol:
To 100 ml. of 95-percent alcohol in a 250-ml. glass stoppered Erlenmeyer flask or bottle add 600 mg. of cholesterol. Rotate the flask in a warm water bath until all cholesterol is dissolved. Filter when cool.

2. Preparation of sensitizing reagent:

a. Refilter the ether filtrate, obtained in the preparation of antigen, to remove the traces of powdered muscle, and then evaporate the ether with the aid of an electric fan. During the evaporation period a few cubic centimeters of water may condense in the evaporating dish. This water will appear at the bottom of the evaporating dish, and it is suggested that it be removed with a capillary pipette as it is formed, to avoid emulsification of the lipids. The lipid residue is brownish, semitransparent and viscous.

829688°—49—5

b. When the volume has been reduced to a point where ether odor is no longer detectable, the residue is transferred to a suitable glass-stoppered container and weighed.

c. A volume of absolute alcohol equivalent to 10 ml. per gm. of residue is added to the flask.

d. Extraction is allowed to take place for 30 minutes at room temperature with frequent shaking of the flask. Comparatively little of the residue is soluble in alcohol, lipid masses being distributed throughout the mixture.

e. The mixture is placed in the refrigerator (4° to 9° C.) for 3 hours.

f. The mixture is filtered while cold and the flask containing the clear filtrate placed in the incubator at 37° C. for 24 hours.

g. The clear filtrate should stand for 3 days at room temperature. If a precipitate forms during this period the solution is refiltered.

h. The filtrate is cholesterolized with 6 mg. cholesterol per cubic centimeter, according to the usual technic.

i. The cholesterolized extract, known as sensitizing reagent, is filtered and is then ready for use. It should be kept in the dark at room temperature.

3. Correction solutions:
Bacto-Kahn oversensitive correction solution and Bacto-Kahn undersensitive correction solution.[2]

4. Correction of antigens more sensitive than standard may be accomplished

a. By increasing slightly the amount of salt solution in the antigen suspension beyond requirement of titer:

Note: Antigens which are just slightly oversensitive may be brought to the standard level of sensitivity by increasing slightly the amount of salt solution in the antigen suspension beyond the requirements of the titer, provided the negative reactions do not appear too clear. As an example, a slightly oversensitive antigen requiring a titer of 1 + 1.3 may give results comparable with standard antigen at a titer of 1 + 1.35 or 1 + 1.4.

b. By mixing the oversensitive antigen with a low-titered, undersensitive antigen:

(1). Add equal amounts of the oversensitive and undersensitive antigens (for example, 10 ml. each) to a small bottle and mix well

[2] Obtainable from Difco Laboratories, Detroit, Mich.

(2). Perform titration (according to "Determination of Titer," page 57).

(3). Set up preliminary comparative tests at the determined titer, using a standard antigen as control.

(4). If results are comparable, final checking (p. 58) may be accomplished.

(5). If antigen reactivity is not equal to that of the standard antigen, try different proportions of the two antigens.

(6). Final checking (p. 58) should be done after the entire lot of antigen has been corrected.

c. By reducing the amount of cholesterol from the usual 0.6 percent to 0.5 percent or 0.4 percent:

(1). To one ½-oz. bottle add 10 ml. of 0.6-percent cholesterolized antigen and 2 ml. of noncholesterolized antigen, making a 0.5-percent cholesterolized antigen. To another ½-oz. bottle add 8 ml. of 0.6-percent cholesterolized antigen and 4 ml. of noncholesterolized antigen, making a 0.4-percent cholesterolized antigen.

(2). Titrate these two samples (according to "Determination of Titer," page 57).

(3). Perform comparative tests using the titers obtained and a standard antigen as control.

(4). If either the 0.4-percent or 0.5-percent cholesterolized antigens give results comparable with standard antigen, perform additional tests and adjust the entire amount of antigen to contain the proper amount of cholesterol.

(5). Recheck a sample of the entire lot after it has been corrected before declaring the antigen standard.

d. By concentrating the lipids in the antigen:
Oversensitive antigens which require more correction than a titer adjustment occasionally can be corrected by concentrating the lipids.

(1). Into a small evaporating dish measure 1 ml. of the oversensitive antigen in a noncholesterolized state.

(2). Evaporate to dryness by means of an electric fan.

(3). Dissolve the residue in a 10-ml. amount of cholesterolized antigen. The modified antigen thus formed contains 10 percent more extract lipids than the original antigen.

(4). Titrate antigen (according to "Determination of Titer," page 57).

(5). Test this antigen with 10 serums, most of which are known to give weakly positive reactions, employing standard antigen as a control.

(6). If the modified antigen, in which the increase in concentration of lipids is 10 percent, gives the same results with serums as does standard antigen, the entire amount of oversensitive antigen may be adjusted and submitted to final checking (p. 58).

e. By the addition of correction solution to the antigen:

The addition of 1 percent to 5 percent of the stock Kahn oversensitive correction solution may be sufficient for the correction of oversensitive antigens to standard sensitivity.

f. By dilution with cholesterolized alcohol:

See "Correction of antigen less sensitive than standard," section b below. The technic described is applicable also to the correction of antigen more sensitive than standard.

5. Correction of antigens less sensitive than standard may be accomplished

a. By decreasing the amount of salt solution in antigen suspension below requirement of titer:

Antigens which are just slightly undersensitive may be brought to the standard level of sensitivity by decreasing the amount of salt solution in the antigen suspension by 0.05 ml. or 0.1 ml. providing the negative reactions are of standard opalescence.

b. By dilution of antigen with cholesterolized alcohol:

(1). To a ½-oz. bottle add 10 ml. of the undersensitive antigen (0.6-percent cholesterolized) and 1 ml. of the 0.6-percent cholesterolized alcohol; to another ½-oz. bottle add 10 ml. of the 0.6 percent cholesterolized alcohol and 2 ml. of 0.6-percent cholesterolized alcohol—thus making 10-percent and 20-percent dilutions, respectively.

(2). Titrate these two antigens (according to "Determination of Titer," page 57).

(3). Perform comparative tests with weakly positive serums using standard antigen simultaneously as a control.

(4). If neither 10-percent nor 20-percent dilution with cholesterolized alcohol brings the antigen to standard sensitivity, try other dilutions not exceeding 30 percent.

c. By the addition of correction solution to the antigen:

The addition of 1 percent to 5 percent of the stock Bacto-Kahn undersensitive correction solution may be sufficient to correct undersensitive antigens to standard sensitivity.

d. By the addition of sensitizing reagent to the antigen:
Some undersensitive antigens can be brought to the standard level of sensitivity by the addition of a trace of sensitizing reagent, i.e., 0.2 percent to 0.7 percent. In some cases, sensitizing reagent in addition to dilution with cholesterolized alcohol is necessary.

e. By mixing of undersensitive with an oversensitive antigen:
This method is essentially the same as described under section 4(b) (page 60) in the correction of an oversensitive antigen by mixing with an undersensitive one.

Notes on Titration Characteristics of Different Kahn Standard Antigens and Their Importance in Serologic Results

There are two basic titration characteristics of standard Kahn antigens. Antigens may show "sloping" titers or "flat" titers.

1. Antigens showing "sloping" titers:

These antigens show titration pictures of increasing clarity with the increase in the amounts of salt solution employed in the preparation of the antigen suspensions. The following tabulation illustrates a "sloping" titration picture.

"Sloping" antigen titration

Antigen +0.9-percent salt solution (cc.)	Titration results
1+0.9	Cloudy; aggregates.
1+1.1	Slightly cloudy; fine aggregates.
1+1.3	Opalescent (titer); no aggregates.
1+1.5	Slightly too clear; no aggregates.
1+1.7	Too clear; no aggregates.
1+1.9	Water-clear; no aggregates.

2. Antigens showing "flat" titers:

These antigens show titration pictures of similar clarity with the increase in the amounts of salt solution employed in the preparation of the antigen suspensions. The following tabulation illustrates a "flat" titration picture.

"Flat" antigen titration

Antigen +0.9-percent salt solution (cc.)	Titration results
1+0.9	Cloudy; aggregates.
1+1.1	Slightly cloudy; fine aggregates.
1+1.3	Trace cloudy; questionable aggregates.
1+1.5	Opalescent (titer); no aggregates.
1+1.7	Opalescence same; no aggregates.
1+1.9	Opalescence same; no aggregates.

Antigens having sloping titers and those having flat titers may be corrected to the same sensitivity but they may nevertheless possess different characteristics. Some flat-titered antigens show a tendency to give marked precipitatio at low temperature and are considered unfit for use. Only those antigen with "sloping" titers may be considered to be standard.

3. Changes in titers of antigens:

Prolonged ageing (a year or more) may have deleterious effects on some lot of Kahn standard antigen. Increased sensitivity and reduced specificity ma result from the use of an antigen giving cloudy negative reactions since fo correct results it is essential that clear-cut negative reactions be obtaine Therefore an antigen that begins to develop this characteristic or that is foun to have reduced sensitivity after long storage should not be used. Readjus ment of these antigens may be accomplished by determination of new titr tion end points or correction by one of the previously listed methods.

Standardization of Sensitized Antigen

Sensitized antigen is produced by increasing the sensitivity of standard Kah antigen. The following standardization method is based on the use of "sens tizing reagent" prepared as previously described. Bacto-Kahn undersensitiv correction solution may be substituted for sensitizing reagent. Sensitizin reagent is employed in a range of about 1 percent to 2.5 percent while th "correction solution" may require from 2 percent to 5 percent. Either o these reagents may be employed in combination with cholesterolized alcoho

1. To one ½-oz. bottle add 10 ml. of standard antigen, 0.25 ml. of 0.6-percen cholesterolized sensitizing reagent, and 2.5 ml. cholesterolized alcohol. T another ½-oz. bottle add 10 ml. of standard antigen, 0.2 ml. of 0.6-percen cholesterolized sensitizing reagent, and 2 ml. of 0.6-percent cholesterolize alcohol.

2. Titrate these two samples using increasing volumes of salt solution in th antigen suspensions, i.e., 1.8, 1.9, 2.0, 2.1, and 2.2 ml. Carry out the titratio in the same way as described in "Determination of titer," page 57.

3. Perform comparative tests with weakly positive serums, using a standard ized sensitized antigen as control, as described under "Presumptive Kahn Tes with Serum," page 45.

4. Perform tests with at least 100 additional serums if one of the modifie antigens is comparable to the sensitized antigen control. If the check serie show comparable results, the new antigen is considered as standard sensitize antigen for use in the presumptive test.

5. Make other combinations, if neither of the two modified antigens confor to the requirements of standard sensitized antigen, by adjusting the amount of sensitizing reagent and cholesterolized alcohol.

KLINE TESTS

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Rotating machine, Boerner type,[1] or Fisher-Kline.[2]
2. Paraffin-ring maker.[3]
3. Mold set[4] consisting of a steel mold ($3\frac{1}{8}$ x $2\frac{3}{16}$ x $\frac{1}{8}$ inches, with two wells 1 $\frac{9}{16}$ inches in diameter) and two metal disks (1 $\frac{5}{16}$ inches diameter x $\frac{3}{16}$ inch thick) with central screws.
4. Slide holders. Made of any convenient material, to accommodate three or four 2 x 3 inch slides.
5. Needles, hypodermic, 22- and 26-gage, with filed-off bevels.

Glassware

1. Pipettes, 0.2 ml., graduated in 1/100 ml. to the tip.
2. Pipettes, glass, capillary.
3. Centrifuge tubes, round bottomed, 3 x 1 inch.
4. Bottles, round, glass-stoppered, 30 ml.
5. Slides, glass, 3 x 2 inches.
6. Syringe, glass, hypodermic, 1.0 or 2.0 ml.

Standard Kline Tests

Reagents

1. Antigen:

Antigen for the standard Kline tests is composed of cardiolipin (0.2 percent) and purified lecithin (1.8 percent–2.0 percent) in absolute ethyl alcohol. This reagent should be assembled from chemically standardized components and be serologically standardized by comparison with an antigen of standard reactivity. Store at refrigerator temperature.

2. Cholesterol solution:

Dissolve 1.0 gm. cholesterol (Pfanstiehl, ash free, precipitated from alcohol) in 100 ml. absolute ethyl alcohol and store in glass-stoppered bottle at room temperature.

[3] Obtainable from Eberbach & Son Co., Ann Arbor, Mich.
[4] Obtainable from La Motte Chemical Products, Towson 4, Baltimore, Md.

3. Distilled water:
Distilled water suitable for the Kline tests should have a minimum of positive ions or other electrolytes and pH approximately 6.0.

4. Sodium chloride solution (0.85-percent):
Add the required amount of dry, reagent quality, sodium chloride (850 mg.) to 100 ml. freshly distilled water. This solution should be prepared on the day of use.

Kline Tests With Serum

Preparation of Serum

1. Remove serums from clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serums in 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes. When reexamination of the serum on another day is required, serum should be reheated at 56° C. for 5 minutes.

3. Recentrifuge any serum in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Preparation of Paraffin-Ring Slides

1. Clean 3 x 2 inch glass slides with Bon Ami.

2. Place 12 paraffin rings (14 mm. diameter) on each slide, using a hand operated loop or an electrically heated ring-making machine.[3] Paraffin or a mixture of two parts paraffin and one part vaseline, heated to about 120° C. may be used. Care should be exercised to produce rings of the prescribed diameter.

Preparation of Antigen Emulsion

1. Pipette 0.85 ml. of distilled water to the bottom of a 30 ml. glass-stoppered bottle.

2. Add 1.0 ml. of 1-percent cholesterol solution. This is accomplished by allowing the cholesterol solution to drop slowly from a pipette while the bottle, held at an angle, is vigorously and continuously rotated on a flat surface.

3. Continue rotation of the bottle for an additional 20 seconds.

4. Add 0.1 ml. of antigen against the side of the neck of the bottle from a 0.1 ml. pipette.

5. Place stopper in bottle and shake vigorously for 1 minute, throwing fluid from bottom to stopper and back.

6. Add 2.45 ml. of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution rapidly to the bottle and shake less vigorously for 30 seconds.

[3] Obtainable from Eberbach & Son Co., Ann Arbor, Mich.

The emulsion is now ready for use and, if refrigerated, may be used for 48 hours. Double quantities of antigen emulsion may be prepared in 30-ml. bottles.

Preliminary Tests

1. Check the delivery of the hypodermic needle[5] (22-gage attached to a glass syringe) or capillary pipette. Adjustments should be made so that approximately 125 drops are obtained (0.008 ml.) from each milliliter of antigen emulsion.

2. Complete tests with positive serum, negative serum, and saline controls as described under "Qualitative Tests with Serum."

3. Clumping of antigen particles will be observed in the positive serum. The negative serum and saline controls should show complete dispersion of antigen particles and the optimum number of particles per microscopic field.

Qualitative Tests With Serum

1. Pipette 0.05 ml. of heated serum into a paraffin ring on a glass slide. Positive and negative serum controls should be included.

2. Add one drop (0.008 ml.) of antigen emulsion to each serum.

3. Rotate slides on a flat surface for 4 minutes.

Note: Rotation by hand should circumscribe a 1-inch circle 180 times per minute. The Boerner type rotator (A. H. Thomas Co.) should also be set at 180 r.p.m. The Fisher-Kline rotator has a greater speed and smaller amplitude.

When tests are performed in a hot, dry climate, slides may be covered with a box lid containing a moistened blotter, during rotation, to prevent excess evaporation.

4. Examine the reactions microscopically, employing a 100 × magnification.

5. Report observed results in accordance with the following outline:

a. Typical reactions:

Negative . . . . . Antigen particles dispersed, no clumping.
Weakly positive (± or 1+) . . . Antigen particles in small but definite clumps.
Positive (2+ or 3+) . . . . . Antigen particles in medium-sized clumps.
Strongly positive (4+) . . . . . Antigen particles in large clumps.

b. Atypical reactions:

Atypical reactions are characterized by irregular, feathery clumping in which smaller clumps predominate. Atypically reacting serums should be retested, in dilutions from 1:2 to 1:64, as described under "Quantitative Tests with Serum." A positive report is rendered if a positive reaction is obtained with one or more serum dilutions.

[5] A 26-gage needle is preferred by Dr. Kline but the 22-gage needle has been used in the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory. The size of drop rather than the needle gage is of primary importance, so any needle that will deliver the proper amount of antigen emulsion is satisfactory.

Quantitative Tests With Serum

1. Add 0.5 ml. of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution to each of six or more tubes.

2. Add 0.5 ml. of heated serum to the first tube and mix.

3. Transfer 0.5 ml. from first to second tube and mix.

4. Continue transferring 0.5 ml. from each tube to the next, and mixing, until the last tube contains 1.0 ml.

5. Pipette 0.05 ml. of each serum dilution into a paraffin ring on a glass slide.

6. Add one drop of antigen emulsion (0.008 ml.) to each serum dilution.

7. Rotate slide for 4 minutes.

8. Read and record reactions as described under "Qualitative Tests With Serum."

9. Report results in terms of the highest dilution producing a positive (2+, 3+, or 4+) reaction.

Example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
4	3	1	—	—	—	Positive, 1:4 dilution.
4	4	4	2	—	—	Positive, 1:16 dilution.
4	4	4	4	2	—	Positive, 1:32 dilution.

Determination of Reagin Units

If the last positive reaction on titration is 2+, the number of reagin units in the serum is the same as the dilution. If the last positive reaction is stronger than 2+, it will require additional titration to determine the dilution at which the last positive reaction is 2+. The number of reagin units in the serum is the same as the dilution at which the last positive reaction is 2+.

Dilutions for determination of titer and of reagin units in serum should always be made with saline and not with negative serum.

Example 1:

1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32
4+	4+	4+	2+	Negative

The titer is 1:16. Since the last reaction is 2+, the number of reagin units is also 16.

Example 2:

1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64	1:128	1:256
4+	4+	4+	4+	4+	4+	4+	Negative

In the above instance the titer is 1:128. To determine the number of reagin units, an additional titration between 1:128 and 1:256 is carried out to find the last dilution at which the test gives a 2+ reaction. This is readily done by diluting 0.2 ml. of the remaining 1:8 dilution with 0.6 ml. physiological saline (=0.8 ml. of 1:32), and further diluting 0.1 ml. of the 1:32 dilution with 0.4 ml. saline in one tube; 0.1 ml. of the 1:32 dilution with 0.5 ml. saline in a second tube; and finally a third tube, 0.1 ml. of the 1:32 dilution with 0.6 ml. saline.

If the reactions are:	1:160	1:192	1:224
	4+	2+	Negative

then the number of reagin units is 192.

Kline Tests With Spinal Fluid

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

1. Centrifuge spinal fluid at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes and remove supernate by decanting. Spinal fluids that are grossly contaminated or that contain blood are unsatisfactory for testing.

2. Test each spinal fluid for the presence of sugar.

a. Pipette 5 ml. of Benedict's solution into a test tube.

b. Place tube in boiling water for 5 minutes.

c. Remove tube from bath. Copper reduction should not occur during this heating period.

d. Add 0.5 ml. of spinal fluid. Shake tube to mix contents.

e. Return tube to boiling water for 5 minutes.

f. Remove tube from water bath and examine for precipitate indicating presence of sugar. Spinal fluids giving a negative reaction for sugar are unsatisfactory for testing.

3. Place spinal fluids in a 56° C. water bath for 5 minutes immediately before testing.

Preparation of Double-Ring Slides

1. Clean 3 x 2 inch glass slides with Bon Ami.

2. Place steel mold and two center disks on slide.

3. Fill spaces between disks and outer mold with hot paraffin mixture (one part paraffin plus 2 parts vaseline).

4. Remove mold and disks from slide after paraffin has cooled. Disks may b loosened by turning the central screw to the right. The mold is removed b inserting a knife blade between the slide and mold.

Preparation of Antigen Emulsion

1. Pipette 0.6 ml. of 1-percent cholesterol solution to the bottom of a larg (1-inch diameter), round-bottomed centrifuge tube.

2. Add 0.4 ml. of distilled water rapidly, by removing finger from pipett and blowing in the last drop, while vigorously rotating the tube on a fla surface.

3. Continue rotation of tube for an additional 10 seconds.

4. Add 0.1 ml. antigen (cardiolipin-lecithin) and rotate tube vigorously fo 1 minute.

5. Add 1.4 ml. of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution and rotate the tub on a flat surface for 30 seconds.

6. Centrifuge tube of antigen emulsion at 1,100[6] r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

7. Decant the turbid supernatant fluid.

8. Add 0.6 ml. of 0.85-percent sodium chloride solution to the sediment an rotate tube vigorously for 30 seconds to uniformly resuspend antigen par ticles.

9. Transfer antigen emulsion to a stoppered 13 x 100 mm. tube. This emul sion, if stored in the refrigerator, may be used for 48 hours after preparatio

Preliminary Tests

1. Check the delivery of the hypodermic needle (26-gage—attached to glass syringe) or capillary pipette. Adjustments should be made so that ap proximately 125 drops are obtained (0.008 ml. per drop) from each mill liter of antigen emulsion.

2. Complete tests with positive spinal fluid, negative spinal fluid, and salin controls as described under "Qualitative Tests With Spinal Fluid" (page 73)

3. Clumping of antigen particles will be observed in the positive spinal fluid The negative spinal fluid and saline controls should show complete dispe sion of antigen particles and the optimum number of particles per microscopi field.

[6] Experimentation will be required to determine the time and speed of centrifuging t obtain a sediment with the optimum number of particles. The sediment should b in such an amount that, when resuspended in 0.6 ml. saline, one drop (0.008 ml.) of th emulsion in 0.3 ml. spinal fluid will contain the optimum number of antigen particles pe microscopic field.

Qualitative Tests With Spinal Fluid

1. Place the required number of double-ring slides in a holder while spinal fluids are being heated.

2. Pipette 0.3 ml. of the warm spinal fluid into a ringed chamber. Positive and negative spinal fluid controls should be included.

3. Add one drop (0.008 ml.) of antigen emulsion to the spinal fluid in each chamber.

4. Rotate the slides on a flat surface with moderate vigor for 30 seconds to distribute the antigen emulsion.

5. Move the slide holder back and forth rapidly (about three complete movements a second), a linear distance of one-fourth to one-half inch, for 8 minutes.

6. Examine reactions microscopically at 100 × magnification and report observed results in accordance with the following outline. For ease in reading, the slide may be tilted.

Negative . . . . . Antigen particles dispersed, no clumping.
Weakly positive (± or 1+) . . . Antigen particles in small but definite clumps.
Positive (2+ or 3+) . . . . . Antigen particles in medium-sized clumps.
Strongly positive (4+) . . . . . Antigen particles in large clumps.

Quantitative Tests With Spinal Fluid

1. Prepare spinal fluid dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, etc., using negative spinal fluid (not saline) as the diluent.

2. Test each spinal fluid dilution as described under "Qualitative Tests With Spinal Fluid."

3. Report results in terms of the highest dilution producing a positive (2+, 3+, or 4+) reaction as described under "Quantitative Tests With Serum" (page 70).

KOLMER TESTS

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Racks, test tube, galvanized wire, for 72 tubes.

Glassware

1. Test tubes, Pyrex, 15 x 85 mm. outside diameter (O.D.).
2. Tubes, centrifuge, graduated, 15-ml., Pyrex.
3. Tubes, centrifuge, with neck, 50-ml., Pyrex.

Preparation of Serums

1. Remove serums from blood clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serum of 56° C. for 20 to 30 minutes. Previously heated serums should be reheated for 5 minutes at 56° C. on day of testing.

3. Recentrifuge any serum in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Note: If complement-fixation reactions of maximum sensitivity are desired, it is necessary first to remove the natural antisheep hemolysins from serums. This may be accomplished in the following manner.

a. Pipette one ml. of each serum into a small (12 x 75 mm.) tube and place in the refrigerator for 15 or more minutes.

b. Add one drop of washed, packed, sheep red cells to each serum and mix well.

c. Return all tubes to the refrigerator for 15 minutes.

d. All tubes are now centrifuged and the serums separated by decanting. Avoid washing cell residue from side walls or bottom of tubes.

e. These serums are then heated at 56° C. for 20 to 30 minutes. Previously heated absorbed serums should be reheated for 5 minutes.

Preparation of Spinal Fluids

1. Centrifuge and decant all spinal fluids to remove cellular and particulate debris.

829688°—49—6

2. Heat all spinal fluids received through the mail, or stored for three or more days, at 56° C. for 15 minutes to remove thermolabile anticomplementary substances.

3. Fresh spinal fluids are tested without preliminary heating.

Reagents

Saline Solution

1. Weigh 8.5 gm. of dried sodium chloride (A.C.S.) and 0.1 gm. magnesium sulfate for each liter of saline solution. These salts may be weighed and dispensed into corked test tubes to avoid daily weighing, but freshly prepared saline solution should be used for each test run.

2. Dissolve salts in freshly distilled water and filter into flasks having glass or gauze-covered cotton stoppers.

3. Place portion of saline sufficient for diluting complement, to be used in the complement-fixation test, into refrigerator allowing remainder to stand at room temperature

Sheep Red Corpuscle Suspension

1. Filter through gauze an adequate quantity of preserved sheep blood into round-bottomed centrifuge tubes. (See "Collection and Preservation of Sheep Blood," page 121). Freshly collected sheep blood should be refrigerated for 48 hours before being used.

2. Add two or three volumes of saline to each tube.

3. Centrifuge tubes at a force sufficient to throw down corpuscles in 5 minutes. (I.E.C. centrifuge No. 1 at 2,000 r.p.m.)

4. Remove supernatant fluid by suction through a capillary pipette, taking off upper white cell layer.

5. Fill tube with saline and resuspend cells by inverting and gently shaking tube.

6. Recentrifuge tubes and repeat the process for a total of three washings. If supernatant fluid is not colorless on third washing, cells are too fragile and should not be used.

7. After supernatant fluid is removed from third washing, cells are poured or washed into 15-ml. centrifuge tubes and centrifuged at previously used speed for 10 minutes in order to pack cells firmly and evenly.

8. Read the volume of packed cells in the centrifuge tube and carefully remove supernatant fluid.

9. Prepare a 2-percent suspension of sheep cells by washing the corpuscles into a flask with 49 volumes of saline. Shake flask to insure even suspension of cells.

Example:

2.1 ml. (packed cells) $\times$ 49 = 102. 9 ml. (saline required).

10. Pipette exactly 15 ml. of the 2-percent cell suspension into a graduated 15-ml. centrifuge tube and centrifuge at previously used speed for 10 minutes. A 15-ml. aliquot of a properly prepared cell suspension will produce 0.3 ml. $\pm$ 0.01 ml. of packed cells.

Note: When the packed cell volume is beyond the tolerable limits stated above, the cell suspension concentration should be adjusted. The quantity of saline which must be removed or added to the cell suspension to accomplish adjustment is determined according to the following formula:

$$\frac{\text{Centrifuge tube (15 ml.) reading}}{0.3\text{ ml.}} \times \text{Volume of cell suspension} = \text{Corrected volume of cell suspension}$$

Example 1:

Volume of cell suspension . . . . . 100 ml.
Centrifuge tube (15 ml.) reading . . . . . 0.27 ml.

$$\frac{0.27\text{ ml.}}{0.3\text{ ml.}} \times 100\text{ ml.} = 90\text{ ml.}$$

Therefore, 10 ml. of saline should be removed from each 100 ml. of cell suspension. Saline solution may be removed by centrifuging an aliquot of the cell suspension and pipetting off the desired volume of saline for discard.

Example 2:

Volume of cell suspension . . . . . 100 ml.
Centrifuge tube (15 ml.) reading . . . . . 0.33 ml.

$$\frac{0.33\text{ ml.}}{0.3\text{ ml.}} \times 100\text{ ml.} = 110\text{ ml.}$$

Therefore 10 ml. saline should be added to each 100 ml. of cell suspension. An adjusted cell suspension should be rechecked by centrifuging a 15-ml. portion.

11. Place flask of cell suspension in refrigerator when not in use. Always shake before using to secure an even suspension, as the corpuscles settle to the bottom of the flask when allowed to stand.

Antigen Dilution

1. Place the required amount of saline in a flask and add antigen drop by drop while continuously shaking the flask. The amount needed may be calculated from the number of tubes containing antigen in the test and titrations. Dilution factor is listed on the antigen bottle label. The test dose constitutes 0.5 ml. of the diluted antigen.

Example:

	Antigen (ml.)	Saline (ml.)
(If antigen titer is 1:600)	0.2	120
	0.3	180
(If antigen titer is 1:1000)	0.2	200
	0.3	300

Antigen dilution in a stoppered flask is allowed to remain at room temperature.

Hemolysin Dilutions

1. Prepare 1:100 stock hemolysin dilution as follows:

	ml.
Saline solution	94.0
Phenol (5 percent in saline)	4.0
Glycerinized hemolysin (50 percent)	2.0

Phenol solution should be mixed well with saline before glycerinized hemolysin is added. This solution keeps well at refrigerator temperature but should be discarded when found to contain precipitate.

2. Dilutions of hemolysin of 1:1000 or greater are prepared by further diluting aliquots of the 1:100 solution.

Complement Serum

1. Cell-free guinea pig serum can be obtained by centrifuging the tubes of blood and decanting serum from the clots when the laboratory practice is to bleed guinea pigs the day before the complement-fixation tests are performed. The serum from three or more guinea pigs should be pooled and returned to the refrigerator. (See "Preparation and Preservation of Complement," page 89.)

2. Dehydrated complement serum should be restored to original volume by dissolving in the prescribed amount of buffered diluent or distilled water and storing in the refrigerator.

3. Complement serum stored in the frozen state should be returned to liquid state by remaining at room temperature or at 37° C. only long enough to melt. As protein content of these serums will tend to collect at the bottom of the tube during thawing, these tubes of serum should be adequately mixed by inversion and returned to the refrigerator (6° to 10° C.).

Egg White Solutions

Note: Either of the egg white solutions herein described is a necessary component of the Kolmer complement-fixation test unless predictably satisfactory antigen-guinea-pig-serum combinations are used. (See "Complement Pretesting," page 90.)

1. Separate egg whites from yolks.

2. Remove heavy particles and filter egg whites through several layers of gauze.

3. Measure filtered egg white and add an equal volume of saline solution to prepare 50-percent egg-white solution;

OR

Measure filtered egg white and add nine volumes of saline solution to prepare 10-percent egg-white solution.

After these reagents are prepared the complement and hemolysin titrations may be assembled.

Complement and Hemolysin Titrations

1. Perform these two titrations simultaneously in the same rack.

2. Place 10 tubes (numbered 1 to 10) in one side of the rack for the hemolysin titration and 8 tubes (numbered 1 to 8) in the other side for the complement titration. Add two other tubes to the rack, one for 1:1000 hemolysin solution and one for 1:30 complement dilution.

3. Prepare a 1:1000 dilution of hemolysin by placing 4.5 ml. of saline in a test tube and adding 0.5 ml. of 1:100 stock hemolysin solution. Mix well.

4. Pipette 0.5 ml. of 1:1000 hemolysin solution into the first five tubes of the hemolysin titration.

5. Add the following amounts of saline to the hemolysin titration tubes.

Tube	Saline (ml.)	Tube	Saline (ml.)
1	None	6	0.5
2	0.5	7	0.5
3	1.0	8	0.5
4	1.5	9	0.5
5	2.0	10	0.5

6. Proceed as follows:

Tube No.	Process	Final hemolysin dilution
1	None	1:1000
2	Mix. Discard 0.5 ml.	1:2000
3	Mix. Transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 6. Discard 0.5 ml.	1:3000
4	Mix. Transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 7. Discard 1.0 ml.	1:4000
5	Mix. Transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 8. Discard 1.5 ml.	1:5000
6	Mix. Transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 9.	1:6000
7	Mix. Transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 10.	1:8000
8	Mix. Discard 0.5 ml.	1:10,000
9	Mix. Discard 0.5 ml.	1:12,000
10	Mix. Discard 0.5 ml.	1:16,000

7. Prepare 1:30 dilution of complement by adding 0.2 ml. of guinea pig serum to 5.8 ml. of saline solution.

8. Pipette 0.3 ml. of 1:30 complement into each of 10 tubes of the hemolysin titration.

9. Add the following amounts of 1:30 complement to the complement titration tubes.

Tube	Complement 1:30 (ml.)	Tube	Complement 1:30 (ml.)
1	0.2	5	0.4
2	0.25	6	0.45
3	0.3	7	0.5
4	0.35	8	None

10. Add 0.5 ml. of antigen dilution to each of the first seven tubes of the complement titration.

11. Add 1.7 ml. saline solution to each of the 10 tubes of the hemolysin titration.

12. Add the following amounts of saline solution to the complement titration tubes:

Tube	Saline (ml.)	Tube	Saline (ml.)
1	1.3	5	1.1
2	1.3	6	1.1
3	1.2	7	1.0
4	1.2	8	2.5

13. Add 0.5 ml. of 2-percent sheep corpuscle suspension to each tube of the hemolysin titration.

14. Shake each tube of the hemolysin titration to insure even distribution of cells and place rack containing the two titrations in the 37° C. water bath for 1 hour.

At this point, the complement titration and the completed hemolysin titration stand as follows:

Table 1.—Complement titration (first stage)

Tube No.	Complement 1:30 (ml.)	Antigen dilution (ml.)	Saline solution (ml.)
1	0.2	0.5	1.3
2	0.25	0.5	1.3
3	0.3	0.5	1.2
4	0.35	0.5	1.2
5	0.4	0.5	1.1
6	0.45	0.5	1.1
7	0.5	0.5	1.0
8	None	None	2.5

Table 2.—Hemolysin titration (complete)

Tube No.	Hemolysin dilution (0.5 ml.)	Complement 1:30 (ml.)	Saline solution (ml.)	Corpuscle 2-percent suspension (ml.)
1	1:1000	0.3	1.7	0.5
2	1:2000	0.3	1.7	0.5
3	1:3000	0.3	1.7	0.5
4	1:4000	0.3	1.7	0.5
5	1:5000	0.3	1.7	0.5
6	1:6000	0.3	1.7	0.5
7	1:8000	0.3	1.7	0.5
8	1:10,000	0.3	1.7	0.5
9	1:12,000	0.3	1.7	0.5
10	1:16,000	0.3	1.7	0.5

15. Remove rack from water bath and read hemolysin titration.

The unit of hemolysin is the highest dilution that gives complete sparkling hemolysis.

Hemolysin for the complement titration and test proper is diluted so that 2 units are contained in 0.5 ml.

16. Prepare a quantity of diluted hemolysin, containing 2 units per 0.5 ml., sufficient for the complement titration in accordance with the following outline:

Dilution containing 1 unit per 0.5 ml.	Dilution containing 2 units per 0.5 ml.	To prepare 2-unit hemolysin dilution mix—
		1:100 hemolysin solution (ml.)	and saline (ml.)
1:4000	1:2000	0.3	5.7
1:5000	1:2500	0.2	4.8
1:6000	1:3000	0.2	5.8
1:8000	1:4000	0.15	5.85
1:10,000	1:5000	0.1	4.9
1:12,000	1:6000	0.1	5.9
1:16,000	1:8000	0.1	7.9

17. Add 0.5 ml. of diluted hemolysin (containing 2 units of hemolysin) to each of the first seven tubes of the complement titration.

18. Add 0.5 ml. of 2-percent sheep-corpuscle suspension to all eight tubes of the complement titration. The addition of hemolysin and cells to the complement titration should be completed without delay, preferably within 5 minutes after rack is removed from the water bath.

19. Shake each tube of the complement titration to insure even distribution of cells and return to the 37° C. water bath for 1 hour. The completed complement titration is shown in table 3.

Table 3.—Complement titration (complete)

Tube No.	Complement 1:30	Antigen dose	Saline		Hemolysin	Corpuscle 2 percent suspension
	ml.	ml.	ml.		ml.	ml.
1	0.20	0.5	1.3	37° C. water bath for 1 hour.	0.5	0.5	37° C. water bath for 1 hour.
2	0.25	0.5	1.3		0.5	0.5
3	0.30	0.5	1.2		0.5	0.5
4	0.35	0.5	1.2		0.5	0.5
5	0.40	0.5	1.1		0.5	0.5
6	0.45	0.5	1.1		0.5	0.5
7	0.50	0.5	1.0		0.5	0.5
8	None	None	2.5		None	0.5

20. Remove rack from water bath and read complement titration.

The smallest amount of complement giving complete sparkling hemolysis is the exact unit. The full unit is 0.05 ml. more than the exact unit. For the complement-fixation tests, complement is diluted so that two full units are contained in 1.0 ml.

Example:

	Ml.
Exact unit	0.3
Full unit	0.35
Dose (two full units)	0.7

Dilution of complement to be employed in the test proper may be calculated by dividing 30 by the dose, i.e., $\frac{30}{0.7} = 43$ or 1:43 dilution of guinea pig serum.

The following table gives additional examples:

Exact unit	Full unit	Two full units	Dilution to use	Preparation
				Complement serum	Saline
ml.	ml.	ml.		ml.		ml.
0.3	0.35	0.7	1:43	1	+	42
0.35	0.4	0.8	1:37	1	+	36
0.4	0.45	0.9	1:33	1	+	32
0.45	0.50	1.0	1:30	1	+	29

Occasionally hyperactive complement serums are encountered which yield titrations indicating two full units per milliliter in dilutions greater than 1:43. These complements should be diluted at 1:43 to accomplish satisfactory testing. Hypoactive complement serums which require dilutions less than 1:30 are considered unsatisfactory.

Note: Tubes of the complement or hemolysin titrations showing complete hemolysis may be removed and placed in the refrigerator for later use as hemoglobin solutions for the reading standards. (See page 87.)

Complement-Fixation Tests

The regular quantitative method employing five amounts of serum or spinal fluid, with controls, may be used when quantitative results are desired.

The simplified method, using a single dose of serum or spinal fluid with controls, is equally as effective for segregation of positive reactors. The simplified procedure operates at a considerable saving of reagents and labor as compared to the quantitative method so is more adaptable to the routine of the larger testing laboratories.

Both of the above tests may be conducted in one-half volume. The amounts of complement, antigen, and other reagents needed are in this way reduced by half. Some accuracy of operation may be sacrificed by using these reduced quantities, however, since the relative effects of measuring errors are increased. Hemolysin and complement are titrated at full volume as described for the regular test. The performance of the one-half volume tests is identical with the regular methods except that halved volumes of serum, spinal fluid, and reagents are used.

Regular Simplified Tests

1. Arrange test tubes in wire racks so that there are two tubes for each serum, positive and negative control serums, and spinal fluid to be tested. Number the first row of tubes to correspond to the serum and spinal fluid being tested. Additional test tubes are included for specified reagent controls.

2. Pipette 0.5 ml. of saline into each tube of the second row.

3. Add the following amounts of saline to the four control tubes:

	ml.
Antigen control (for serum tests)	0.2
Antigen control (for spinal fluid tests)	0.5
Hemolytic system control	1.0
Corpuscle control	2.5

4. Pipette 0.2 ml. of each serum to be tested into tubes 1 and 2.

5. Pipette 0.5 ml. of each spinal fluid to be tested into tubes 1 and 2.

6. Add 0.2 ml. of 50-percent egg-white solution[1] to each tube of the spinal fluid tests and to the serum and spinal fluid antigen controls.

7. Add 0.5 ml. of the antigen dilution to the first tube of each test, either serum or spinal fluid, and to the two antigen control tubes.

8. Allow test racks to stand for 10 to 30 minutes at room temperature.

9. Prepare diluted complement during this interval. The amount needed is equivalent to 1 ml. for each tube of the test plus a slight excess.

[1] Complement serum for spinal fluid tests must be diluted in 10-percent egg-white solution unless the complement is pretested, or 0.2 ml. of 50-percent egg-white solution is added to each tube as directed in paragraph 6 above.

Note: The volume of complement serum to be diluted is determined by the amount of diluted complement necessary for the test proper and by the observed titrations. Dividing the number of milliliters of diluted complement needed by the titration dilution factor (2 full units) will give the number of milliliters of complement serum needed. Calculations may be made in accordance with the following table:

Complement titration, 2 full units	Diluted complement needed	Complement serum required	Cold saline required
	(ml.)	(ml.)	(ml.)
1:43	43	1	42
1:43	215	5	210
1:37	37	1	36
1:30	210	7	203

10. Add 1 ml. of diluted complement[1] (containing 2 full units) to all tubes of the serum tests including the antigen control tube (for serum tests).

11. Add 1 ml. of diluted complement[1] (containing 2 full units) to all tubes of the spinal fluid tests including the antigen control tube (for spinal fluid tests).

12. Add 1 ml. of diluted complement to the hemolytic system control tube.

13. Mix the contents of the tubes by shaking the racks well and place in the refrigerator at 6° to 8° C. for 15 to 18 hours.

14. Prepare the volume of diluted hemolysin needed for the test proper, allowing 0.5 ml. (containing 2 units) for each tube. Prepare a slight excess. The following formula may be used for calculating the amounts of 1:100 hemolysin solution and diluent required to prepare the needed volume of diluted hemolysin.

$$\frac{100}{\text{Hemolysin titration dilution factor (2 units)}} \times \text{Volume of diluted hemolysin needed (ml.)} = \text{Ml. of 1:100 hemolysin required}$$

Examples:

Hemolysin titer 2 units in 0.5 ml.	Diluted hemolysin needed	1:100 hemolysin required	Saline required
	(ml.)	(ml.)	(ml.)
1:3000	30	1	29
1:4000	120	3	117
1:2500	25	1	24
1:2500	250	10	240

[1] See footnote 1 on p. 83.

15. Remove each rack of tubes from the refrigerator and place in the 37° C. water bath for 10 minutes.

16. Remove each rack from the water bath and add 0.5 ml. of the diluted hemolysin to all tubes of the test except the corpuscle control tube.

17. Add 0.5 ml. of the 2-percent sheep red cell suspension (prepared the previous day) to all tubes. The 2-percent cell suspension should be agitated occasionally to insure equal dispersion of cells during the period when this reagent is being added to the complement-fixation tests.

18. Mix the contents of the tubes thoroughly by shaking each rack before returning it to the 37° C. water bath for the secondary incubation. The time required for the secondary incubation, usually 20 to 30 minutes, should be 10 minutes more than is required to hemolyze the antigen and hemolytic system controls.

19. Remove each rack of tubes from the water bath at the end of the secondary incubation period. Record observed hemolysis as described under "Preparation of Reading Standards" and "Reading and Reporting" (page 87) except in those instances wherein inhibition of hemolysis is noted in the control tube. All serums and spinal fluids showing inhibition of hemolysis in the control tube should be returned to the 37° C. water bath for a period sufficient to complete 1 hour of secondary incubation. At the end of this period, these tests are removed from the water bath, and tube readings (including control tubes) are recorded.

Regular Quantitative Tests

1. Place test tubes in wire racks, allowing six tubes for each serum and spinal fluid to be tested, arranged so that the front row contains tube 1, the second row tube 2, etc., of each specimen. Include tubes for positive and negative control serums and for reagent controls.

2. Pipette the following amounts of saline into six tubes, for each serum, starting with tube 1 in the front row: 0.9, 0.5, 0.5, 0.5, 2.0, and 0.5 ml.

3. Pipette 0.5 ml. of saline into tubes 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 of each spinal fluid test.

4. Pipette the indicated amounts of saline into each of the following reagent control tubes.

	Saline
Antigen control	0.5 ml.
Hemolytic control	1.0 ml.
Corpuscle control	2.5 ml.

5. For each serum:

Add 0.6 ml. inactivated serum to tube 1.
Mix and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 6 (control) and to tube 2.
Mix tube 2 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 3.
Mix tube 3 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 4.
Mix tube 4 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 5.
Mix tube 5 and discard 2.0 ml.

6. For each spinal fluid:

Add 0.5 ml. of spinal fluid to tubes 1, 2, and 6.
Mix tube 2 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 3.
Mix tube 3 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 4.
Mix tube 4 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 5.
Mix tube 5 and discard 0.5 ml.

7. Add 0.2 ml. of a 50-percent egg-white solution[2] to each tube of the quantitative serum and spinal fluid tests, and to the antigen control tube.

8. Add 0.5 ml. of diluted antigen to the first five tubes of each test (serum and spinal fluid) and to the antigen control tube. Shake the rack to mix thoroughly.

9. Allow racks to stand at room temperature for 10 to 30 minutes.

10. Complete the tests as indicated in paragraphs 9 through 19 of the technic for the performance of the "Regular Simplified Tests" (page 83).

[2] May be omitted if pretested complement is used, or if complement is diluted in 10-percent egg-white solution.

[2] Complement diluted in 10-percent egg-white solution unless pretested complement is used or 50-percent egg-white solution is added.

Preparation of Reading Standards

1. Heat tubes of hemoglobin solution (saved from the titration) in the 56° C. water bath for 5 minutes.

2. Prepare a 1:6 dilution of 2-percent corpuscle suspension by adding 5 ml. of saline to 1 ml. of 2-percent suspension.

3. Prepare reading standards by mixing hemoglobin solution and cell suspension in the proportions given in table 6.

Reading and Reporting

1. All serum and spinal fluid controls should show complete hemolysis.

2. Estimate the individual tube readings by comparison with the reading standards at the end of the secondary incubation period (10 minutes after antigen control tubes are hemolyzed), and record degree of complement fixation noted, except for those specimens showing inhibition of hemolysis in the control tube.

3. Read the tubes that have been returned to the 37° C. water bath for a full hour's secondary incubation, estimating and recording the degree of complement fixation of each tube and control tube by comparison with the reading standards.

4. Report the results of the regular simplified tests in accordance with table 7.

Table 7.—Simplified test reporting

7. Quantitative tests can also be reported in Kolmer units according to the same formula employed in the Kahn quantitative serum test, where S=4D. The serum or spinal fluid potency is then equal to four times the highest dilution giving a positive reaction. Examples are given in the following tabulation.

Reporting of quantitative Kolmer test

Preservation of Sheep Cells

1. Collect sheep blood in 3.8-percent sterile sodium citrate solution. (See "Collection and Preservation of Sheep Blood" page 121.)

2. Store citrated blood in the refrigerator at least 48 hours before using.

Preparation and Preservation of Complement

Preparation

1. Select three or more large healthy male guinea pigs.

2. With a needle and syringe, remove 5 ml. of blood from the heart and place in individual tubes identified by number.

3. After blood has clotted at room temperature, ring with applicator stick, and refrigerate for at least 1 hour.

4. Centrifuge and, if pretesting of complement serum is desired, remove only that quantity of serum required for the pretest. (See "Complement Pretesting."

5. Refrigerate serum on the clot until the results of the pretest are available.

6. Pool serums from all tubes (or those serums found to be satisfactory in the pretest), recentrifuge, and preserve.

OR

7. If animals are to be exsanguinated, pretesting may be accomplished by removing 2 ml. from the heart, identifying tube of blood with animal from which it was taken, and pretesting in the prescribed manner.

8. Exsanguinate guinea pigs. Stun animal to anesthetize, cut the external jugular veins, and collect blood in petri dishes or 50-ml. centrifuge tubes.

9. Allow clotting to take place for 1 hour at room temperature.

10. Loosen clot from wall of container, and refrigerate for 1 to 2 hours.

11. Decant and filter serum through gauze, centrifuge, pool clear serum, and preserve.

Preservation

Method 1.—Dehydrate complement serum from the frozen state, in vacuo, by the lyophile or cryochem methods.

Method 2.—Add an equal part of the following solution to the complement serum:

Sodium acetate	12 gm.
Boric acid	4 gm.
Sterile distilled water	100 ml.

For use, dilute 1 ml. of the preserved complement serum with 14 ml. of saline solution to prepare a 1:30 dilution.

Method 3.—Add 1.0 gm. of sodium chloride for every 10 ml. of guinea pig serum.

Method 4.—Freeze complement serum and retain in the frozen state until the day required for use.

Complement Pretesting

Note: Pretested complement will yield a predictably satisfactory combination with antigen in the Kolmer complement-fixation test. When pretesting is found to be impractical, however, egg-white solution must be employed as herein directed in spinal fluid and quantitative serum test technics.

1. Determine 2 units of hemolysin by performing a hemolysin titration as described under "Complement and Hemolysin Titrations" (page 79) employing any guinea pig serum demonstrating acceptable complementary activity.

2. Arrange test tubes in wire racks allowing six tubes for each complement serum to be tested. Guinea pig serums that will constitute a lot should be individually tested before pooling. Pooled dehydrated complement serum should also be pretested. Number each set of tubes from 1 to 6.

3. Prepare a 1:30 dilution of each complement serum by adding 0.2 ml. serum to 5.8 ml. saline and mix.

4. Pipette the following amounts of 1:30 complement serum dilution into each designated tube:

	ml.		ml.
Tube 1	0.8	Tube 4	0.8
Tube 2	0.6	Tube 5	0.6
Tube 3	0.4	Tube 6	0.4

5. Add 0.5 ml. of diluted antigen to tubes 1, 2, and 3.

6. Add the following amounts of saline to each designated tube:

	ml.		ml.
Tube 1	0.7	Tube 4	1.2
Tube 2	0.9	Tube 5	1.4
Tube 3	1.1	Tube 6	1.6

7. Shake rack to mix well and place in the refrigerator for 15 to 18 hours at 6° to 8° C.

8. Remove rack from refrigerator and place in 37° C. water bath for 10 minutes.

9. Remove from water bath and add 0.5 ml. diluted hemolysin, containing 2 units, to each tube.

10. Add 0.5 ml. of 2-percent sheep cell suspension to each tube.

11. Shake rack to mix contents of tubes and return to the 37° C. water bath for 1 hour.

12. Record degree of hemolysis observed in terms of pluses as designated under "Preparation of Reading Standards" (page 87).

13. Guinea pig serum giving complete hemolysis in all six tubes is satisfactory for use with the testing antigen. Serum showing an equal inhibition of hemolysis in both the antigen tubes, and those containing no antigen, may be considered usable if found to possess sufficient hemolytic activity as demonstrated by subsequent complement titration. When a greater inhibition of hemolysis is noted in the presence of antigen than is found in the tubes containing no antigen, an unsatisfactory complement-antigen combination is indicated.

14. When the complement-antigen combination is found to be unsatisfactory, either (1) pretest other lots of serum, (2) pretest with another lot of antigen, or (3) use the complement serum and antigen tested, adding egg-white solution to the spinal fluid and quantitative serum tests.

Retesting Anticomplementary Serums (Modified Sachs Method)

1. Heat 0.5 ml. serum in the 56° C. water bath for 15 minutes. If the serum has been previously inactivated, reheat for 5 minutes.

2. Add 4.1 ml. of accurately titrated N/300 hydrochloric acid to the serum and invert several times. Allow to stand for 30 minutes at room temperature.

3. Centrifuge 10 minutes, save supernatant fluid and discard sediment.

4. Add 0.4 ml. 10-percent sodium chloride solution to the supernatant fluid. Neutralization is not necessary.

5. Arrange two rows of five test tubes each and number 1 to 5. The second row contains the serum controls.

6. Pipette 0.5 ml. saline into tubes 3 and 4, and 2.0 ml. into tube 5 of both rows.

7. To both rows:

Add 1.0 ml. treated serum to tube 1.
Add 0.5 ml. treated serum to tubes 2 and 3.
Mix tube 3 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 4.
Mix tube 4 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 5.
Mix tube 5 and discard 2.0 ml.

The five tubes of each row now contain 0.1, 0.05, 0.025, 0.0125, and 0.0025 ml. of serum respectively.

8. Add 0.2 ml. 50-percent egg white[3] solution to each of the five tubes in both rows.

9. Add 0.5 ml. of antigen dilution to each tube of the first row.

10. Add 0.5 ml. of saline to each tube of the second row.

11. Shake rack of tubes to mix and allow to stand at room temperature for 10 to 30 minutes.

12. Add 1.0 ml. of diluted complement[3] to all tubes of both rows.

13. Shake rack to mix and place in refrigerator for 15 to 18 hours at 6° to 8° C.

14. Complete the test as described under "Regular Simplified Tests" (page 83).

15. Record degree of hemolysis in both the test and control tubes.

16. All tubes of the rear row should show complete hemolysis. However, the first tubes and second tubes carrying 0.1 ml. and 0.05 ml. of serum, re-

[3] If pretested complement is used, or if complement is diluted in 10-percent egg-white solution, the addition of 50-percent egg-white solution may be omitted.

spectively, may show slight inhibition of hemolysis. With negative serums the corresponding front tubes show the same degree of inhibition of hemolysis, and if the degree is slight, a negative report may be rendered. With positive serums inhibition of hemolysis is much more marked in tubes of the front row. Report the reactions as positive, doubtful, or negative.

Retesting Anticomplementary Spinal Fluids

1. Heat the spinal fluid for 15 minutes at 56° C.

2. Arrange two rows of five test tubes each and number 1 to 5.

3. Pipette 0.5 ml. saline into tubes 2, 3, 4, and 5 of both rows.

4. To both rows:

Add 0.5 ml. spinal fluid to tubes 1 and 2.
Mix tube 2 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 3.
Mix tube 3 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 4.
Mix tube 4 and transfer 0.5 ml. to tube 5.
Mix tube 5 and discard 0.5 ml.

5. Add 0.2 ml. 50-percent egg-white solution[3] to each of the five tubes in each row.

6. Add 0.5 ml. of the antigen dilution to each tube of the first row.

7. Add 0.5 ml. of saline to each tube of the second row.

8. Shake rack of tubes to mix and allow to stand at room temperature for 10 to 30 minutes.

9. Add 1.0 ml. of diluted complement[3] to all tubes of both rows, shake rack to mix, place in the refrigerator for 15 to 18 hours at 6° to 8° C., and complete test as described under "Regular Simplified Tests" (page 83).

10. Interpret the reactions according to the following examples:

First row:	4 4 4 1 —	Positive
Second row:	4 1 — — —
First row:	4 3 2 — —	Positive
Second row:	4 1 — — —
First row:	4 1 — — —	Positive
First row:	4 4 2 — —	Negative
Second row:	4 2 1 — —
First row:	3 2 — — —	Negative

Preparation of Kolmer Antigen

1. Weigh out 30 gm. of beef heart powder.[4]

---

[3] See footnote 3 on page 92.
[4] Obtainable from Difco Laboratories, Inc., Detroit, Mich.

2. Transfer powder to a flask fitted with a glass stopper or tinfoil-covered cork.

3. Add 100 ml. of chemically pure acetone.

4. Stopper flask tightly and mix contents thoroughly by shaking.

5. Keep at room temperature for 2 days, shaking briefly each day.

6. Filter through fat-free paper with slight squeezing of the tissue. Discard the filtrate.

7. Transfer the residue to a glass-stoppered flask, add 100 ml. of chemically pure acetone, stopper tightly, mix thoroughly, and keep at room temperature for 2 days, shaking briefly each day.

8. Filter through fat-free paper with slight squeezing of the tissue. Discard the filtrate.

9. Dry the residue in the air until free of acetone and return to a clear glass-stoppered flask.

10. Add 200 cc. of ether, stopper tightly, mix thoroughly, and keep at room temperature for 3 days, shaking briefly each day.

11. Filter through fat-free paper with slight squeezing of the tissue and discard the filtrate.

12. Dry the residue in the air until free of ether and return to a clean flask.

13. Add 100 ml. of chemically pure absolute ethyl alcohol.

14. Stopper flask tightly and mix contents thoroughly by shaking.

15. Store at room temperature for 5 days, shaking each day.

16. Filter through fat-free paper with slight squeezing of the tissue.

17. Measure the filtrate and filter sufficient absolute ethyl alcohol through the tissue to bring volume of filtrate to 100 ml.

18. Weigh 0.4 gm. of cholesterol and dissolve in 10 ml. of ether.

19. Add ether solution to the 100 ml. of alcoholic filtrate.

20. Shake thoroughly and place in a water bath at 55° C. for 1 hour to aid solution.

21. Allow to stand at room temperature for 2 days, shaking briefly each day.

22. Filter through fat-free paper.

23. Store the antigen at room temperature in the dark in a tightly stoppered bottle.

Titration of Antigen

Titrations to determine the hemolytic and anticomplementary activity of antigen for the Kolmer test (prepared as described in this manual) are not necessary. It is, however, necessary to determine the antigenic potency of each lot of antigen. This may be accomplished in the following manner:

1. Prepare a 1:80 dilution of antigen by adding 0.1 ml. antigen, drop by drop, to 7.9 ml. of saline in a small flask that is being shaken.

2. Prepare five other antigen dilutions by mixing saline and antigen dilution in the following amounts:

Tube No.	Antigen dilution		Saline		Final antigen dilution
1	4 ml. 1:80				1:80
2	4 ml. 1:80	+	4 ml.	=	1:160
3	4 ml. 1:160	+	4 ml.	=	1:320
4	4 ml. 1:320	+	4 ml.	=	1:640
5	4 ml. 1:640	+	4 ml.	=	1:1280
6	4 ml. 1:1280	+	4 ml.	=	1:2560

3. Mix several moderately positive serums that have been heated and prepare dilutions as follows:

Tube No.	Serum (ml.)		Saline (ml.)		Final serum dilution
1	1.0	+	4.0	=	1:5
2	0.5	+	4.5	=	1:10
3	0.5	+	9.5	=	1:20
4	2 (1:20)	+	2.0	=	1:40
5	1 (1:20)	+	4.0	=	1:100

4. Arrange 30 test tubes (15 x 85 mm.) in five rows of six each.

5. Add diluted serums as designated in table 10.

6. Add diluted antigen as designated in table 10.

7. Prepare a serum control tube containing 0.5 ml. of 1:5 serum and 0.5 saline and also a hemolytic system control tube containing 1.0 ml. saline.

8. Add 1.0 ml. of diluted complement (containing 2 full units) to each of the 32 tubes.

9. Shake the tubes gently and place at 6° to 10° C. for 15 to 18 hours, followed by 37° C. (water bath) for 10 minutes.

10. Remove tubes from water bath and add 0.5 ml. of hemolysin (2 units) and 0.5 ml. of 2-percent corpuscle suspension to each tube.

11. Mix by gentle shaking and return tubes to the 37° C. water bath for 1 hour.

12. Remove tubes from water bath and record degrees of hemolysis noted as illustrated in table 8. Serum and hemolytic system controls should show complete hemolysis.

Table 10.

Diluted serum (0.5 ml.)	Diluted antigen in 0.5-ml. amounts
	1:80	1:160	1:320	1:640	1:1280	1:2560
1:100	–	–	2+	–	–	–
1:40	–	1+	4+	4+	2+	1+
1:20	1+	4+	4+	4+	4+	1+
1:10	3+	4+	4+	4+	4+	2+
1:5	4+	4+	4+	4+	4+	3+

Note: The optimum dose of antigen to employ in the Kolmer tests is 0.5 ml. of that dilution that gives a 4+ reaction with the smallest amount of serum. If two dilutions of antigen give equal reactions, the dilution for use may be an average of the two. If three dilutions of antigen are equally reactive, the middle dilution may be optimum.

Before a new antigen is used it is advisable to perform a series of comparative tests (qualitative and quantitative) on weakly and strongly reactive and negative serums with an antigen of proved reactivity.

Cardiolipin-Lecithin-Cholesterol Antigens

Dr. Kolmer (1) states that the following antigens may be employed in the Kolmer tests in doses of 0.5 ml. of 1:150 dilutions:

Antigen	Cardiolipin	Purified lecithin	Cholesterol
	Percent	Percent	Percent
1	0.03	0.05	0.3
2	0.03	0.05	0.6
3	0.03	0.05	0.9
4	0.06	0.05	0.6
5	0.06	0.05	0.9
6	0.0175	0.0875	0.3

"In general terms, an antigen prepared of 0.03-percent cardiolipin, 0.05-percent lecithin, and 0.6 percent cholesterol is preferred as a mixture of maximum sensitivity consistent with specificity in tests with sera and spinal fluids."

These antigens are used in the Kolmer tests in the same manner as the regular beef heart extract antigen.

MAZZINI TESTS

Mazzini Microflocculation Tests

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Rotating machine.
2. Ring maker. The Fisher rapid ring maker may be used for this purpose, with paraffin having a melting point between 56° and 62° C.
3. Slide holder. Made of any convenient material to accommodate from one to four 2 x 3 inch slides.
4. Hypodermic needles, 25-gage.

Glassware

1. Glass slides, 2 x 3 inches, with paraffin rings, 15 mm. inside diameter, for serum tests.
2. Bottles, glass-stoppered, round, 30-ml.
3. Glass slides with concavities, 2 mm. deep and 16 mm. in diameter, for spinal fluid tests.
4. Syringe, Luer type, 5-ml.

Reagents

1. Mazzini cholesterolized antigen (See "Preparation of Mazzini Cholesterolized Antigen," page 102).

2. Buffered 1-percent saline solution, pH 6.3 to 6.4:

a. Prepare solution according to the following formula:

	gm.
Sodium chloride (C.P.)	2.025
Primary potassium phosphate (KH_2PO_4)	0.050
Secondary sodium phosphate ($Na_2HPO_4 + 12\ H_2O$)	0.425
Double distilled water	250.0
N/1 hydrochloric acid	0.8
Formaldehyde (Merck's reagent)	0.25

b. Filter and check pH of solution.

Preparation of Serums

1. Remove serums from clots by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat serums in the 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes. Serums should be reheated for 10 minutes if reexamined more than 4 hours after the original heating period.

3. Recentrifuge any specimen in which visible particles have formed during heating.

Qualitative Mazzini Test With Serum

1. Prepare antigen suspension as follows:

a. Pipette 3 ml. of buffered saline to the bottom of a 30-ml. bottle.

b. Measure 0.4 ml. cholesterolized antigen (reading from the bottom of the pipette) with a 1-ml. pipette graduated to the tip.

c. Hold the bottle in the left hand and impart a rapid rotating motion to it as the antigen is being discharged directly and at once into the saline solution from the pipette held in the right hand (antigen is blown from pipette).

d. Mix by drawing the suspension into the pipette and blowing out two or three times.

e. Allow suspension to "ripen" at room temperature for 3 hours. The suspension is then usable during the working day.

f. Shake antigen suspension gently from bottom to top of bottle several times.

g. Transfer suspension to a 5-ml. syringe fitted with a 25-gage needle.

2. Determine the proper angle at which to hold the syringe to deliver 0.01 ml. of suspension per drop.

3. Perform preliminary tests with controls as follows:

a. Place paraffin-ringed glass slide on a slide holder.

b. Pipette 0.05 ml. of positive serum, negative serum, and buffered saline into separate rings.

c. Add one drop of antigen suspension (0.01 ml.) to each serum and saline.

d. Rotate on rotating machine for 4 minutes.

Note: When rotating by hand, circumscribe a 2-inch circle 120 times per minute. When employing a Boerner-type mechanical rotator, the equivalent speed is 180 rotations per minute.

e. Examine the reactions microscopically, employing 100 × magnification. The positive serum control should demonstrate complete clumping of the antigen suspension. Negative serum and saline controls should show complete dispersion of the antigen suspension, and the presence of an optimum number of antigen particles per field.

4. Perform tests with serums as follows:

a. Place a paraffin-ringed glass slide on a slide holder.

b. Pipette 0.05 ml. of each serum into a separate ring.

c. Add one drop of antigen suspension (0.01 ml.) to each serum.

d. Rotate on rotating machine for 4 minutes. (See Note 3d, p. 98.)

e. Read each reaction microscopically, and record degree of flocculation in accordance with the outline which follows:

Typical reactions	Atypical reactions
Negative . . . . . No clumping. 1+ . . . . . Very small clumps. 2+ . . . . . Small clumps. 3+ . . . . . Medium-sized clumps. 4+ . . . . . Large clumps.	Note atypical reactions which are characterized by irregular particle aggregates of various sizes in which the small clumps and free antigen particles predominate.

f. Add a second drop of antigen suspension to each test which gives a 1+, 2+, or atypical reaction.

g. Rotate the slide for a second 4-minute period.

h. Examine microscopically. If the reaction is stronger after the addition of the second drop of antigen suspension, record the stronger result. If the reaction is the same or weaker after the addition of the second drop of antigen suspension, record the original result.

i. Retest each zonally reacting serum that fails to give a positive reaction with the second drop of antigen suspension in the following manner:

(1). Pipette 0.5 ml. buffered saline solution into each of five tubes (numbered 1 through 5).

(2). Add 0.5 ml. heated serum to tube 1 and mix.
Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 1 to tube 2 and mix.
Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 2 to tube 3 and mix.
Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 3 to tube 4 and mix.
Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 4 to tube 5 and mix.

(3). Pipette 0.05 ml. of each serum dilution to a paraffin-ringed slide.

(4). Add one drop of antigen suspension (0.01 ml.) to each serum dilution.

(5). Rotate the slide for 4 minutes.

(6). Read microscopically and record results as listed under "Typical Reactions."

j. Report results as follows:

Reading	Report
Negative	Negative.
1+	Doubtful.
2+	Doubtful.
3+	Positive.
4+	Positive.
Atypical reaction	Positive or doubtful (obtained in either of the two supplementary methods listed).

Quantitative Mazzini Test With Serum

1. Prepare serum dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, 1:32, 1:64, and higher if necessary, in the following manner:

a. Pipette 0.5 ml. buffered salt solution into each of six (or more) tubes. (Unbuffered 0.9-percent salt solution is used in the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory.)

b. Add 0.5 ml. of heated serum to the first tube and mix.

c. Transfer 0.5 ml. of the diluted serum from the first to the second tube and mix.

d. Continue transferring and mixing from one tube to the next until all dilutions have been made. Allow the mixing pipette to remain in the last tube.

2. Pipette 0.05 ml. of each serum dilution into a respective paraffin ring on a glass slide.

3. Add one drop of antigen suspension (antigen suspension used for the qualitative Mazzini test with serum) (see page 98) to each diluted serum on the slide.

4. Rotate the slide on a rotating machine for 4 minutes.

5. Read and record the reactions in the same manner as for the qualitative tests.

6. Report results according to the highest serum dilution giving a positive reaction (3+ or 4+).

Example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
4	4	4	2	—	—	Positive, 1:8 dilution.
4	3	1	—	—	—	Positive, 1:4 dilution.
4	4	4	4	1	—	Positive, 1:16 dilution.

Qualitative Mazzini Test With Spinal Fluid

Equipment in Addition to That Required For Serum Tests

1. Hot-air blower and steel-rod support with clamp. Ordinary hair dryer is satisfactory and inexpensive.
2. Glass slides. All glass concavity slides. The concavity should be not less than 2 mm. deep and 16 mm. in diameter.
3. Petri dishes.
4. Pipettes: 0.2-ml. graduated in hundredths.

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

1. Test the spinal fluid as soon as possible after collection. Grossly contaminated or bloody spinal fluids are unsatisfactory for examination. Spinal fluids are examined without heating.

2. Centrifuge the fresh spinal fluid at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

3. Decant the supernatant fluid into a clean tube.

Performance of Qualitative Mazzini Test With Spinal Fluid

1. Prepare a 6-percent acetic acid solution.

2. Pipette exactly 0.01 ml. of 6-percent acetic acid, with a 0.02 ml. pipette graduated in hundredths, onto one side of as many chambers of a glass slide as there are spinal fluids to be examined.

3. Deliver 0.1 ml. of spinal fluid (with a 1-ml. pipette) onto the opposite side of the chamber to which the acid has been added.

4. Mix the acid and spinal fluid evenly over the surface of the chamber with a wooden applicator.

5. Rotate the slide holder on a flat surface with a circular motion for approximately 1 minute.

6. Add one drop of antigen suspension (antigen suspension used for the qualitative Mazzini test with serum (see page 98) to each spinal-fluid-acetic-acid mixture.

7. Rotate the slide holder by hand for 10 minutes at 120 r.p.m. or on a rotating machine for 10 minutes at 180 r.p.m.

8. Read and report the reactions in the same manner as prescribed for the qualitative Mazzini test with serum (see page 99).

9. Report positive reactions (3+ and 4+) without further testing. Spinal fluids producing negative or doubtful (1+ and 2+) reactions are retested after concentration by use of the hot-air blower.

10. Preparation of concentrated spinal fluid:

a. Place about 30 ml. of cold water in a petri dish.

b. Pipette 1.5 ml. of spinal fluid to the bottom of a 50-ml. beaker.

c. Set the beaker in the center of the petri dish containing the water.

d. Clamp the blower on a steel-rod support and place at a distance of 2 cm. above the beaker with the lever of the dryer in the "hot air" position.

e. Evaporate the fluid to a volume of 0.2 ml. to 0.3 ml. This is accomplished in 6 to 8 minutes.

11. Proceed to test the concentrated spinal fluid in exactly the same manner as that used with the untreated spinal fluid.

12. Read and record the reactions noted in terms of positive, doubtful, or negative.

13. Report the reaction obtained with concentrated spinal fluid.

Quantitative Mazzini Test With Spinal Fluid

1. Prepare serial dilutions of spinal fluid (1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, etc.) as described under "Quantitative Mazzini Test with Serum" (par. 1, page 100).

2. Examine each dilution as indicated for the qualitative Mazzini test with spinal fluid (see page 101).

3. Read and record the reaction noted with each spinal fluid dilution.

4. Report observed reactions in terms of the highest dilution giving a positive reaction in the same manner as described for quantitative Mazzini test with serum (see page 100).

Preparation of Mazzini Cholesterolized Antigen
Preparation of the Antigen Extract

Reagents

1. Dehydrated beef heart powder [1].
2. Powdered egg yolk. This may be purchased at any reliable wholesale dairy supply company.
3. Ether. Any high-grade anesthetic ether may be used.
4. Acetone, reagent grade.
5. Alcohol, absolute ethyl.

Procedure

1. Weigh 20 gm. of dehydrated beef heart powder and 10 gm. of powdered egg yolk.

2. Place powders in a 500-ml. glass-stoppered flask and add 200 ml. of anesthetic ether.

3. Stopper flask tightly and shake on a mechanical shaker for 5 minutes or by hand for 15 minutes.

4. Filter through fat-free 24-cm. paper of medium texture. Collect and save all the filtrates, using a fresh filter paper for each filtration.

5. Repeat the extraction and filtration four additional times using 100 ml. of ether each time.

[1] Obtainable from Difco Laboratories, Inc., Detroit, Mich.

6. After the last extraction, spread the moist powder on a sheet of clean filter paper.

7. Allow powder to dry at room temperature until free of ether odor.

8. Transfer the dry powder to a 500-ml. glass-stoppered bottle.

9. Add 80 ml. of absolute alcohol and shake on a mechanical shaker for 4 hours, or allow to stand at room temperature for 3 days, shaking 5 minutes 3 times each day.

10. Filter through fat-free 24-cm. paper of medium texture into a 100-ml. wide-mouthed, glass-stoppered bottle. Discard the powder.

11. Place the combined ethereal filtrates in a large evaporating dish (8.5 inches in diameter).

12. Place the dish in a water bath at 55° to 56° C. and evaporate the ether until no bubbles rise to the surface of the liquid. At the same time warm 100 ml. of acetone to 55° to 56° C. in the water bath.

13. Pour the acetone rapidly into the concentrated ether extracts.

14. Stir thoroughly with a steel spatula and immediately decant into two 50-ml. centrifuge tubes.

15. Centrifuge at 2,000 r.p.m. for 5 minutes.

16. Decant the acetone and discard.

17. Add 10 ml. of fresh acetone to each tube. Stir with a glass rod and invert each tube a few times with the palm of the hand over the mouth of the tube.

18. Decant and discard the acetone.

19. Collect the acetone-insoluble lipoids with a spatula and add to the alcoholic extract obtained in step 10.

20. Place the bottle in the water bath at 55° to 56° C. for 30 minutes. Shake gently at frequent intervals.

21. Cool bottle in the refrigerator for 30 minutes.

22. Filter through fat-free paper of fine texture. Remove by filtration any precipitate which may appear on standing. The stock antigen extract is now ready for titration.

Titration of the Antigen

Determination of the Optimal Lipoid-Cholesterol Ratio

1. Place five tubes (13 x 100 mm.) in a rack and label them 1 to 5.

2. Pipette 0.1 ml. of the stock antigen extract directly to the bottom of each tube.

3. Pipette 0.9 ml. of 1.0-percent cholesterolized alcohol into the first tube, 1.4 ml. into the second tube, 1.9 ml. into the third tube, 2.4 ml. into the fourth tube, and 2.9 ml. into the fifth tube. Mix the contents of each tube thoroughly. These represent stock antigen-cholesterol ratios of 1:10, 1:15, 1:20, 1.25, and 1:30.

4. Take five 30-ml. bottles and label them 1:10, 1:15, 1:20, 1:25, and 1:30 respectively.

5. Prepare antigen suspensions from each of the five ratios exactly as described under the heading Qualitative Mazzini Test with Serum (page 98).

6. Allow the suspensions to stand at room temperature for 3 hours.

7. Upon completion of the preliminary titration of the antigen, tests to determine the final optimal ratio should be made by testing ratios of lipoid to cholesterol between the 1:10 and 1:15 or 1:15 and 1:20, etc.

Trial of the Suspensions

1. Shake each suspension gently from the bottom of the bottle to the cork several times.

2. Transfer each to a 5-ml. syringe fitted with a 25-gage needle. Test 30 presumably normal serums with each of the five antigens exactly as described under the heading "Qualitative Mazzini Test with Serum" (page 98).

3. Reject without further testing those antigen ratios which show any degree of clumping with these serums.

4. Select for further testing with reactive serums those ratios which on microscopic examination show very fine, completely dispersed particles without the slightest trace of clumping.

Determination of the Antigenic Quality of the Suspension

1. Select at least 10 partially positive serums.

2. Test each serum with each of the ratios which gave satisfactory reactions with the negative serums.

3. Examine microscopically. The higher the lipoid-cholesterol ratio, the more sensitive will be the reaction and the larger the flocculates.

4. For maximum sensitivity select as the titer the highest ratio which does not cause any degree of clumping in the presence of negative serums.

5. If a less sensitive antigen suspension is desired, a lower ratio is chosen.

6. Prepare sufficient cholesterolized antigen for approximately 1 month's supply.

REIN-BOSSAK TESTS

Rein-Bossak Slide Flocculation Test (1)

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Rotating machine, Boerner type.
2. Ring maker (for paraffin), hand operated or electric type.
3. Slide holder. Made of wood or metal to hold one to four 2 x 3 inch slides.
4. Hypodermic needles, 25-gage, beveled, to deliver approximately 120 drops per milliliter when syringe and needle are held vertically.

Glassware

1. Bottles: 30-ml. (1-ounce) round, glass-stoppered, or with tinfoil-covered cork.
2. Slides: Glass, 2 x 3 inch, with 12 paraffin rings of approximately 14-mm. diameter.
3. Centrifuge tubes: 3 x 1 inch, round-bottomed.
4. Syringe: Glass, 1.0- or 2.0-ml. capacity.

Reagents

1. Antigen:

A cardiolipin-lecithin solution, containing 0.2 percent cardiolipin and approximately 1.3 percent purified lecithin in absolute alcohol, that has been previously standardized against a similar antigen of known reactivity. Store at room temperature in the dark.

2. 0.9-percent salt solution:
Dissolve 9.0 gm. of reagent quality sodium chloride in 1,000 ml. of distilled water.

3. Distilled water (pH approximately 6.0):
Boil and cool to room temperature before use.

4. 1-percent cholesterol solution:
Dissolve 1.0 gm. cholesterol (Pfanstiehl, ash-free) in 100 ml. of absolute alcohol.

Preparation of Serums

1. Separate serum from the clot by centrifuging and pipetting or decanting.

2. Heat in 56° C. water bath for 30 minutes. Cool to room temperature before testing. Serums held over until the following day should be reheated for 10 minutes.

Preparation of Antigen Emulsion

1. Pipette 0.8 ml. of distilled water (boiled and cooled to room temperature) into a 30-ml. round bottle.

2. Hold the bottle with the bottom against the table and, while rotating rapidly, allow 0.9 ml. of 1-percent cholesterol to run directly and at once from a 1.0-ml. pipette onto the distilled water.

3. Continue rotation for 15 seconds.

4. Measure 0.1 ml. of the cardiolipin-lecithin antigen with a 0.1-ml. or 0.2-ml. pipette.

5. Add antigen to bottle by blowing contents from pipette.

6. Stopper bottle and shake vigorously for 1 minute by striking the bottom of the bottle rapidly against the palm of the hand.

7. Add 2.5 ml. of 0.9-percent salt solution.

8. Shake the bottle with moderate vigor for 1 minute.

9. Transfer 3.0 ml. of antigen emulsion to a 3- x 1-inch round-bottomed centrifuge tube.

10. Place tube containing antigen emulsion in the 56° C. water bath for 15 minutes.

11. Remove the tube containing the emulsion from water bath and centrifuge at 1,800 r.p.m. for 15 minutes in I.E.C. No. 1 centrifuge.

12. Remove tube from centrifuge and invert rapidly to pour off turbid supernatant fluid.

13. Wipe the walls of the tube with a piece of gauze or cotton to remove excess liquid.

14. Add 3.0 ml. of 0.9-percent salt solution.

15. Resuspend sediment by gently shaking.

Qualitative Test With Serum

1. Pipette 0.05 ml. of heated serum into one ring of a paraffin-ringed glass slide.

2. Add one drop (approximately 1/120 ml.) of antigen emulsion to the serum.

3. Rotate for 4 minutes on a Boerner-type rotator at 180 r.p.m.

4. Examine microscopically immediately after rotation.

5. Report the degree of clumping observed as follows:

Reading	Report
No clumping	Negative
Very small clumps	±
Small clumps	1+
Moderate-sized clumps	2+
Moderately large clumps	3+
Large clumps	4+

±, 1+, and 2+ reactions are reported as "weakly positive"; 3+ and 4+ reactions are reported as "positive."

Zonal Reactions

Atypical reactions are characterized by a few irregular clumps interspersed with unclumped particles. Retest serums giving atypical reactions in the following manner:

1. Pipette 0.5 ml. of 0.9-percent salt solution into each of five tubes (numbered 1 through 5).

2. Add 0.5 ml. heated serum to tube 1 and mix.
   Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 1 to tube 2 and mix.
   Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 2 to tube 3 and mix.
   Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 3 to tube 4 and mix.
   Transfer 0.5 ml. from tube 4 to tube 5 and mix.

3. Test each serum dilution in the same manner as described under "performance of the qualitative test" (page 98).

4. Read microscopically and report as the test reading the strongest reaction obtained with any of the five dilutions.

Quantitative Test With Serum

1. Prepare serial dilutions of serum (1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, etc.) as described above under "Zonal Reactions."

2. Test each serum dilution as described under "Qualitative Test with Serum" (page 106).

3. Report as the quantitative end point the highest dilution giving a four-plus reaction. These results are reported in "dils" (2) as illustrated below.

Example:

	Serum Dilutions						Report
Undiluted Serum	1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64	dils
4	4	4	4	2	1	—	8
4	4	4	4	4	—	—	16
4	—	—	—	—	—	—	1

VDRL TESTS

VDRL Slide Flocculation Tests (1, 2)

Equipment and Glassware

General Equipment

1. Rotating machine.
2. Ring maker.
3. Slide holder, wooden, for 2 x 3 inch microscope slides.
4. Hypodermic needles, 23-gage, long bevel or 22-gage regular bevel.

Glassware

1. Slides, 2 x 3 inches, with paraffin rings 14 to 15 mm. inside diameters.
2. Bottles, glass stoppered or screw capped (vinylite or tinfoil lined), round, 30 ml.
3. Syringe, Luer type, 1 or 2 ml.

Preparation of Antigen

Antigen for this test is an alcoholic solution containing 0.03-percent cardiolipin, 0.9-percent cholesterol, and sufficient purified lecithin to produce standard reactivity. Each lot of antigen must be serologically standardized by proper comparison with an antigen of known reactivity (1, 2).

Antigen is dispensed in screw-capped (tinfoil or vinylite liners) brown bottles and stored at room temperature. The components of this antigen remain in solution at normal temperatures so any precipitate noted will indicate changes due to factors such as evaporation or additive materials contributed by pipettes. Antigen containing precipitate should be discarded.

Preparation of Serum

Clear serum, obtained by centrifuging whole clotted blood, is heated at 56° C. for 30 minutes or at 60° to 62° C. for 3 minutes before being tested. All serums are examined when removed from the water bath and those found to contain particulate debris are recentrifuged. Serums to be tested more than 4 hours after being heated should be reheated at 56° C. for 10 minutes.

Preparation of Saline Solution

Buffered saline solution containing 1-percent sodium chloride is prepared as follows:

Formaldehyde, neutral, reagent grade, ml.	0.5
Secondary sodium phosphate ($Na_2HPO_4 + 12\ H_2O$), gm.	0.093
Primary potassium phosphate (KH_2PO_4), gm.	0.170
Sodium chloride, A.C.S., gm.	10.0
Distilled water, ml.	1,000.0

This solution yields potentiometer readings of pH 6.0 ± 0.1 and is stored in screw-capped or glass-stoppered bottles.

A 0.9-percent saline solution is prepared by adding 900 mg. of dry sodium chloride to each 100 ml. of distilled water.

Preparation of Slides

New slides are cleaned with Bon Ami which is removed with a soft cloth after drying. Previously used slides are first freed of paraffin, washed with soap, rinsed free of soap and then treated as new slides.

Slides are handled by the edges, while cleaning, to prevent greasy fingerprints on the testing surfaces. Serum will spread within the circles on clean slides. Failure of the serum to spread is an indication that the slide is unclean and therefore should not be used.

Paraffin rings are made by transferring heated paraffin to the slides by means of metal molds. [1]

Preparation of Antigen Emulsion

1. Pipette 0.4 ml. of buffered saline to the bottom of a 30-ml. round, glass- or screw-cap stoppered bottle.

2. Add 0.5 ml. antigen (from the lower half of a 1.0-ml. pipette graduated to the tip) directly onto the saline while continuously but gently rotating the bottle on a flat surface.

Note: Antigen is added drop by drop, but rapidly, so that approximately 6 seconds are allowed for each 0.5 ml. antigen. Pipette tip should remain in upper third of bottle and rotation should not be vigorous enough to splash saline onto pipette.

3. Blow last drop of antigen from pipette without touching pipette to saline.

4. Continue rotation of bottle 10 more seconds.

5. Add 4.1 ml. buffered saline from 5.0 ml. pipette.

6. Place top on bottle and shake vigorously for approximately 10 seconds.

7. Antigen emulsion is then ready for use and may be used during 1 day. This amount (5.0 ml.) is sufficient for approximately 250 serum tests.

Twice this amount of antigen emulsion may be prepared at one time in a 30-ml. bottle by using doubled quantities of antigen and saline. A 10-ml. pipette should then be used for delivering the 8.2-ml. volume of saline. If larger quantities of antigen emulsion are required, more than one mixture should be prepared. These aliquots may then be pooled and tested.

[1] Hand or automatic electric type ring makers may be obtained from A. H. Thomas & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Testing Antigen Emulsion Delivery Needle

The number of antigen particles per microscopic field is determined by the size of antigen emulsion drop used. For this reason the needle used each day should be checked.

Antigen emulsion is dispensed from a 22-gage, regular bevel or a 23-gage, long bevel hypodermic needle attached to a 1.0- or 2.0-ml. syringe which is allowed to stand in the antigen emulsion bottle when not in use. Sixty drops should be obtained from 1 ml. of antigen emulsion. This can be accomplished by holding the syringe so that the needle bevel is down and the dropping surface horizontal (fig. 1.). Increasing the angle at which the syringe is held diminishes the dropping surface and consequently decreases drop size. Whether this or other means of delivery are used, it is of primary importance that the proper amount (1/60 ml.) of antigen emulsion be used in each test.

Practice will allow rapid delivery of antigen emulsion but care should be exercised to obtain drops of constant size. When allowed to stand, antigen emulsion should be gently mixed before use by rotating the bottle and emptying and refilling the syringe.

Preliminary Testing of Antigen Emulsion

Each preparation of antigen emulsion should first be examined by testing known positive and negative serums. This is accomplished by adding one drop of antigen emulsion to 0.05 ml. of each serum and completing the test as described under "Qualitative Serum Test" (page 112). These tests should present typically positive and negative results, respectively, and the size and number of antigen particles per microscopic field in the negative serum should be optimum.

If antigen particles in the negative serum appear too large in size the fault will usually be found in the manner of preparing antigen emulsion. An unsatisfactory antigen emulsion should not be used.

Qualitative Serum Test

1. Pipette 0.05 ml. heated serum into one ring of a paraffin-ringed glass slide.

2. Add one drop (1/60 ml.) antigen emulsion onto each serum.

3. Rotate slides for 4 minutes. (If rotated by hand on a flat surface, this movement should roughly circumscribe a 2-inch-diameter circle 120 times per minute.[2]

4. Tests are read immediately after rotation.

Note: Known positive, weakly positive, and negative serum controls are always included.

Reading and Reporting Test Results

Tests are read microscopically, with low-power objective, at 100 × magnification. The antigen particles appear as short rod forms at this magnitude. Aggregation of these particles into large or small clumps is interpreted as degrees of positivity.

Reading	Report
No clumping or very slight roughness	Negative (N).
Small clumps	Weakly positive (W.P.).
Medium and large clumps	Positive (P).

Only the terms "positive," "weakly positive," and "negative" should be used for reporting the results of this test.

Zonal reactions, due to an excess of reactive serum component, are recognized by irregular clumping and the loosely bound characteristics of the clumps. The usual positive reaction is characterized by large or small clumps of fairly uniform size. Experience will allow differentiation to be made between this type of reaction and the zonal picture wherein large and/or small clumps may be intermingled with free antigen particles.

In those instances, or whenever a zonal type reaction is suspected, the serum in question should be diluted 1:5 and 1:25 and retested. The maximum reaction produced by either of these dilutions, if greater than that obtained with undiluted serum, is reported as the test finding. Dilutions may be prepared by placing 0.4 ml. saline in each of two test tubes, adding 0.1 ml. heated serum to tube 1, mixing well, and transferring 0.1 ml. to tube 2.

[2] The Boerner-type rotator sold by A. H. Thomas & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., set at 180 r.p.m. may also be used for this test.

Quantitative Serum Test

Quantitative tests are performed on serially diluted serum in saline, each dilution of which is treated as an individual serum and tested as described under "Qualitative Serum Test" (page 112). Freshly prepared 0.9-percent saline is used for these dilutions. Serum dilutions are prepared by placing 0.5 ml. saline in each of six or more tubes. Five-tenths milliliter of heated serum is added to tube 1, mixed well, and 0.5 ml. transferred to tube 2. This operation is continued until the sixth or last tube contains 1.0 ml. Dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, etc., are thus obtained. Each serum dilution is tested as described under "Qualitative Serum Test" (page 112).

Reading and Reporting Quantitative Test

1. Tests are read microscopically at 100 × magnification as described for the qualitative procedure.

2. Results are reported in terms of the greatest serum dilution that produces a positive (not weakly positive) reaction in accordance with the following example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64
P	P	P	W.P.	N	N	Positive, 1:8 dilution or 8 dils (3)
P	W.P.	N	N	N	N	Positive, 1:2 dilution or 2 dils (3)
W.P.	N	N	N	N	N	Positive,[1] undiluted only or 1 dil (3)

[1]Positive reaction obtained with undiluted serum.

Note: Under conditions of high temperature and low humidity, as are sometimes present during the summer months in certain areas, antigen emulsion should be stored in the refrigerator. To avoid surface drying under these conditions, tests should be completed and read as rapidly as possible.

VDRL Tube Flocculation Test (4)

General Equipment

1. Kahn shaking machine (must be operated at 275 to 285 oscillations per minute).
2. Reading lamp, fluorescent or gooseneck type.

Antigen

VDRL slide flocculation test antigen (see "Preparation of Antigen" page 109).

Preparation of Saline Solutions

1. 1.0-percent buffered saline is prepared as for the VDRL slide flocculation test (see "Preparation of Saline Solution" page 109).

2. Unbuffered 1-percent sodium chloride solution is prepared by adding 1 gm. of dry sodium chloride to each 100 ml. of distilled water.

Preparation of Serum

Clear serum, obtained by centrifuging whole clotted blood, is heated at 56° C. for 30 minutes or at 60° to 62° C. for 3 minutes before being tested. All serums are examined when removed from the water bath and those found to contain particulate debris are recentrifuged. Serums to be tested more than 4 hours after being heated should be reheated at 56° C. for 10 minutes.

Preparation of Antigen Emulsion

1. Prepare antigen emulsion as described for the VDRL slide flocculation tests (see page 110).

2. Add four parts of 1-percent sodium chloride solution to one part of VDRL slide test emulsion. Mix well and allow to stand five or more minutes (not longer than 2 hours) before use. This solution will be referred to as diluted antigen emulsion.

Qualitative Serum Test

1. Pipette 0.5 ml. heated serum into a 12 x 75 mm. (outside diameter) test tube.

2. Add 0.5 ml. diluted antigen emulsion to each serum.

3. Shake tubes on Kahn shaker for 5 minutes.

4. Centrifuge all tubes for 10 minutes at force equivalent to 2,000 r.p.m. in No. 1 or 1,700 r.p.m. in No. 2 I.E.C. centrifuge.

5. Return tubes to the Kahn shaking machine and shake for exactly 1 minute.

Reading and Reporting Qualitative Test

1. Read reactions, as soon as secondary shaking period is completed, by holding tubes close to the shade of a reading lamp with a black background, at approximately eye level. A shaded fluorescent desk lamp or a gooseneck-type lamp with a blue bulb is a satisfactory reading light source.

2. Record results as follows:

Positive . . . Visible aggregates in a clear or slightly turbid medium. All borderline reactions, where the observer has doubt regarding visible clumping, should be reported as negative.

Negative . . . No visible clumping or aggregation of antigen particles. Appearance slightly turbid or granular. Definite silken swirl on gentle shaking.

Note: Turbid or hemolyzed serums may cause completed tests to be too turbid for macroscopic reading. Fluid from these tubes may be examined microscopically. Positive reports may be rendered when large antigen-particle masses are detected microscopically if the serum tested is found to be free of particles at the same magnification.

Zonal reactions, due to excess of reactive serum component, may appear to be very weak or, in rare instances negative. Whenever a zonal reaction is suspected, another test should be performed using 0.1 ml. of heated serum and 0.4 ml. saline in place of the original 0.5 ml. serum. If a positive result is obtained with the smaller amount of serum, a positive report should be issued.

Quantitative Serum Test

1. Pipette 0.5 ml. of freshly prepared 0.9-percent saline into each of six or more test tubes (12 x 75 mm.).

2. Add 0.5 ml. heated serum to first tube and mix.

3. Transfer 0.5 ml. from first to second tube and mix.

4. Continue transferring 0.5 ml. from each tube to the next and mixing until the last tube is reached.

5. Discard 0.5 ml. from last tube.

6. Add 0.5 ml. of diluted antigen emulsion to each tube and proceed as described under "Qualitative Serum Test" (page 112).

Reading and Reporting Quantitative Test

The greatest serum dilution producing a definitely positive reaction is reported as the reactivity end point in accordance with the following example:

Serum dilutions						Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32	1:64

VDRL Spinal Fluid Test (5)

General Equipment

1. Kahn shaking machine (must be operated at 275 to 285 oscillations per minute).

Antigen

1. VDRL silde test antigen (see "Preparation of Antigen" page 109).

Preparation of Saline Solutions

1. 1.0-percent buffered saline is prepared as for the VDRL slide flocculation tests (see page 109).

2. 10-percent sodium chloride solution.

a. Dissolve 10 gm. of dry sodium chloride (A.C.S.) in 100 ml. distilled water.

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

1. Centrifuge and decant each spinal fluid. Spinal fluids which are visibly contaminated or contain gross blood are unsatisfactory for testing.

2. Heat spinal fluid at 56° C. for 15 minutes. Cool to room temperature before testing.

Preparation of the Sensitized Antigen Emulsion

1. Prepare antigen emulsion as described for the VDRL slide flocculation tests (see "Preparation of Antigen Emulsion" page 110).

2. Add one part of 10-percent sodium chloride solution to one part of VDRL slide test emulsion.

3. Mix well, and allow to stand at least 5 minutes but not more than 2 hours before use.

Qualitative Spinal Fluid Test

1. Pipette 1.0 ml. heated spinal fluid into a 13 x 100 mm. test tube. Include positive and negative spinal fluid controls in each test run.

2. Add 0.2 ml. sensitized antigen emulsion to each spinal fluid. Resuspend the sensitized antigen emulsion immediately before use by inverting container several times.

3. Shake racks of tubes on Kahn shaking machine for 15 minutes.

4. Centrifuge all tubes for 5 minutes at force equivalent to 1,800 r.p.m. in No. 1 or 1,600 r.p.m. in No. 2 I.E.C. centrifuge.

5. Return tubes to Kahn shaking machine and shake exactly 2 minutes.

Reading and Reporting Qualitative Test

1. Read reactions as soon as possible after the secondary shaking period by holding tubes close to the shade of a desk lamp having a black background.

Note: Each tube may be held motionless or shaken gently during the reading. Excessive agitation should be avoided.

2. Report results as follows:

Positive . . . . . Definitely visible aggregates suspended in a water-clear or turbid medium.

Negative . . . . . No aggregation, complete dispersion of particles, appearance turbid or slightly granular.

Quantitative Spinal Fluid Test

1. Prepare spinal fluid dilutions as follows:

a. Pipette 1.0 ml. 0.9-percent sodium chloride solution into each of five or more tubes.

b. Add 1.0 ml. heated spinal fluid to tube 1, mix well, and transfer 1.0 ml. to tube 2.

c. Continue mixing and transferring from one tube to the next until the last tube contains 2 ml. Discard 1.0 ml. from the last tube. The respective dilution ratios are 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, 1:32, etc.

2. Test each spinal fluid dilution as described under "Qualitative Spinal Fluid Test".

Reading and Reporting Quantitative Test

1. Each tube is read as described under "Qualitative Spinal Fluid Test."

2. Report test results in terms of the highest dilution of spinal fluid producing a positive reaction. The term "dils" which expresses the same dilution reactivity end point may be applied.

Example:

Spinal Fluid Dilution					Report
1:2	1:4	1:8	1:16	1:32
P	P	P	N	N	Positive, 1:8 dilution, or 8 dils (3).
P	P	P	P	N	Positive, 1:16 dilution, or 16 dils (3).
N	N	N	N	N	Positive,[1] undiluted only, or 1 dil (3).

P = Positive reaction.
N = Negative reaction.

Quantitative Determination of Spinal Fluid Protein (6)

Equipment and Glassware

Equipment

1. Photoelectric colorimeter, equipped with a blue filter of approximately 420 mu. wave length.
2. Photoelectric colorimeter cuvettes, to accommodate 5-ml. volumes.

Glassware

1. Test tubes, 13 x 100 ml. (outside diameter).

Reagents

1. 10-percent trichloracetic acid solution:
Dissolve 10 gm. of trichloracetic acid (C. P.) in 100 ml. of distilled water. Filter into a glass-stoppered flask and store at room temperature.

2. Standard serum:
Select serum free of gross bacterial contamination or hemolysis and determine the total protein concentration by Kjeldahl analysis.

Preparation of Spinal Fluid

Centrifuge spinal fluid and decant. Spinal fluids containing gross bacterial contamination or blood are unsatisfactory for testing.

Performance of the Test

1. Pipette 2.5 ml. of spinal fluid into a 13 x 100 mm. test tube.

2. Add 2.5 ml. of 10-percent trichloracetic acid solution.

3. Invert the tube twice to mix contents. Avoid foaming.

4. Allow tube to stand for 10 minutes in 37° C. water bath.

Note: Unpublished findings indicate that the precipitation of protein by trichloracetic acid solution is influenced by temperature variants; therefore the use of the 37° C. water bath is recommended.

5. Again invert the tube and pour fluid into photoelectric colorimeter cuvette.

6. Determine percentage of light transmission with unknown, using a water blank at 100-percent transmission.

7. Convert percent transmission of unknown to milligrams percent total protein by reference to a calibration chart.

Note: Spinal fluids containing high concentrations of protein should be appropriately diluted with 0.9-percent sodium chloride solution before testing so that light transmission values greater than 30-percent will be obtained. Values obtained from the calibration chart are then multiplied by the dilution factor.

Preparation of the Calibration Chart

1. Prepare 10, 20, 30, 40, 50 and 60 mg. percent protein solutions from the standard serum.

Example: If protein content of serum (Kjeldahl) is 7325 mg. percent, then to find dilution factor for 60 mg. percent standard divide 60 into 7325.

$$\frac{7325}{60} = 122 \text{ or dilution factor.}$$

Therefore 1 part of serum is diluted with 121 parts of 0.9-percent sodium chloride solution to make 60 mg. percent standard solution.

2. Test each standard solution in the same manner as described for spinal fluid.

3. Plot the light transmission values thus obtained on semilogarithmic paper.

4. Draw a line through the points on the graph.

5. A conversion chart may also be prepared showing the total protein values for each possible light transmission reading.

APPENDIX

Collection and Preservation of Sheep Blood

The following method for collecting and preserving sheep blood (1, 2) has been in use at the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory for several years with satisfactory results.

Equipment and Glassware

1. Bleeding flask, 2-liter Erlenmeyer, fitted with a No. 10 2-hole rubber stopper; filter funnel (1 inch in diameter, 2½-inch stem); rubber and glass tubing; and 13-gage hypodermic needle (fig. 1).
2. Dispensing assembly consisting of rubber tubing, clamp, and filling mantle, plus air-filter tube (fig. 2).

Reagent

1. 3.8-percent sodium citrate solution:
Dissolve 3.8 gm. of sodium citrate (A.C.S.) in each 100 ml. of distilled water. Sixty milliliters of this solution is required for each 50 ml. of sheep blood collected.

Assembly of Bleeding Flask

1. Draw a line on the 2-liter flask with a wax pencil marking off 880-ml. volume. This will provide for the collection of 400 ml. of blood in 480 ml. of citrate solution. Proportionally smaller quantities may be provided for.

2. Pour 480 ml. of 3.8-percent sodium citrate solution into the flask.

3. Cut a small piece of wire screening and place in the funnel. Tie a piece of gauze over the mouth of the funnel as illustrated in figure 1a.

4. Assemble bleeding flask, as shown in figure 1, by inserting stopper of bleeding apparatus into flask and securing it with string ties.

5. Sterilize the entire unit at 15 pounds' pressure for 20 minutes.

Collection of Blood

1. Immobilize the sheep in a standing position.

2. Raise the head until the nose and center of neck form a straight line.

3. Turn the head slightly and clip the wool from the puncture area.

4. Apply digital pressure above the collar bone to cause dilation of the external jugular vein.

BLEEDING FLASK

Figure 1

5. Sterilize the area directly over the located vein with weak iodine solution or 70-percent alcohol.

6. Apply digital pressure just below the point to be punctured, and insert the sterile needle into the skin, then into the vein.

7. Rotate the flask continuously during collection of the blood and for 5 minutes afterwards to prevent clotting.

8. Allow the blood to cool to room temperature.

10. Invert and suspend the flask as shown in figure 2.

11. Dispense the blood aseptically into sterile rubber-stoppered vaccine bottles and store in the refrigerator.

12. Remove blood mixtures from these bottles as required with a sterile syringe and needle.

Note: Sheep blood of good quality, collected and stored in the manner described, has been found satisfactory for use over a 3-month period.

Preparation of Hemolysin (Sheep Red Cell)

The following method for the production of sheep red cell hemolysin in rabbits has been successfully used at the Venereal Disease Research Laobratory for several years.

1. Select large healthy rabbits. Color of fur is not important but ear veins are more readily located in albinos.

2. Prepare sheep cell suspensions by washing sheep red cells with 8 to 10 volumes of 0.9-percent saline two or more times and then resuspending cells in 0.9-percent saline to the desired concentration.

3. Give each rabbit a series of six inoculations of washed sheep cell suspension through the marginal ear vein according to the following schedule. Injections are given at 3- to 4-day intervals, usually on Monday and Friday of each week.

Injection 1: 2.0 ml. of 10-percent cell suspension.
Injection 2: 4.0 ml. of 10-percent cell suspension.
Injection 3: 5.0 ml. of 10-percent cell suspension.
Injection 4: 5.0 ml. of 10-percent cell suspension.
Injection 5: 5.0 ml. of 20-percent cell suspension.
Injection 6: 5.0 ml. of 20-percent cell suspension.

Note: Each rabbit is inoculated subcutaneously with 0.5 ml. of sheep cell suspension, to be used that day, 15 to 30 minutes before intravenous injection is given.

Cell suspension for intravenous injection is warmed to room or body temperature and injected slowly through a 25-gage needle.

4. Test bleedings are made 7 to 9 days after the last injection, by piercing the marginal ear vein with a stylet and collecting approximately 1.0 ml. of blood in a small tube.

5. Serum is separated from test-bleeding bloods by centrifuging after clotting is completed.

6. Each rabbit serum is titrated for hemolysin content by the method described in the Kolmer complement-fixation technic (page 83).

7. Exsanguinate those rabbits having a hemolysin titration unit of 1:5000 dilution or higher.

8. Separate serums from blood clots, pool, and preserve by the addition of an equal volume of glycerin.

Use of Merthiolate As a Preservative

Grossly contaminated serums or spinal fluids are unsatisfactory specimens for serologic tests for syphilis. The effects of random bacterial contamination of body humors on serologic results are not predictable.

Although spinal fluid is usually drawn with reasonable attention to sterility, many fluids mailed to central testing laboratories, especially during the warmer months of the year, show evidences of gross bacterial contamination on arrival. Removal of bacteria from contaminated spinal fluids by centrifuging or filtration is only partially effective, since some of the products of bacterial metabolism are soluble, and changes of original spinal fluid components are not corrected or compensated for.

The use of merthiolate as a bacteriostatic agent for spinal fluid preservation has been reported (1). This compound (sodium ethyl mercurithiosalicylate[1]) curtails bacterial growth without interfering with the mechanisms of the usual serologic tests for syphilis either through chemical action or the introduction of a dilution factor.

Collection tubes containing merthiolate may be prepared as follows:

1. Prepare the necessary amount of merthiolate solution, on the day used, by adding 1.0 gm. of merthiolate powder to each 100 ml. of distilled water. Do not use commercially prepared tinctures or solutions.

2. Pipette 0.1 ml. of 1-percent aqueous merthiolate solution to the bottom of 13 x 100 mm. tubes.

3. Place tubes in vacuum desiccator over calcium chloride at room temperature protected from light. Dehydration is usually complete in 24 hours if adequate vacuum is established.

4. Prepare paraffined corks by submerging corks in hot, but not smoking, paraffin for 1 minute and removing excess paraffin from corks by rolling them on cloth while hot.

5. Remove tubes from desiccator and stopper tightly with paraffined corks.

6. Store tubes in the dark. They will remain usable for several months.

The concentration of merthiolate obtained when 2.0 ml. to 8.0 ml. of spinal fluid is added to these tubes is sufficient to inhibit bacterial growth in transit.

Smaller tubes (12 x 75 mm.) prepared in this manner and containing 1 mg. of merthiolate are suitable for shipment of 2.0 ml. to 4.0 ml. of serum.

Reporting Quantitative Serologic Results

Methods for reporting quantitative test results have been selected by each of the test author serologists. Terminology used for reporting these findings is not similar for all methods. For this reason a simple reporting method that may be applied to all quantitative flocculation and complement-fixation tests utilizing serum or spinal fluid dilutions is presented (1).

Quantitative reporting is not similar for the many different tests for syphilis even in those instances wherein a common term such as "units" is used. The units of one testing procedure may have no constant relationship to the units of another. Hence, an identical finding in two or more tests may result in reports of different numerical values. This may be visualized by comparing the several reports that may be issued from a single quantitative test finding when different designated reporting methods are applied.

To illustrate this point, a hypothetical situation will be used in which a specimen is found to give positive reactions in dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, and 1:16; doubtful reactions at 1:32 dilution, and negative findings in greater dilution, in each of four testing methods. Using the Kahn, Kolmer, Eagle, and Kline test procedures, the reported results would be in the proportions of 64, 64, 24, and 16, respectively.

The differences in reported titers, in these instances, are attributable to the dissimilar methods of calculation and interpretation applied to observed findings. It is more desirable that titer variations, in quantitative serologic tests for syphilis, be reflective of changes in specimen reactivity, since these tests are performed for the sole purpose of quantitating the reactive component of serums or spinal fluids. Any easily understood reporting method applicable to all testing procedures of this type would serve the useful purpose of diminishing the confusion sometimes attendant to the clinical application of these laboratory findings.

A simple statement, in numerical terms, of the greatest dilution at which the tested specimen produced a positive reaction, in the designated test, presents itself as the most logical type of quantitative serologic report. Such a manner of reporting, now prescribed by some technics, is applicable to other dilution procedures. It is necessary, however, that the number value of such reports be accompanied by some identifying word or phrase in order that they may be differentiated from the variable serologic term "units."

It is therefore suggested that quantitative serologic reactions be reported in terms of the greatest dilution in which the tested specimen produces a positive reaction and that the term "dils," a contraction of the word "dilutions," be used to identify these dilution reactivity end points. For this purpose, reactivity end points would be those reactions described as "positive" by the technic used. By this means, reactions of identical intensity would receive the same report, in terms of dils, when different testing methods are employed.

A recording of "16 dils" attached to the report of a quantitative serologic test for syphilis would indicate that the tested specimen produced positive reactions in dilutions up to and including, but not greater than, 1:16. A specimen found to react positively only in the undiluted state would be reported as a "1 dil" reactor. A comparison of this and other reporting methods is presented in the following table.

Specimen 1 Reaction: Positive in dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, and 1:16; doubtful in dilution of 1:32; negative in greater dilution			Specimen 2 Reaction: Positive in dilutions of 1:2, 1:4, 1:8, 1:16, and 1:32; doubtful in dilution of 1:64; negative in greater dilution
Tests	Reports		Tests	Reports
	Technic method	Recommended method		Technic method	Recommended method
		Dils			Dils
Kahn	64 units	16	Kahn . . .	128 units	32
Kolmer . . .	64 units	16	Kolmer . .	128 units	32
Eagle	Reagin titer of 24, or positive to 1:24 dilution	16	Eagle . . .	Reagin titer of 48, or positive to 1:48 dilution	32
Kline	16 units	16	Kline . . .	32 units	32
Mazzini . . .	Positive to 1:16 dilution.	16	Mazzini . .	Positive to 1:32 dilution.	32

The method herein recommended for reporting results of quantitative serologic tests for syphilis is simple, since the numerical value indicates the greatest dilution at which the specimen was found to produce a positive reaction and because the term "dils" will indicate to the physician receiving the serologic report that only the dilution factor is considered.

Several arguments can be brought against the use of this reporting method, however. One of these may be that a finer estimation of reactivity end point would be desirable and that this could be accomplished by using interpolation factors between positive and doubtful reactions. Another is that each dilution zone represents four reading values, e.g., 1+, 2+, 3+, and 4+, so that the reported number should be four times the dilution end point.

The precision of spot testing, as is employed in testing serial specimen dilutions, is limited. To report findings obtained by this means in a series of very small divisions only magnifies the lack of absolute reproducibility inherent in serologic testing procedures. Multiplying the dilution factor by 4 may also tend to convey a false impression of relative specimen reactivity levels. When this method is used for only one of two tests, the "units" reported are four times greater for one test even though both testing procedures are of equal sensitivity.

Since serum dilution reactivity end points are commonly used for reporting results of agglutination and precipitin tests for typhoid, paratyphoid, typhus fever, and other diseases, many persons are familiar with the meaning of this type of laboratory report. A standardized method of reporting quantitative reactions of serologic tests for syphilis, following the same pattern, should also be readily understood and accepted.

foreword

Unquestionably one of the most difficult problems facing the physician in the field of syphilis today is the interpretation or evaluation of the serologic test. In modern diagnostic procedure. an understanding of the laboratory report on blood and spinal fluid is a necessity; in some cases, serologic findings alone must be accepted as the sole criterion for diagnostic decision.

The increased use of quantitation in serologic testing, associated with the advent of rapid therapeutic measures, creates for the clinician a variety of problems. The interpretation of doubtful or false positive tests in individuals presenting no clinical evidence or history of syphilis, and further complication of this difficulty by the subjection of serums in such cases to a battery of tests yielding widely discrepant results, constitute two major problems. Since titered serologic findings afford guidance in the determination of diagnosis and treatment adequacy, their correct interpretation is essential; it is therefore imperative that the physician keep abreast of new modifications in the serologic procedures now commonly employed.

It is in response to this new and important problem of the interpretation of laboratory tests that this publication has been prepared. To a revision of the 1938 supplement, "Diagnosis of Syphilis by the General Practitioner," has been added a totally new section on the interpretation of laboratory tests for syphilis. This 1949 edition, offering a discussion of the various technics used in blood and spinal fluid tests, affords the general practitioner a comprehensive source of information as to the selection of a good laboratory and the interpretation of the serologic results provided by it.

It is hoped that this new publication will be of assistance to every physician who wishes to become cognizant of the value of the serologic test in the diagnosis and treatment of syphilis.

ntroduction

When the first edition of this supplement, "The Diagnosis of Syphilis by the General Practitioner," was proposed 12 years ago, this country was just beginning its campaign to "stamp out syphilis" within a generation. At that time, the greatest public health need seemed to be case finding; the practitioner's greatest contribution to case finding might be his expanding use of serodiagnosis; and his greatest need was a new approach to thinking about syphilis. It seemed necessary to emphasize for him three points:

1. That syphilis is a disease, not a disgrace; and that under appropriate clinical circumstances, he should not be deterred from considering it as a diagnostic possibility because his patient "comes from such a nice family."

2. That the clinical diagnosis of syphilis, though often difficult differentially from other diseases, even for the expert, would be expedited if the practitioner learned certain relatively simple clinical points as "suspicion-arousers," which demand laboratory confirmation or denial.

3. That modern serodiagnostic tests (as of 1937) were 95-percent efficient in establishing the diagnosis of syphilis; and that he should do more of them.

How much, if anything, was accomplished in these respects is difficult to assess. The function of the doctor in requesting blood tests in patients in whom he suspected syphilis (or indeed routinely in all the patients he sees) was shortly thereafter largely taken over by a campaign of mass blood testing of whole population groups. This has been and is compulsory by law in many States for premarital and prenatal examinations; sometimes by fiat as in the armed services or in industry; sometimes voluntary. It is now the unusual adult American who has not had his blood tested for syphilis in the last decade; and even fewer may expect to escape one or more such tests in the next generation. How many million routine blood serologic tests have been done in these years on supposedly healthy persons or on those with illnesses clearly not due to syphilis is a matter for conjecture; but one might not far miss the mark if he guessed 50 million.

This Nation-wide mass use of blood testing has created a new and major problem for the practitioner. How shall he interpret a positive result in an apparently healthy person or in one whose illness contains no historical or objective clinical suggestion of syphilis?

This problem has necessitated a new section to be added to this 1949 edition, on the interpretation of serologic results.

It is not germane to the present publication to inquire into the results of an effort, which has lasted nearly 15 years, to study the incidence of fresh infections with syphilis in the United States, nor is it germane to assess the part which various control measures, including the advent of penicillin, may have had on that incidence. However, the doctor still has an important role to play if syphilis is eventually to be brought under control. As of today, it is clear that he must have some idea how to interpret, not only the patients' complaints and physical findings (to which the first edition was wholly directed), but also the laboratory's report!

part 1. THE CLINICAL DIAGNOSIS OF SYPHILIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS

The physician's share of the syphilis control program hinges on two major points—case finding and case treatment. They are inextricably interwoven. It will do little good to bring under treatment a million patients if the treatment given them is inefficient. On the other hand, treatment, no matter how efficient, will not solve the problem unless patients are actually recognized and provided with its benefits.

On the whole, experience has convinced me that in spite of all present-day shortcomings, the treatment element is better performed than case finding. Bad as it often is, the treatment of those patients actually submitted to it does accomplish a great deal. That a major decrease in the incidence of syphilis is not yet apparent is due, I believe, largely to the fact that so many syphilitic patients pass completely unrecognized until the damage of infection of others or the ultimate breakdown of the individual has already occurred.

What are the reasons for this failure? Case finding involves two elements—the correct diagnosis by the physician of patients with actual lesions of syphilis, and organized effort to search out the patient who has no lesions. In which of these two elements does the medical profession fail? I believe it fails in both, and for three reasons.

1. The doctor's puritanical state of mind

Too many doctors still believe that nobody has syphilis except Negroes, prostitutes, and criminals. Their own patients, failing to fall into one of these classes, are too well born, too moral, too well educated, too well to do to be infected. Too many doctors, surprising as it seems, still think of syphilis as a disgrace, not as a disease, and hesitate to suggest the necessary steps for diagnosis lest the patient's feelings be wounded. Too many, even if they do recognize syphilis, still think of it as well-earned punishment for sin, and do less than their part in administering or arranging for proper treatment.

2. Failure to realize the prevalence of syphilis

Such statements as "10 percent of the adult population is infected" fall on uncomprehending ears, and are as difficult to interpret in terms of personal experience as the billions of the national debt. Even if the facts of 250,000 or more fresh infections each year and a total of some 10,000,000 syphilitic adults in the country are accepted, there is no appreciation of the fact that all social classes, not only the lowest, are to some extent involved.

These two reasons combine to produce in the minds of many physicians what Stokes so neatly calls "a low index of suspicion." The possibility of syphilis is dismissed as incredible. That syphilis can occur in the clientele of the family doctor who has known his patients for a lifetime, is beyond belief. It is likewise incredible that the specialist's patients, well educated and relatively well to do, can be infected with a disease which he believes to be limited to social groups with which he does not deal.

The medical profession's attitude of mind must be remedied before case finding in syphilis is adequately successful.

3. Inaccurate diagnosis of syphilis

The third and most important reason for failure in case finding lies not in the confusion of morals and medicine, but in the diagnostic inaccuracies of medicine itself. So far as syphilis is concerned, there is still too great reliance on clinical acumen; too little appreciation of the fact that syphilis can so imitate or be imitated by other diseases that differential clinical diagnosis is sometimes literally impossible; too little awareness that the possible lesions of syphilis are so diverse that in these complicated days few physicians can be expected to recognize them all.

The teaching of syphilis in medical schools is sometimes scattered through all general and special departments, is sometimes centralized in special clinics, and is sometimes carried on in both fashions. Whichever method is used, there is usually far too much detail. The student is expected to learn expertness in the diagnostic differentiation of genital lesions, of skin rashes, of ocular lesions, of cardiac disorders, of neuropsychiatric diseases. He is expected, as part of his general training, to acquire knowledge in special fields to which the several experts in these fields have devoted lifetimes. If he makes use of special textbooks devoted to syphilis, he is faced with the same difficulty in concentrated form. There is a tendency to require that he know the differential diagnostic points between, for example, pityriasis rosea and the macular syphilide, between hepatic syphilis and cholecystitis, between tabes dorsalis and subacute combined sclerosis. The details of these and similar points are insisted upon to the exclusion of the far simpler principles which ought to govern diagnosis. The forest is lost in contemplation of the trees.

The complaints of the syphilitic patient

In history taking, every medical student is taught, as the first step, to record the patient's complaint in his own words. If the syphilitic person complains at all, of what does he complain, and how valuable is his complaint in arousing suspicion of syphilis? Almost never does he say "I have syphilis." Instead, he says he has a sore on the penis, a skin rash, a sore mouth or throat, sore eyes, falling hair, malaise, fever, headache, rheumatism, pain in the abdomen, nausea and vomiting, constipation, shortness of breath, weakness, difficulty in urination, infected corns, loss of sexual desire, pains in his legs—in short, the same complaints that greet the doctor every day among his non-syphilitic patients.

Who is concerned with diagnosis?

To what physicians does the patient go with these complaints? First and foremost of course, to the family doctor, the general practitioner. If he thinks himself wise enough to choose his own specialist, or if he goes to a polyclinic hospital, his original contact is with one or another specialist (rarely the syphilologist). Patients with primary or secondary syphilis gravitate to the urologist, gynecologist, dermatologist, ophthalmologist, laryngologist, orthopedist, or even the neurosurgeon. The same group of specialists, plus the general surgeon, internist, obstetrician, neurologist, and psychiatrist, encounter the patient with late syphilis. The pediatrician struggles with the problems of congenital syphilis bequeathed to him by careless obstetrics. In short, no special branch of medicine unless it be the allergist (and even he would find syphilis if he deliberately searched for it) is exempt from having to decide, not infrequently but often, whether his patient has syphilis or some other disease.

Can the family physician, the general practitioner, have the clinical knowledge of all these branches of medicine adequate to permit him to recognize syphilis when he sees it? To ask the question is to answer it. Can the urologist or dermatologist have sufficient knowledge of internal medicine, neurology, psychiatry, and ophthalmology to enable him to deal properly with late syphilis? Can any physician lacking special training in dermatology recognize clinically all or even a fair proportion of patients with syphilitic skin lesions? To ask these questions is to answer them, too.

Who must diagnose syphilis?

It is obviously impossible to expect of the general practitioner expertness in diagnostic differentiation in all the special branches of medicine in which the lesions of syphilis may fall, and likewise impossible to exact of the specialist an adequate knowledge of general medicine and of all other special branches than his own as well. How then is the problem of diagnosis to be solved? Not by the creation of a special group of syphilologists, whose function in this domain is presently described, but by leaving the diagnosis of syphilis precisely where it is, in the hands of every physician no matter what his special training.

If this is to prove successful in the case-finding element of the control program, there must, however, be less insistence on details of clinical diagnosis and more on fundamental principles. I am convinced that the average medical student, general practitioner, and specialist can be taught all that is necessary for him to know of the clinical manifestations of syphilis and their recognition (outside his own special field) in far simpler fashion than is the present custom, in far less time than the medical curriculum usually devotes, and in far less space of printed matter than is expended by current texts on syphilis.

Role of the syphilologist in diagnosis

Syphilology as a diagnostic specialty does not and cannot exist. While it is true that the syphilologist, if he is competent, is a well-trained internist with added knowledge adequate to his special field of the particular specialties of dermatology, ophthalmology, neurology, and psychiatry, he is far more often called upon to apply this knowledge to the problems of treatment than to those of diagnosis. In the latter respect he serves only as a consultant, and, unfortunately, rarely at that. His patients come to him for the most part already diagnosed as syphilitic by another physician. His job is to find out what kind of syphilis, what structures have been damaged by syphilis (and other diseases as well) and to what extent, and to estimate the effect of this damage in planning treatment.

Fundamental principles of diagnosis of syphilis

Considering the disease as a whole, there are only three fundamental principles of diagnosis:

1. Raise the index of suspicion of the doctor. Let him realize that syphilis is the most prevalent of all the major infections, and that some of his own patients may be infected.
2. Emphasize repeatedly that syphilis is often difficult to diagnose clinically, even for the expert; that clinical suspicion is easier to arouse than is clinical certainty to determine.
3. Emphasize still more repeatedly that clinical suspicion, once aroused, can in most instances be accurately resolved into certainty by the serologic test. In untreated syphilis, the serologic test is 95 percent efficient.

EARLY SYPHILIS

Primary stage

Diagnostic maxims

Every medical student should be required to learn by heart the six diagnostic maxims shown in figure 1. These maxims are sufficiently self-explanatory as to require no textual expansion. If they were generally applied, the proportion of patients coming under treatment for primary (especially seronegative primary) rather than secondary syphilis (i.e., when the chance of cure is 20 percent greater than a few days later)[1] would be enormously increased. At present, and in spite of intensive educational efforts with the lay public, only 10 percent of patients with early open-lesion syphilis report in the seronegative primary stage; the remaining 90 percent have already developed seropositive primary or secondary syphilis. This is not altogether due to delay in the patients first reporting to a physician for diagnosis, but is in part—and large part—due to delay on the physician's part in arriving at the diagnosis. Urologists and gynecologists are the worst offenders.

DIAGNOSTIC MAXIMS IN PRIMARY SYPHILIS

1. Any genital sore in male or female is possibly primary syphilis until proved to be otherwise.

2. Any indolent lesion anywhere on the body (especially lips, tonsils, fingers) which fails to heal in 2 weeks may be primary syphilis.

3. The diagnosis of primary syphilis is a laboratory, not a clinical, procedure.

4. Do not treat suspected primary syphilis locally until repeated darkfields are negative.

5. Do not give antisyphilitic treatment on suspicion; prove the diagnosis.

6. There is reason for urgent haste in diagnosis; hours count!

figure 1

[1] This statement is as true since the advent of penicillin as it was in 1937, when this supplement was first written.

Diagnostic confusion in primary syphilis

A list of 13 conditions (11 of them nonsyphilitic and all of them common) with which genital primary syphilis may be clinically confused is shown in figure 2. A similar list of common diagnostic confusions in extragenital primary syphilis appears in figure 3.

Each of these conditions except gonorrhea implies the presence of a sore. With gonorrhea a special word of caution is necessary. Suspect all patients with gonorrhea of simultaneous infection with syphilis (intraurethral chancre, painless discharge masked by gonorrheal pus), but particularly suspect those patients with painless, rubbery, discrete inguinal adenopathy.

With the other genital conditions enumerated, the presence or absence of satellite bubo is of little importance. In about 30 percent of patients with primary syphilis, the bubo is completely absent, and in most it does not appear until the chancre has been present about a week. In extragenital primary syphilis, however, the bubo may be the first "suspicion arouser."

Diagnosis of primary syphilis

The necessary diagnostic steps in primary syphilis are stated in figure 4. They should be applied whenever any of the diseases specified in figure 2 are thought to be present.

To what extent these minimum modern diagnostic procedures are not applied, even by experts, is shown by the League of Nations study of early syphilis. In the cooperative clinics of the world, only 16 percent of the cases diagnosed as primary syphilis had been verified by these laboratory procedures. If the situation is thus bad among experts, what must it be with the rest of the medical profession![2]

Urgent haste in reaching a diagnosis is essential:

1. For the protection of others.
2. For improved chance of "cure" for the patient himself. Literally, hours count, and days are all-important. Delay is inexcusable.

The darkfield microscope is the sine qua non of early diagnosis. Few physicians possess this equipment or are experienced in its use. In most areas, however, there is a syphilologic consultant, or a private

[2] In American clinics, at any rate, this situation has greatly improved; and the use of the darkfield microscope in the diagnosis of early syphilis is nearly routine. Alas, as much cannot be said for private practitioners!

DIAGNOSE PRIMARY SYPHILIS BY—

1. Darkfield of surface serum; if negative, repeat at least three times on consecutive days before local treatment.

2. If surface darkfield is negative, do darkfield of aspirated serum from lesion's base,

OR

Darkfield of aspirated material from lymph node.

3. If you have no darkfield microscope, send the patient at once to someone who has; or send a capillary tube specimen (see text) to nearest laboratory.

4. Do serologic test at first visit.

clinical or health department laboratory which is properly equipped, which the patient or a specimen may reach within a few hours. It is not worth while, therefore, to describe the darkfield technic or the differentiation of Treponema pallidum from other spirochetes. The inexperienced physician cannot learn sufficient expertness by reading about it; the expert does not require written text but has acquired his knowledge by actual practice.

Lacking this practice, the physician should not purchase a darkfield apparatus and attempt his own instruction. He should on the contrary, whenever primary syphilis is suspected, do one of two things:

1. Preferably, he should at once send the patient in person to a properly equipped colleague or laboratory, where the darkfield of surface serum and, if necessary, of serum obtained by aspiration of the base of the lesion or neighboring lymph node may be promptly carried out.

2. If no such colleague or laboratory is available in the neighborhood, he should at once prepare and send to the nearest health department laboratory (by first-class air mail special delivery if necessary, with a request for a telephoned or telegraphed report), a capillary tube specimen obtained by the following technic:

If the lesion is covered with a crust or scab, remove it. Then wash the lesion thoroughly with a gauze sponge wet with plain tap water (no soap) or normal salt solution, to remove gross surface infection. This should be dried off, and the surface of the lesion abraded with a dry sponge sufficiently to provoke slight bleeding and exudation of serum. As oozing occurs, gently wipe away the first few drops, especially if they contain much blood, waiting for a drop of clear serum to appear. It is often necessary to squeeze the lesion. It is desirable to obtain serum from the depth, not the surface, of the lesion. A drop or two of clear serum is aspirated with the tiny rubber bulb furnished, or by capillary attraction, into the capillary tube. Seal both ends of the tube with beeswax (not with heat), and mail at once in the provided container.

If it is necessary for the physician to aspirate the lesion or a lymph node (repeated surface darkfields being negative) for capillary tube transmission to a laboratory, the technic is as follows: There is required a sterile Record or tightly fitting Luer syringe fitted with a stout needle of at least 20-gage. A drop or two of sterile normal salt solution is drawn into the syringe. The overlying skin is painted with iodine and alcohol and the lymph node (or indurated base of the lesion) steadied between thumb and finger of the left hand. The needle is inserted well into the node, penetration of the capsule being indicated by the ability to move the node with the needle. The drop of salt solution is injected into the body of the node, the needle is manipulated in various directions to macerate the tissue about its point, and the injected salt solution and tissue juice aspirated. This is placed in the capillary tube as above. Capillary tube outfits are furnished free of charge by many State boards of health.

The presence of T. pallidum in serum from a suspected lesion makes a positive diagnosis of syphilis, and treatment should be commenced at once. Failure to find the organism does not mean that the lesion is not syphilis. Carry out the serologic follow-up for 4 months as directed in all such cases.

Secondary stage

Diagnostic maxims

Six relatively simple maxims (fig. 5), should, like those for primary syphilis, be learned by heart. The clinical diagnosis of secondary syphilis, often extraordinarily difficult even for the expert, will thereby be enormously simplified.

The first of these—the serologic follow-up on any lesion which might possibly have been primary syphilis, takes into consideration two important points: (1) That it is highly desirable to recognize secondary syphilis before it develops (the serologic test always becomes positive before the actual appearance of lesions), and (2) that the lesions of secondary syphilis may either be completely lacking or so trivial and evanescent as to be overlooked by patient and physician alike.

The next five maxims draw attention to the fact that the common lesions of secondary syphilis are five: generalized skin eruptions, mucosal lesions, alopecia, iritis, and arthralgia. There are of course other manifestations which may and do occur, but in comparison with these five they are rare. Ninety-five percent of all patients with secondary syphilis will present one or a combination of these five manifestations.

The maxims also emphasize, by indirection, that the clinical differentiation of these lesions from other conditions is often difficult or impossible, and that diagnostic safety depends entirely on two points:

1. That the physician suspect secondary syphilis when any one of these manifestations occurs, and

2. That he check his suspicion by a blood serologic test.

Fortunately for accuracy of diagnosis, the serologic test has its highest negative value during the secondary stage of syphilis. It is always positive (100 percent). If it is negative to all tests, there is practical assurance that the clinical suspicion was wrong, and that the patient has some other disease.

Cutaneous secondary syphilis

In figure 6 are listed 40 skin diseases (though not in order of frequency or importance) which may mimic or be mimicked by secondary syphilis.

These range from such common conditions as ringworm (dermatophytosis), boils, pityriasis rosea, hives (urticaria), and the itch (scabies), to such rare ones as smallpox, leprosy, and pityriasis lichenoides chronica. Even this imposing list is not complete; many still rarer skin diseases might be added, since there is hardly any skin condition, no matter how exotic, in which confusion with syphilis has not arisen.

The palmar and plantar syphilides deserve special mention (fig. 7) since their clinical differentiation from three other diseases, including the almost universal (if current-day advertisements are correct) "athlete's foot," may be literally impossible.

It is, of course, not contended that such diseases as acne vulgaris, scabies, or any of the list of 40, always look like secondary syphilis or even that they frequently do so. In the vast majority of cases, clinical differentiation is readily possible for the trained dermatologist, though there are just enough instances of any of them which even the most expert dermatologist cannot identify clinically to lend the novice pause. The word "novice" is used advisedly. In no field of medicine is the average physician less skilled than in dermatology.

For any practitioner therefore—for any physician no matter what his specialty, unless he has special dermatologic training—the only safe rule in diagnosis is to disregard entirely the niceties of clinical diagnosis, to suspect secondary syphilis in any patient with a generalized skin eruption no matter what its duration or appearance, and to test the suspicion by an immediate serologic test of the blood.

Mucosal secondary syphilis

Figure 8 is designed to draw special attention to a fact too often forgotten—secondary syphilis may completely spare the skin, and involve only the mucous membranes. Equally important, the mucosal lesions may be and often are extraordinarily trivial, a single mucous patch on the lip, an eroded surface of a hemorrhoid.

Oral lesions

How trivial such lesions may be about the mouth is pointed out in figure 9, which lists 23 diseases of the buccal mucosa with which secondary syphilis may be—and often has been—easily confused. The simple erosions of syphilis cannot be clinically differentiated from the erosions of the vermilion border of the lip produced by lip biting. Diffuse syphilitic pharyngitis is indistinguishable from simple pharyngitis except by its longer duration. Papulo-erosive lesions on the tonsils may delude the laryngologist into removing these organs at considerable risk to himself, under the mistaken diagnosis of chronic tonsillitis; any large syphilis clinic will average about six cases a year of this grave error. At the angles of the mouth, the mucous patch of syphilis mimics exactly the much more common "split lip." In fact, there are few adults who have not at some time had oral lesions which might have been secondary syphilis—a "stomach ulcer" (aphthous stomatitis), tonsillitis, pharyngitis.

Patients with these conditions tend to consult the family physician or the laryngologist. In far too many instances syphilis is not suspected, and the diagnosis of the more benign lesion is made on inspection alone, without further examination. When any of these 23 conditions are thought to be present, the physician should:

1. Suspect the possibility of syphilis.
2. As the first step in checking this suspicion, strip the patient and examine skin and genitalia. If any lesions are present in these areas, no matter what their appearance, do an immediate serologic test.
3. If skin or genital lesions are absent, do a serologic test anyway, if the offending lesion fails to heal in 10 days.

Genital lesions

The list of diseases commonly confused with secondary syphilis about the male or female genitalia is less lengthy (only 16 in number) and less formidable, but includes such common and simple conditions as herpes progenitalis, trauma (abrasions), anal fissure, hemorrhoids, scabies, and venereal warts. Such patients usually gravitate to the family physician or the urologist, gynecologist, or proctologist. The rules for diagnosis are exactly as for oral lesions. Alopecia

The hair loss of early syphilis is patchy, moth-eaten, worse in the hair margins of the scalp, but usually involves all body hair as well. It is common but often missed because not looked for. To experienced observers, it is one of the most characteristic lesions of early syphilis and is recognizable at a glance. The less initiated may be readily confused by four other conditions (fig. 11). Two of them are common, i.e., generalized hair loss following acute or chronic illness, and alopecia areata. When any patchy hair loss occurs, the physician will guard himself against the possibility of missing early syphilis if he follows the steps of figure 11.

syphilitic about the appearance of either of these. The most expert ophthalmologist cannot differentiate them clinically from iritis (fig. 12) or neuroretinitis due to other causes.

Since syphilis is responsible for from 10 to 70 percent of all cases of iritis (depending on the type of clientele) and about 30 percent of all cases of neuroretinitis, the only safe rules for the family physician and ophthalmologist are, in all such cases:

1. Suspect syphilis.
2. Examine immediately the skin and mucosae for other lesions of early syphilis.
3. Whether or not such lesions are present, do a blood serologic test at once.

These steps should be the first, not the last part of the diagnostic study. When they are omitted, many an unfortunate syphilitic patient has been subjected to useless removal of teeth and tonsils, to prostatic massage, gallbladder drainage, even to brain operations without benefit, but with possible detriment to his eyes, and with danger to the operator and the community.

Lesions of bones and joints

Involvement of the bones and joints in early syphilis is far more common than is generally supposed. Symptoms are more important than signs. The usual manifestations are:

1. Osteocopic pains, often nocturnal, involving the shafts of the long bones, especially the tibia. Localized tender areas may be present on palpation though no other abnormalities are obvious.

2. Arthralgia. Dull aching and stiffness of the joints, large and small, worse at night or in the morning. There are no objective or X-ray changes.

3. Hydrarthrosis, usually involving the knees and ankles. No X-ray changes.

4. Actual acute periostitis (commonest in the tibia) in which, owing to its acuteness, X-ray changes are absent for the first few weeks.

There is nothing about the first three of these manifestations to differentiate them from a variety of other conditions, and in fact the mistaken diagnoses of "neuritis," "rheumatism," and "infectious arthritis" (acute, subacute, or chronic) are commonly made. These mistakes can be avoided only if the family physician and the orthopedist will, in all such cases:

1. Suspect syphilis.

2. As the first step in checking suspicion, strip the patient and look for other lesions of secondary syphilis on skin and mucosae.

3. Whether or not such lesions are present, do a serologic test, since the bone and joint symptoms may be the sole clinical evidence of early syphilis.

As in ocular syphilis, these steps should be the first, not the last, of the diagnostic procedures adopted. Only in this way will grave error be avoided and some patients spared the useless extirpation of foci of infection.

Summary of diagnosis in early syphilis

The above description is conspicuous for its lack of clinical detail. No stress whatever has been laid on a history of syphilis, since this is often either lacking or confusing. Nothing has been said of generalized lymphadenopathy, or of the "tout ensemble" of the clinical picture. No attempt has been made to describe or to illustrate the differential diagnostic points of lesions. These are matters for the expert—for the syphilologist, dermatologist, urologist, gynecologist, laryngologist, ophthalmologist, and orthopedist—and are not to be learned by reading textbook descriptions or studying photographs.

Instead, every stress has been laid on the facts that primary syphilis causes genital or extragenital sores; that secondary syphilis causes generalized skin eruptions, mucosal lesions, loss of hair, iritis and neuroretinitis, and bone and joint symptoms; that these syphilitic lesions are readily confused with many other diseases, often by the general practitioner, sometimes even by the appropriate specialist; that in the presence of any of the diseases with which syphilis might be confused, syphilis should be suspected; and that this suspicion may be at once and accurately checked by a darkfield and serologic test.

If every medical student and every physician learns so much and no more of the diagnosis of early syphilis, 95 percent of delayed and missed diagnoses will disappear.

Diagnosis versus case finding in early syphilis

Both from the public health standpoint and from that of the individual patient, however, it does not suffice that the physician recognize the lesions of early syphilis when he is consulted. Too many freshly infected patients do not consult the physician at all, because of ignorance or negligence, or because infection may either be actually so completely symptomless or the symptoms so trivial that the patient is unaware of his disease. These patients must be sought out; they must be found instead of diagnosed.

Case finding in early syphilis does not differ in the least from case finding in typhoid fever, tuberculosis, or any other communicable disease. Since infection in syphilis is from person to person, rather than indirectly, the problem is even simplified. The method of case finding, reduced to its simplest elements, is shown in figure 13.

The wording of the questions in figure 13 is purposely to impress the physician and is not the form in which the patient should be addressed. From him one asks, in the vernacular if necessary: "With whom have you been exposed by sexual intercourse, or by kissing (e.g., sexual partner, friends, family), during the 4 months preceding the appearance of the chancre? With whom have you been exposed in similar fashion since the chancre appeared?" From any of the members of the first group the patient may have acquired syphilis. To those exposed to him in the latter part of the incubation period he may have given it, as well as to all of those in the second group exposed since the appearance of lesions. All such individuals should be examined

Ask each patient:

2. To whom may you have given syphilis?

Get the contacts!

for syphilis clinically and by serologic test. This is the unavoidable responsibility of every physician who makes the diagnosis of early syphilis.

It goes without saying that the physician is unlikely to obtain this information without first gaining the patient's confidence, explaining the reasons for the inquiry, and assuring the patient of secrecy and the safeguarding of his identity. The most desirable procedure is for the patient himself to persuade his contact or contacts to consult the physician. Failing this, he is often willing to supply the names and addresses of contacts who may be approached either through the agency of the trained workers provided by some health departments, or by the physician himself. The utmost gentleness and tact in dealing with such contacts is likewise essential.

The extent to which hidden syphilis may be uncovered and brought to treatment by this method of epidemiologic follow-up is illustrated by the admirable work of Smith and Brumfield, one of whose illustrative cases is modified and reproduced herewith (fig. 14).

With early syphilis every physician must be his own public health officer

The nature of the disease, the special intimacy of the personal relationship between physician and patient, preclude the handing over to health departments of such case-finding methods—unless the practicing physician demonstrates his unwillingness or inability to perform the task himself. Though in many instances there is involved a complete revolution of thought in regard to syphilis, the practitioner is certainly entitled to give the case finding of early syphilis a thorough trial.

LATENT, PRENATAL, AND CONGENITAL SYPHILIS

Latent syphilis

By definition, latent syphilis is hidden syphilis. Latency begins with the healing (spontaneous or under the influence of inadequate treatment) of early syphilis, and extends for a variable period of time ranging from a few months to a lifetime. The essential clinical facts regarding it are summarized in figure 15.

At any given moment at least one-third of all patients with syphilitic infection are in the stage of latency.

There is no way to recognize latent syphilis except by serologic tests. In latency, as at other stages of the infection, modern serologic tests are from 90 to 95 percent efficient in detecting untreated latent syphilis.

Do routine blood serologic tests

Diagnosis versus case finding in latent syphilis

The recognition of latent syphilis is much more often a matter of case finding than of diagnosis. In the vast majority of patients with latent syphilis the serologic test is done not because of a positive history of infection provided by the patient (such a history cannot be elicited in at least 50 percent of patients with latent or late syphilis), nor because the examining physician suspected syphilis on the basis of symptoms or signs, but instead, because the patient has been fortunate enough to fall into the hands of a physician or hospital where such tests are routine; or because he has been required by law or accepted practice to undergo routine testing (in military service, premarital or pre-employment examinations); or because he is being examined as a contact.

For three decades now, the serologic test has been obligatory on all admissions to the medical services of our better hospitals. During these years this procedure has been gradually extended to other services, first in-patient, then out-patient; first obstetrics, then gynecology, then neurology, psychiatry, etc. In the last few years some of the larger hospitals with public health minded staffs and trustees have widened the use of the routine serologic tests still further to include every patient admitted to in- or out-patient services for any purpose, whether for a broken finger, refraction for glasses, pneumonia, or a major operation.

This system should be adopted by every hospital in the country, to say nothing of private practitioners.

Prenatal syphilis

What has been said about the diagnosis of latent syphilis applies with double force to prenatal syphilis and the prevention of congenital infections. The interrelationships of syphilis and pregnancy may be briefly summed up as in figure 16. The fact that pregnancy is good for syphilis is emphasized by the complete absence of clinical evidence of infection in many pregnant syphilitic women. In the vast majority of them, syphilis cannot be recognized even by the most expert observers, except by a routine test of the blood (see items 1 through 3, fig. 16).

The justification for such routine serologic testing of all pregnant women, whether private or clinic patients, lies here and in the corollary that when syphilis in the pregnant woman is recognized early enough, syphilis in the child can be prevented with nearly absolute certainty (see items 4 through 6, fig. 16).

Do routine blood serologic tests on every pregnant woman

Congenital syphilis

With so many mothers recognized as syphilitic and receiving some treatment during pregnancy, outspoken clinical evidence of infantile congenital syphilis is becoming increasingly rare, and the recognition of syphilis in the infant more and more a problem of laboratory diagnosis. The fundamental steps in the recognition of early congenital syphilis are given in items 1 through 3 of figure 17. There is as much need for haste in the diagnosis of early congenital syphilis as of early acquired syphilis, for the sake of "cure" of the child.

TO FIND CONGENITAL SYPHILIS

1. Suspect every baby of known syphilitic mothers whether or not treated before or during pregnancy.

2. In such children do:

(a) Darkfield examination of scrapings from wall of umbilical vein.
(b) X-ray of infant's long bones at 2 weeks.
(c) Quantitatively titered blood test at 2 weeks.
(d) If these are negative, serologic follow-up by quantitative titration monthly for 6 months; every 6 months for 2 years.

3. In babies, suspect syphilis in:

(a) Puny, ill-nourished, wizened, "won't gain" infants.
(b) Skin rashes of any type.
(c) Snuffles.
(d) "Pseudoparalysis."

Check suspicion by routine serologic test

4. In older children and adolescents, suspect syphilis, especially:

(a) "Pink eye" (interstitial keratitis).
(b) Deafness unless clearly middle ear.
(c) Hydrarthrosis of the knees (Clutton's joints).
(d) Osteomyelitis.
(e) Peculiar second dentition.

figure 17

Item 4 of figure 17 lists the five commonest manifestations of late congenital syphilis, the appearance of any of which in individuals under the age of 25 should always arouse the examiner's suspicion. No attempt is made in this figure to list other diseases causing diagnostic confusion in early or late congenital syphilis, nor to list the comparatively uncommon manifestations of this disease. If the general practitioner, obstetrician, and pediatrician will adhere to the advice regarding routine serologic tests under the circumstances mentioned, little active congenital syphilis will pass unrecognized.

Family case finding in late and congenital syphilis

The physician must recall that whether his original syphilitic patient is man, woman, or child, his duty is not ended with this diagnosis. Every member of the family must be examined (fig. 18), clinically and by routine serologic test.

Denial of infection and a story of perfect health do not rule out syphilis. It must be searched for, both for the sake of the individual patient and the public health.

TO FIND LATE AND CONGENITAL SYPHILIS

1. Examine every member of the family of every syphilitic patient—wife, husband, children.
2. Do routine blood serologic tests on all of them!

LATE SYPHILIS

Since late syphilis may attack any part of the body, it is obviously impossible, without far exceeding the bounds put on this article, to consider all possible lesions. Fortunately for this discussion, 95 percent of all patients with late syphilis develop lesions in one or more of six systems—the mucocutaneous structures, the bones and joints, the liver, the heart and aorta, the eye, or the nervous system. Such comparative rareties as syphilis of the stomach, pancreas, kidneys, testes, etc., may be left out altogether, with the comment that adequate descriptions are available in many larger texts.

Late cutaneous syphilis

The physical characteristics of late cutaneous syphilis have been admirably summed up by Stokes, Beerman, and Ingraham, from whose book figure 19 is modified. These clinical aphorisms are, however, often inadequate for the practitioner inexperienced in dermatology, and sometimes inadequate even for the expert. Confusion arises by virtue of the fact that no less than 27 skin diseases other than syphilis may commonly possess one or more of the clinical attributes given in figure 19. These diseases, shown in figure 20, are by no means all that could be listed; they are only the comparatively common ones, and the rareties are omitted. They range from such trivialities as trauma and boils, to such gravities as epithelioma, leprosy, and fungus infections. Confronted with any skin lesion which might be one of these 27 conditions, and which possesses one or more of the characteristics given in figure 19, the novice is on relatively safe ground only if he does a routine serologic test. Here, as elsewhere in untreated late syphilis, modern serologic tests are 95 percent efficient. In the rare case missed by the serologic test, clinical suspicion may readily be

6. Sharp margination; "punched out" ulcers.
7. Tissue destruction and replacement with or without ulceration.
8. Central or one-sided healing with peripheral extension.
9. Superficial, atrophic, noncontractile scar with arciform configuration of original lesion.
10. Persistent peripheral hyperpigmentation.

checked by a therapeutic test with a few days of treatment with penicillin. If the lesion shows evidence of prompt healing it is probably syphilis; if no healing occurs in 10 days, it is probably something else.

These precautions would prevent such errors as the treatment for 4 years with vaccines of a spreading nodulo-ulcerative syphilide under the mistaken diagnosis of boils; or the 8-year course of light therapy for a destructive gumma of the face under the diagnosis of lupus vulgaris (actual cases).

Late osseous syphilis

Common as they are, diagnostic errors are less frequent in late cutaneous than in late osseous syphilis. There are 10 diagnostic maxims here (again modified from Stokes) which every physician, no matter what his specialty, should know (fig. 21). Even with these maxims, however, confusion is common. In figure 22 are listed 33 diseases which either early or late syphilis of bones and joints may imitate or be imitated by. The patient with the headache of syphilitic osteitis of the skull may gravitate to the neurologist for supposed neurosyphilis,

DIAGNOSTIC MAXIMS IN LATE OSSEOUS SYPHILIS
(Modified from Stokes)

1. Routine serologic test in all patients with bone or joint symptoms, especially "subacute or chronic infectious arthritis."

2. Examine patient completely—not only lesion. Look for associated skin lesions or scars.

3. Suspect tibial, skull, and shoulder girdle lesions.

4. Syphilitic bone pain is usually nocturnal.

5. X-ray indispensable in diagnosis but negative report does not exclude inflammatory lesions, especially early.

6. Do not operate or incise for diagnosis until serologic report is at hand.

7. Suspect syphilis in the "won't heal" syndrome, whether spontaneous ununited fracture, or after operative interference.

8. Suspect osteitis of the skull in severe nocturnal headache—X-ray the head before extirpating foci of infection.

9. Suspect Charcot joint in every "hypertrophic arthritis," especially of the knee.

10. Suspect early acquired or late congenital syphilis in bilateral hydrarthrosis of ankles or knees.

to the neurosurgeon for brain tumor, to the internist for nephritis or hypertension, to the opthalmologist for eye strain, or to the laryngologist for sinus disease; and he is often unfortunate enough to undergo wholesale extirpation of supposed foci of infection before his bone lesion is discovered. The sufferer from gumma of the nasal septum may be airily dismissed as a nose-picker. No special branch of medicine is exempt from the diagnostic problem of osseous syphilis, unless it be the psychiatrist, and even he may finally be called in to find the psychogenic cause of tension headache or "pains all over," the significance of which others have missed.

The implication is clear again. Diagnostic difficulty will be resolved in 95 percent of the cases by the routine serologic test, which preferably should be applied as one of the first steps in the patient's study and certainly should be applied unless the diagnosis is clearly other than syphilis and unless the therapeutic measures chosen afford prompt relief. No operations on bones or joints (except for fracture or dislocation) should ever be undertaken until the serologic report is available.

Late hepatic syphilis

In figure 23 is provided a list of 19 diseases which may mimic or be mimicked by late syphilis of the liver. Again this list is incomplete: it includes only relatively common diseases which are often encountered as diagnostic problems. When confronted with any of these possibilities or with any other disease seemingly localized in the right upper quadrant of the abdomen, the wise physician will protect himself and his patient by means of a routine serologic test. Operation unless necessitated by surgical emergency should be absolutely avoided until the result of the serologic test is available, and if it is positive, postponed pending the result of a therapeutic test.

Any patient who consults the ophthalmologist for one of the four conditions enumerated in the first sentence of this paragraph is entitled to a complete investigation for syphilis, the first step of which is of course the routine serologic test. Blindness could often be prevented if the ophthalmologist thought of syphilis first instead of last.

Cardiovascular syphilis

Therapeutic hope in cardiovascular syphilis lies in the recognition of the lesion in the stage of uncomplicated aortitis before the development of aortic regurgitation or saccular aneurysm. While uncomplicated syphilitic aortitis is often clinically unrecognizable, it may nevertheless be diagnosed correctly in a considerable proportion of cases. The criteria of diagnosis are shown in figure 25. In a patient known to have syphilis, whether on the basis of a positive serologic test or by a history of infection with subsequent treatment with a resultant negative serologic test, the presence of any three of the criteria shown in the list above makes almost certain the diagnosis of uncomplicated aortitis, and the presence of any two makes the diagnosis at least possible, provided mitral disease be absent.

However, the symptoms and signs of cardiovascular syphilis may be closely imitated by other forms of heart disease, or in the case of saccular aneurysm, by other noncardiac diseases as well (fig. 26). Essential hypertension and aortic atherosclerosis may closely mimic uncomplicated aortitis; rheumatic aortic regurgitation is often impos-

Neurosyphilis

In the neurologic domain, diagnostic confusion between syphilis and other diseases is more frequent than at any other stage of the infection. Four nonsyphilitic diseases may closely mimic acute syphilitic meningitis; 17 other conditions may be clinically indistinguishable from the catchbasket manifestations of late meningovascular neurosyphilis. Tabes may be confused with 12, and general paresis with 13 other diseases (fig. 27). As with the other lists, this one is by no means complete; it represents only the quite common causes of diagnostic difficulty. Every syphililogic consultant has seen patients with acute meningeal neurosyphilis subjected to unnecessary craniotomy by competent neurosurgeons (because, of course, of inadequate preoperative investigation for syphilis); patients with late meningovascular neurosyphilis treated for years as migraine; patients with tabes diagnosed as "neuritis" or "rheumatism"; patients with paresis dismissed as neurasthenic or psychoneurotic. The consequences of such diagnostic errors are particularly disastrous to the individual patient.

As with dermatology, it is too much to expect of the medical student or practitioner that he shall be familiar with the intricacies of neuropsychiatric diagnosis. Indeed, some of the confusing diseases do not even seem to enter the neurologist's domain, as for example migraine, chronic alcoholism, optic atrophy, possible Charcot joint, corns (malum perforans), and neurasthenia. Whether or not a neuropsychiatric consultant is available, therefore, the practitioner can best guard himself against missing neurosyphilis by (1) suspecting syphilis when he is confronted with what purports to be any of the conditions listed in figure 27, as well as in other neuropsychiatric disorders, (2) checking his suspicion by a blood serologic test, and (3) if the blood test is found to be positive, or even if it is negative, when history and physical evidence of syphilis are highly suggestive, the routine examination of the cerebrospinal fluid also.

Summary

The average physician does not possess sufficient knowledge of all the medical specialties to permit him to recognize clinically all the varied manifestations of syphilis which may fall within these special domains. He can remedy this deficiency if he will:

1. Keep constantly in mind the fact that syphilis is a prevalent disease.
2. Remember to what extent syphilis may imitate or be imitated by many other diseases.
3. Familiarize himself, from the lists given in this article and from other sources, with the names of those diseases causing most diagnostic confusion.

These statements apply not only to the general practitioner, but also to the specialist particularly when the patient presents symptoms and signs outside his special field of interest.

Such a diagnostic approach to syphilis, coupled with case finding by means of the routine serologic examination of contacts and families of syphilitic patients, and a more widespread use of such routine testing in general medical practice, would aid vastly in the ultimate elimination of the disease.

part 2. INTERPRETATION OF LABORATORY TESTS

In the first edition of this supplement (and also above) it was stated that blood serologic tests for syphilis (hereafter abbreviated STS) were 95 percent efficient. It is probable that the statement still holds true. Nevertheless, with the mass blood testing of the past decade, the remaining 5 percent of inaccuracy—in part, negative results when the patient actually has untreated syphilis, but also, and causing greater confusion, positive results caused by other conditions—has become important to the general practitioner and constitutes a major portion of the practice of the consultant syphilologist. What does one do when confronted with a positive STS in a patient in whom there is no reason to suspect syphilitic infection, or even a reasonable opportunity of exposure to infection?

Some elementary discussion of the immunology and serology of syphilis, and of the technical and biologic pitfalls involved, is essential to clear thinking. It is not necessary that the doctor be familiar with the technical details of laboratory procedure; but he should know how to choose a good laboratory, and how to interpret the results it provides.

ANTIGEN-ANTIBODY REACTIONS

When man is subjected to an antigenic stimulus, e.g., bacterial infection, the injections of vaccines or of foreign proteins, he elaborates antibodies directed specifically against the offending antigen. These antibodies may be detected in his blood serum by appropriate laboratory tests, e.g., complement-fixation reactions, in which, in a complicated serologic set-up, the hemolysis of red blood cells or the absence of hemolysis is used as an indicator; or flocculation reactions, in which the serologic system involves only the mixture of blood serum with the test antigen, and the result is read in terms of presence or absence of floccules or precipitate in the mixture.

Antibody response in syphilis

When a man is infected with syphilis and certain other treponemal infections (see below), at least two, and possibly more, antibodies are elaborated, and appear in his blood serum.

Specific antibodies against T. pallidum

These may be measured at present both directly and indirectly. Direct measurements are difficult and laborious, since the virulent T. pallidum has not yet been successfully grown on artificial media; and antigens prepared from extracts of the organism are not available. That such humoral antibodies are present may, however, be experimentally shown in vivo by protection tests in animals (i.e., intradermal inoculation of a normal rabbit with a mixture of serum from a patient with untreated syphilis plus a suspension of virulent treponemes); or in vitro by immobilization tests (the direct observation under the microscope of such a mixture). By appropriate laboratory technics, moreover, it may be shown that this treponemicidal antibody which appears in syphilitic infection is different from the nonspecific antibody which is the basis of all present practical technics in the serodiagnosis of syphilis (see the next section). However, these direct technics for demonstrating treponemicidal antibodies are still experimental; and are not practically utilizable at present.

Efforts to measure the treponemicidal antibody indirectly by serologic tests performed with an antigen prepared from nonvirulent cultured spirochetes (e.g., the Reiter strain or others, none of which is T. pallidum) are unsatisfactory for a variety of reasons.

Nonspecific antibodies against tissue extracts

Concurrently with the appearance of treponemicidal antibodies in syphilitic infection, there also develops another antibody, nonspecific with respect to T. pallidum, which reacts with antigens prepared from ether-extracted, alcoholic (lipoid) extracts of various mammalian, fish, or plant tissues. The most satisfactory tissue for the preparation of such an antigen is beef heart.

This antibody, called reagin (because it reacts), is the one which is detected in all present-day routine serodiagnostic tests for syphilis.

Nature of reagin

Reagin has not yet been exactly identified chemically. Like most antibodies it is associated with the gamma-globulin fraction of serum. Its source has not been clearly established, though it is assumed that in part, at least, it is locally elaborated in the lesions of syphilis. The strongest bit of evidence for this is its local production in the nervous system, i.e., reagin appears in the spinal fluid only if the nervous system (meninges, blood vessels, or parenchyma) has been invaded by the T. pallidum and is not passively transferred from blood to spinal fluid. Like other antibodies, however, it may cross the placental barrier.

Reagin in the blood serum of normal persons

There is some evidence that reagin, or a reagin-like substance, is present in minute amounts in the blood serum of all normal persons. In the vast majority, the amount is far too small to interfere with the results of modern serodiagnostic tests. In a very few persons—perhaps 1 in 1,000 to 1 in 5,000—it may be present in amounts large enough to cause such interference, and to produce transitory or even permanently positive tests (usually weakly positive) in the absence of syphilis or of any other extraneous influence.

Moreover, in about 20 percent of the population—perhaps those with a mild to moderate degree of hyperglobulinemia, especially hyper-gamma-globulinemia—the amount of reagin (or reagin-like substance) may be increased under the stimulus of various extraneous influences other than syphilis, to such a point as to provide a positive STS. This increase, usually temporary, may in some instances persist for years or even, perhaps, be permanent.

Qualitative detection of reagin

In all laboratories, serodiagnostic tests for syphilis are usually performed with a fixed amount of the patient's serum, e.g., 0.5 ml. to 0.05 ml., depending on the test employed. The presence or absence of reagin in this standard amount of serum is then reported in terms of words (positive, doubtful, or negative) or in terms of plus marks (0, ±, +, ++, +++, ++++). From the latter have arisen the famous words "4 plus" which, to laymen and to many doctors alike, spell a verdict of the worst that can happen.

Quantitative detection of reagin

However, reagin may be present in the blood serum in amounts ranging from those too tiny to detect at all (as in normal persons—see above) to a relatively enormous concentration. The actual amount present may be measured (in terms of units, not plus marks) by several different technics, of which the most commonly used is the simple method of serial dilution of patient's serum. Assume, for example, a series of tubes in which the amount of antigen remains constant, but the amount of patient's serum varies from whole serum to 1:65,536, the dilution accomplished by a twofold falling dilution of serum, transferring from each tube to the next an equal quantity of patient's serum and normal salt solution. This is a 17-tube series. If the result is positive in the first tube only (whole serum), negative in all the rest, the serum is said to contain 1 unit of reagin. If the result in the first tube is only partial, the result (by qualitative nomenclature) is reported as doubtful or as "less than 1 unit." So little significance does a 2+ or 3+ result possess! If positive in the first to eighth tubes inclusive, but negative in the rest, the result is read as 128 units. One remarkable serum from a patient with late cutaneous and osseous syphilis, observed by the writer, was positive in a dilution of 1:32,768 (i.e., contained 32,768 units)!

This is the dilution unit system employed by most serologists. Its results may be reported as positive either in terms of units (e.g., 16 dilution units) or in terms of dilution (e.g., 1:16). There are two important exceptions to the dilution unit system in the United States, employed respectively by Kahn and by the New York State Department of Health. Kahn utilizes a serial dilution system as do most workers, but reports results in terms of 4 times the actual dilution, i.e., a positive serum with 16 dilution units is said to contain 64 "Kahn units," etc. The reason for this is not clear. The New York State Health Department accomplishes quantitative titration not by varying the amount of patient's serum, but instead by varying the dose of complement in a complement-fixation serologic system; and the "units" (or "index") of this test, while comparable in serial repetitions of the same technic, are not comparable with any system of dilution units.

Serologic tests in treponemal diseases

Reagin is produced in identical fashion and in comparable amounts in the four closely allied treponemal diseases of man: syphilis (due to the T. pallidum), bejel (a Syrian variant which is probably syphilis), yaws (T. pertenue), and pinta (T. carateum). The causative organisms of these conditions are morphologically identical, though their geographic distribution is not. Bejel is apparently confined to Syria, yaws and pinta to the tropics (including the West Indies, Mexico, and northern South America), while syphilis is world-wide in distribution. In this country, there is little cause for clinical confusion.

Positive tests in these diseases are to be regarded as true, rather than as false positive tests.

Rate of development of reagin in syphilis

The average incubation period of syphilis is about 3 weeks (from infection to the appearance of the chancre). The duration of the primary stage (from appearance of the chancre to the development of secondary syphilis) is about 6 weeks. The duration of the secondary stage (from the first generalized outbreak to the eventual disappearance of the original and relapsing skin and mucosal infectious lesions) is about 2 years.

Reagin is not detectable in the blood during the incubation period. In the absence of all treatment it appears, on the average, by the time the chancre (primary syphilis) is about 1 week old, gradually increases in amount until the secondary outbreak is fully developed, stays at this level for some months or years, and then (probably in most cases) falls off slightly on a quantitative basis. This is illustrated by figure 29 in which the time divisions are distorted to show (early) in weeks, (intermediate) in months, (late) in years.

figure 29.—The hypothetical course of development and disappearance of reagin in patients with untreated syphilitic infection

Note that reagin first appears about a week after the appearance of the chancre (about four weeks after infection) and reaches a maximum at the appearance of secondary lesions. It probably stays at about this maximum, if the patient is untreated, for a year or two; and then begins spontaneously to decrease in quantitative titer.

Note that the baseline indicating time is interrupted and out of proportion to indicate respectively, weeks, months, and years.

Specificity versus sensitivity of serologic tests

It is a fact long well known to serologists that by adjustment of reagents in serologic systems, a test can be developed which is so sensitive as to give positive results in all (or most) serums tested, i.e., in all (or most) normal persons; or so insensitive as to give negative results in all (or most) persons with syphilis. The aim and ambition of all serologic investigations has been to develop a test on the one hand so specific as to give negative results in normal persons and yet so sensitive as to provide positive results in all persons with syphilis, i.e., a test which is wholly specific.

There is no such test, and until virulent T. pallidum is grown on artificial media, with the development of an antigen capable of selectively combining with the specific antibodies produced by this organism, it is wholly improbable that there will be such a test. So long as the serodiagnosis of syphilis rests on the detection of a nonspecific antibody with beef heart lipoid, so long will it be necessary to juggle reagents in trial and error cook-book fashion in order to provide a test which furnishes the highest sensitivity in syphilis and at the same time the lowest incidence of false positive results in nonsyphilitic persons.

It is essential for the physician to know, moreover, that both specificity and sensitivity of any given serologic technic will vary slightly or even considerably when certain types of specimens are submitted to the identical technic:

1. In two different laboratories on the same day, or
2. In the same laboratory on two different days.

Thus, a specimen which contains a minimal quantity of reagin, if divided into 12 equal parts and tested by, e.g., the Mazzini technic in 12 different laboratories, may yield positive results from 4, doubtful from 4, and negative from the others. Or, in the same laboratory on 12 consecutive days, the same specimen may provide equally conflicting results.

This variation is inherent in the complicated biologic nature of serologic tests and is due to a number of technical factors, some of which are deterioration of reagin under varying conditions of storage, slight variation in some of the reagents used (antigen, salt solution, etc.), slight variation in pipetting minute amounts of reagents or serum. These factors apply even to the simpler flocculation tests.

This variability of result, wholly unfamiliar to patients and often so to their doctors, is a matter of especial importance in quantitative serologic testing (see page 54).

SEROLOGIC TECHNICS

Types of serologic tests in daily use in American laboratories are shown in table 1. These tests are known by the names of their serologist-originators. All of them depend on identical physicochemical phenomena; and they differ from each other only in minor technical details. Properly performed, no one of them holds any advantage over any other (with the possible exception of those tests which employ cardiolipin antigen).

[1] These are all modifications of the original Wassermann test.
[2] These may be performed as macro- (tube) or micro- (slide) flocculation tests .
[3] The name of this test suggests that a positive result "presumes" that the patient has syphilis and that a negative result "presumes" that he does not. This is not true.
[4] The name of this test suggests that a negative result "excludes" syphilis as a diagnostic possibility. This is also not true.

The use of names (e.g., Kahn test, Eagle test, etc.) in reporting serologic results should be abandoned, as routine practice, as serving only to confuse the clinician. Instead, results should be reported in the generic term "serologic test for syphilis," abbreviated STS.

Screen tests

Two of the technics enumerated in table 1, i.e., the Kahn presumptive and the Kline exclusion, are supersensitive tests. Reagents are so adjusted as to produce maximum sensitivity. In each case, however, the adjustment is so delicately set as to produce technical false positive results in a substantial number (up to about 5 to 10 percent) of wholly normal serums.

Because of increased sensitivity in syphilis, however, many laboratories utilize one or the other of these technics as "screen tests" to which all specimens are originally submitted. If the result is negative, it is presumed to be negative with other less sensitive "standard" technics, and is so reported to the doctor without further ado. If the result is doubtful or positive, the test is repeated with standard technics and is reported as such only if confirmed by the less sensitive methods.

This is an acceptable procedure in a busy laboratory which tests several hundred specimens a day. However, if the system is utilized, a report to the doctor should be limited to negative specimens only, and should read:

"Supersensitive screen test negative," eliminating entirely the use of the terms "Kahn presumptive" and "Kline exclusion" which, as pointed out in a footnote to table 1, permit neither the presumption or the exclusion of a clinical diagnosis.

Positive or doubtful supersensitive screen tests should never be reported unless confirmed by standard technics, and then without reference to the supersensitive technic.

Serologic battery

Some laboratories submit each specimen to testing by a number of different technics ranging from 3 to 10 or more, and report the result of each to the doctor, e.g., an actual result on a single specimen:

Kolmer	4 4 0 0 0
Eagle complement-fixation	Positive
Kahn presumptive	3+
Kline exclusion	4+
Kahn standard	4 units
Hinton	Negative
Eagle microflocculation	2+
Eagle macroflocculation	±
Mazzini	Doubtful
Cardio VDRL[1]	Negative
Cardio RB[2]	Negative
New York State Health Dept. WaR:	1.2

This is nonsense, and can only result in complete confusion on the doctor's part.

[1] VDRL: Venereal Disease Research Laboratory.
[2] RB: Rein - Bossak.

A result such as the above indicates only that:

1. The patient has a small quantity of reagin or a reagin-like substance in his blood, and
2. That the various serologic technics differ slightly in sensitivity.

The major purpose of a serologic battery, which may be limited in a busy laboratory to two or at most three technics, is for intralaboratory check of technical performance. For the average physician, no other useful purpose is served, and the reporting of "battery results" should be discontinued.

It is true that for the expert syphilologist a "serologic pattern" developed by battery testing may be of some, but never decisive, diagnostic aid, in the following respects:

1. Conflicting results, such as the above example, may partially substitute for serologic quantitation, in that they suggest (but do not absolutely prove for any technic) a low rather than a high reagin titer, i.e., the over-all serologic pattern is one of weak positivity.
2. In some cases of syphilis (usually congenital) and in some with biologic false positive (BFP) tests, complement-fixation tests may sometimes be positive when all flocculation technics are negative.
3. Since cardiolipin antigen may be adjusted to be both more specific and more sensitive than standard antigens, a negative cardiolipin report in the face of positive reports with other tests may indicate a BFP result. This is true, however, only when the comparative quantitative sensitivities of the several antigens employed are known.

National and international serologic surveys

The League of Nations Health Organization, and later the United States Public Health Service, attempted to bring order out of serologic chaos by fostering several serologic conferences. To these were invited the leading serologists of the world, who applied their own technics simultaneously to large numbers of identical specimens from persons with known diagnoses—syphilis in various stages, treated and untreated; normal persons; and persons with various nonsyphilitic conditions, known or suspected sometimes to give BFP results (e.g., leprosy, tuberculosis, jaundice, pregnancy, etc.).

These surveys demonstrated that in the hands of the originator serologists, most technics gave approximately equal results, as follows:

Specificity.—No technic provides absolutely specific results. In most standard tests, the margin of error of false positive results (technical or biologic) in normal persons was from 0.5 to 1.0 percent, i.e., from 1 in 100 to 1 in 200 specimens tested. With the supersensitive screen tests, this margin of error was from 5 to 10 percent.

Sensitivity.—No technic provides results so sensitive as to be positive in all known syphilitics, treated or untreated. Taking all cases of syphilis as they come, treated and untreated, the several standard technics were positive in 70 to 85 percent of all syphilitics tested, the supersensitive technics in 85 to 90 percent.

Local serologic surveys

Having demonstrated the performance of serologic technics as carried out by their originators, it was a logical and necessary step to determine the extent to which these results could be duplicated under routine laboratory conditions in the hands of many technicians. These local serologic surveys were begun and have been continued under the auspices of the United States Public Health Service. As a start, the performances of State health department laboratories were compared with a reference laboratory and with each other on the same basis as in previous surveys (see above). Later, as the adequacy of individual State laboratories was demonstrated, or, if inadequate, their performances improved, the survey system was gradually extended. Many, if not all, State health department laboratories have organized and currently operate their own surveys, checking the performance of branch and local health department and commercial laboratories.

Shocking inadequacies in serologic diagnosis were uncovered by the gradual extension of this system. In one privately operated commercial laboratory known to the writer, 56 percent false positive tests were reported from a group of normal serums; in another, only 20 percent positive results in a group of known syphilitics!

Constant check and recheck has greatly improved this serious situation, and now in most urban communities of the United States, serodiagnostic laboratories are formally or informally "approved" by local or State health departments. In choosing a laboratory for his own cases, each physician should assure himself, by inquiry:

"Does your laboratory collaborate in periodic serologic surveys; and is it approved by the health department?"

How to choose a good laboratory

A good serologic laboratory is one which:

1. Checks its results technically (intralaboratory) by the use of two or more serologic technics with each specimen (i.e., an approach to the serologic battery, for a further discussion of which see page 44).

2. Checks its results technically (interlaboratory) by periodic comparison with another laboratory of known excellent standards, and with specimens derived from patients with known diagnoses (the serologic survey, for which also see preceding sections).

3. Checks its results clinically against the patient material of a good syphilis clinic. This is the most important check of all; and the one least often carried out.

4. Is prepared, routinely or on request, to furnish quantitative titrations of blood serums and spinal fluids.

Unless a serodiagnostic laboratory can assure the physician that it fulfills these four qualifications, it should not be employed.

REPORTING SEROLOGIC TESTS TO THE DOCTOR

As indicated in previous discussion, most large serodiagnostic laboratories perform routine tests:

1. On a qualitative basis only, i.e., with a fixed amount of patient's serum; or if quantitation is employed routinely (as in the Kolmer test), on a very rough basis only.

2. With intralaboratory check by use of two or more serologic technics, perhaps including a supersensitive screen test.

How shall results be reported to the physician?

Since qualitation, not quantitation, is the usual routine, the laboratory should properly report to the physician only in terms of one of three answers to a single question: "Is reagin present in this specimen?" The answers, the phenomena observed in the laboratory which permit them, and the terms which should be used in reporting to the physician, are shown in table 2.

Plus marks (±, +, ++, +++, ++++) must be abandoned in reporting. If these symbols are nevertheless used, the physician should understand that:

"++++," i.e., "4 plus," refers to all serums which under standard qualitative conditions of testing give "complete" positive reactions. The plus marks furnish no information whatever as to whether the serum in question contains, on a quantitative basis, 1 unit only of reagin, or as much as 32,000 units.

"+, ++, +++," i.e., "1, 2, or 3 plus," are terms which are applicable only to the tiny range of serologic activity included in the laboratory's objective observation that the reaction for reagin in the amount of serum used in the standard qualitative test is present but incomplete; and the result is doubtful. On a quantitative basis, such serums contain less than 1 dilution unit of reagin.

"Zero" means that the laboratory could not demonstrate reagin in the amount of serum tested, and that the result is negative.

Only the over-all result, in terms of the single phrase "STS (serologic test for syphilis) positive, doubtful, or negative" as the case may be, should be reported to the physician. (Excepting the possible use of supersensitive screen tests, this assumes that the laboratory uses, as it should, two or more standard tests of approximately equal specificity and sensitivity as intralaboratory check). Nothing is gained, and much confusion added, if the laboratory reports the results of individual, named technics, especially if these conflict.

Table 2

Question	Laboratory result observed: the reaction (complement-fixation or flocculation) is:	Answer to original question	Result to be reported to physician
Is reagin present in this specimen?	Present and complete..	"Yes"	Positive
	Present but incomplete	This result permits the laboratory to give an answer which may be interpreted in 2 ways: (a) "We cannot be certain," (b) "Yes, but in minimal quantities only."	Doubtful
	Absent	"No"	Negative

Considering the important fact that no technic holds any material advantages over any other, the laboratory should report and the physician is entitled to assume as follows:

Positive means that a complete reaction for reagin was obtained, in the amounts of serum tested, with all technics employed.

Negative means that reagin could not be found in the specimen with any technic employed.

Doubtful means that the results of several technics simultaneously employed on the same serum were conflicting, e.g., Kolmer negative, Kahn standard positive, Mazzini doubtful. Such a report usually implies further, as indicated by table 2, either that (1) the specimen does contain a minimal quantity of reagin detected because one or more of the tests employed was slightly more sensitive than another; or (2) that the laboratory was not certain of the technical accuracy of its own performance.

A laboratory report is not a diagnosis

The physician is well aware that when the laboratory reports a trace of albumin in the urine, 12 percent eosinophilia in the blood, or a fasting blood sugar of 130 mg. percent, the diagnosis in the patient from whom the specimen comes is not necessarily nephritis, trichiniasis, or diabetes. Such a laboratory report indicates only that something is wrong; it is the doctor's job, on the basis of knowledge of his patient's history, physical and other laboratory findings, and clinical course, to determine what that something is.

In the same manner, the report of an STS as positive, doubtful, or negative constitutes only an objective finding in the laboratory, and does not supply a diagnosis in the patient. This can be reached only after consideration of all the evidence, clinical as well as laboratory.

Fallibility of the laboratory in interpretation of serologic tests

The discussion so far has brought out the following points:

1. Serologic tests for syphilis are complex immunochemical phenomena. They are not simple chemical reactions, such as $NaOH + HCl = NaCl + H_2O$, providing exactly predictable quantitative results. Their complexity leaves them liable to gross technical error (see discussion of technical false positive results below).

2. No serologic test has yet been developed which is absolutely specific for syphilis. The best of them occasionally yield repeatedly positive results in normal persons, and often may do so in nonsyphilitic persons exposed to extraneous influences (see discussion of biologic false positive results below).

3. No serologic test has yet been developed so sensitive as always to be positive in patients with untreated syphilis in any stage of the infection; and all serologic tests due to syphilis may be reversed from positive to negative under the influence of antisyphilitic treatment (usually in patients with recent infections, less commonly in those with long-standing syphilis of more than 2 years' duration). Thus, false negative tests may occur in syphilis.

BIOLOGY OF SYPHILITIC INFECTION IN THE INTERPRETATION OF SEROLOGIC TESTS

Two facts are here of the utmost importance—symptomless infection and latency.

Symptomless infection

Man, as well as experimental animals, may acquire syphilis in entirely symptomless fashion, i.e., there is no chancre at the portal of entry of the treponeme, and the usual generalized outbreak of secondary skin and mucosal lesions does not occur. More often, however, the apparently symptomless infection was actually symptomatic, but its significance was entirely missed by the patient, his physician, or both. The chancre and the secondary lesions, though present, were so trivial and evanescent as to escape the patient's notice altogether, or to be dismissed as insignificant by himself and his doctor, if he consults one—a painless tiny chancre which is hidden from sight (urethra, cervix, tonsil), or which looks like a simple abrasion healing spontaneously in a few days; secondary lesions limited to one or a few macules on the trunk or a single painless mucous patch. Such minor evidences of early infection, unnoticed at the time or dismissed as of no significance, are quickly lost from memory if they ever registered there, and cannot be elicited as historical evidence in later years.

Indeed, the polymorphism, triviality, and evanescent character of early syphilis may be and frequently is such that, in the opinion of the writer, there is no adult human being who at some time in his life has not had a lesion somewhere which might have been early syphilis —an abrasion which "wouldn't heal"; an infected hangnail, a "fever blister."

How often such insignificant or wholly symptomless infections with syphilis actually occur in man is a matter for pure conjecture. Elsewhere the writer has guessed that one-third of all males and one-half of all females with syphilis fall into this category. It has also been guessed, on insufficient evidence, that symptomless infection is less common when the disease is acquired extragenitally (i.e., accidentally) than when it is acquired by sexual intercourse.

Available evidence, both experimental and clinical, indicates, however, that following symptomless infection (or the insignificant and unrecognized form), the STS becomes positive at the same time and in the same degree as in persons with outspoken florid clinical manifestations. Seronegative symptomless infection, so far as is known, does not occur.

Latent syphilis

The second and even more important fact of the biology of syphilis in man is that of latency, i.e., there are no symptoms; the most searching and meticulous physical examination shows nothing abnormal and the only evidence of infection is the positive STS. For emphasis, figure 15 from page 23 is repeated here as figure 30.

LATENT SYPHILIS

1. All syphilitic infections are latent—
   (a) At some time.
   (b) Most of the time until ultimate break-down.
2. Latent syphilis is not recognizable clinically.
3. The diagnosis can only be made by serologic tests.
4. A spinal fluid examination must be done to rule out asymptomatic neurosyphilis.

Do routine blood serologic tests

figure 30

As patients with syphilis come under observation in any large syphilis clinic, from 60 to 75 percent have latent syphilis.

The diagnosis of syphilis must therefore be made, in the majority of syphilitic persons, if it is to be made at all, on the basis of serologic tests, and on no other presently available basis.

If the positive STS is accompanied by lesions compatible with those produced by syphilis (see the clinical section of this supplement—part 1); or if the seropositive patient provides a history either of such lesions, of syphilitic infection in other members of his immediate family, or of previous antisyphilitic treatment, the physician need have little hesitancy in accepting a positive STS from a reliable laboratory as definitive evidence of syphilis without further confirmation. He will be correct in at least 99 percent of cases. Especially is it a dangerous waste of time to wait for confirmation of a positive STS in a patient with lesions compatible with primary or secondary syphilis. Such patients are infectious. Time and again has the syphilologist seen a wife infected by a husband with florid secondary syphilis while the doctor waited to "repeat the blood test." If the physician is uncertain of his ground in such a case, expert clinical consultation and, if possible, darkfield microscope confirmation should be sought at once.

If, on the other hand, the patient is clinically well, without a history of previous infection or treatment, and especially if his sexual exposures, if any, have been with contacts unlikely themselves to have syphilis, the physician must at once question the validity of the unexpectedly positive STS and investigate further. He must never tell the patient that the test means syphilis, and indeed should not even say that the test was positive, without having first ruled out a technical false positive result.

Technical false positive results

In the best-regulated busy office, clinic, or laboratory, many things may go wrong with serodiagnostic tests. These range from such gross clerical errors as mislabeling of a specimen, or entering the wrong result against the patient's name, to complex mechanical or biologic mistakes in performance of the test. In the case of an unsuspected positive doubtful report, therefore, the physician must guard against this type of error by immediate repetition of the test. It is not sufficient to recheck in the same laboratory, since sometimes, and for purely technical reasons, one laboratory will provide repeatedly positive tests on the same patient, though his serum, tested in other laboratories, is negative. Specimens for check of technical accuracy should therefore be submitted not only to the original laboratory, but also to a second of known competence.

Not until such an unsuspected positive result has been confirmed is the doctor entitled to tell his patient of the fact, and even then he should be guarded in the interpretation of its diagnostic significance.

Incidence of positive serologic tests in various types of syphilis

Studies dealing with this point are for the most part old, and deal with less sensitive serologic technics than those now available. A good guess, on the basis of present standards, is summed up in table 3.

From these data it is clear that a negative STS does not rule out the diagnostic possibility of syphilis.

Biologic false positive results

In World War II, serologic tests were routinely performed on all military and naval personnel, both at induction and at separation

Table 3

Type of syphilis (untreated)	Incidence of positive STS (percent)
Primary	Depends on duration of lesion. If less than 7 days, usually negative; thereafter rapidly increasing incidence until appearance of secondary lesions.
Secondary	100 (a very few exceptions only; a negative result here has its greatest value in ruling out syphilis).

from the armed forces. At the time of separation, no less than 75,000 soldiers were found to be seropositive, all of whom were seronegative at induction, and none of whom was known to have acquired syphilis during military service. How many of this substantial army in itself actually had syphilis? Studies of samples drawn from these 75,000 indicate that in less than half, the proper explanation was syphilis. The magnitude of the problem of biologic false positivity (subsequently abbreviated BFP) is forcefully brought out by this illustration.

Incidence of BFP's in normal persons

It has been estimated that in from 1 in 1,000 to 1 in 5,000 normal persons, reagin or a reagin-like substance is present in the blood, temporarily or permanently, in sufficient quantity to produce false positive results with standard serodiagnostic tests. Suppose we split the difference in estimates and guess it at 1 in 3,000. For any individual, the chance of being labeled erroneously as syphilitic is thus small. Translated into terms of mass blood testing, however, the figures are imposing. For every 1,000,000 routine blood tests on a supposedly normal population group, about 350 will have false positive tests; for every 10,000,000 (as in the armed forces in the late war), 3,500. These are important numbers.

Incidence of BFP's under the influence of extraneous conditions

Much more significant, however, is the fact that about 20 percent of the normal population are thought to be "potential reactors"; i.e., some anomaly is present in the serum (hyper-gamma-globulinemia?) which, under the influence of nonsyphilitic infections or other extraneous influences, increases the (normal?) reagin content of the blood to such an extent as to produce BFP tests. An imposing list of such circumstances has been drawn up. The commoner among them, the approximate probable incidence of BFP reactions (definitely known only for malaria and vaccinia, only approximately for others because of lack of serial day-to-day serologic testing), and certain explanatory comments, are shown in table 4.

In most such instances, the BFP test is characterized by the fact that it is (1) of low titer (see next paragraph), and (2) of temporary duration. Unfortunately, however, there is a substantial number of persons who almost certainly have BFP's rather than syphilis, in whom seropositivity persists for years. Lack of spontaneous reversal to seronegativity does not therefore rule out the possibility of BFP's. There may also be (although this is not necessary) anomalies of serologic pattern, i.e., technics of low sensitivity positive when more sensitive technics are negative; complement-fixation tests negative when flocculation tests are strongly positive or vice versa; standard technics positive with cardiolipin antigen negative (see below).

Quantitative serologic tests in differentiation of BFP's from syphilis

Quantitation of serologic tests is indispensable in following the results of treatment in patients with syphilis (a subject beyond the scope of this paper); but of limited value in diagnosis.

In syphilis, generally but not always, quantitative tests are of high titer (16 dilution units or more) and this is especially true of early secondary syphilis (where the average titer is 100 to 200 dilution units) or late syphilis with lesions. Even in early syphilis, however, the titer may be low (2 to 8 units). In syphilis, however, the titer, whether high or low, is not a measure of the severity or gravity of syphilitic infection and this point should be thoroughly understood by the physician and explained to the patient. Too much damage has already been done by doctors who have led their patients to believe that "2 plus" is better and less serious than "4 plus," a point of view which is unmitigated nonsense!

In persons with BFP's, on the other hand, quantitative tests are generally though not always of low titer (8 dilution units or less). This is not always so, by any means, since the writer has seen two patients with virus pneumonia, one of whom reached a titer of 128, the other 256 units.

These statements apply to quantitative tests on a single specimen, from which no absolute conclusions may be drawn.

Quantitative serologic follow-up

The quantitative testing of serial specimens taken once or twice a week over a period of months may, however, be of great and definitive value in the differentiation of BFP reactions from syphilis. If, in the absence of antisyphilitic treatment, the titer gradually falls, within 2 to 6 months, until finally confirmed seronegativity is reached, the patient almost certainly has a BFP. If, over this same time period the titer steadily rises, he almost certainly has syphilis. If the titer remains stationary for 6 months, he probably has syphilis, though this conclusion is by no means absolute; since BFP's due to known or unknown cause may persist unchanged for years.

Special serologic technics in differentiation of BFP's from syphilis

Since the first discovery of serologic tests for syphilis in 1907, efforts to improve their accuracy (specificity and sensitivity) have proceeded along two widely dissimilar lines:

1. Purification of antigens.
2. Identification of the immunochemical nature of reagin, and an attempt to determine whether reagin produced in syphilitic infection differs qualitatively from that found in persons with BFP's.

Each of these efforts has met with partial success, which is however only partial for reasons explained in earlier sections of this paper. The extent to which this partial success is applicable to the BFP problem is discussed in the two following sections.

Cardiolipin antigen

Cardiolipin is probably a pure chemical substance, prepared from an alcoholic extract of beef heart by Pangborn and her associates. It is believed to carry most of the serologic activity of beef heart extracts, and to improve both specificity and sensitivity by elimination from the antigen of many impurities which characterize "standard" (Kahn, Kline, Eagle, etc.) antigens.

It is still, however, a nonspecific antigen which detects the nonspecific reagin produced in syphilis, and probably does not measure the direct antibodies produced to T. pallidum.

In practical use, cardiolipin is fortified with purified lecithin and also (as in the case of standard antigens) with cholesterol. The proportions of these substances in the final mixture may be adjusted (as standard antigens may also be juggled) in such a manner as to influence both specificity and sensitivity, i.e., to increase or decrease the number of false positive results in normal persons, or of true positive reactions in syphilis.

Cardiolipin antigen may be used in complement-fixation or in macro- (tube) or micro- (slide) flocculation tests.

When cardiolipin was first introduced several years ago there were high hopes that it might replace less purified antigens, and become the basis for a standardized STS to be adopted on a Nation-wide basis. This hope has not yet been realized. There has not been an organized and cooperative effort to determine (1) which technic (complement-fixation or tube or slide flocculation test) is most suitable to the new antigen, and (2) the optimal concentration of cardiolipin, lecithin, and cholesterol for blood serum and spinal fluid. Instead, each serologist has attempted to adapt cardiolipin to his own particular technic and there is wide disagreement as to optimal concentrations of reagents.

Nevertheless, while there is as yet no standardized "cardiolipin test," and even under the widely varying present conditions of its use, there is evidence that this antigen may be adjusted to the other reagents concerned in such a manner that it is both more specific and more sensitive than standard and less pure beef heart extracts, as follows:

In many persons with BFP's (especially in malaria) cardiolipin tests may be negative when standard tests are positive. In others, although false activity has not been eliminated, cardiolipin quantitative tests may be less strongly positive than with standard antigens. Thus, the serologic pattern: Eagle flocculation test positive 128 units, cardiolipin negative (as in a recent case of virus pneumonia); or Eagle positive 16 units, cardiolipin positive 2 units (as in a recent case of infectious mononucleosis), should at once arouse the suspicion of BFP.

In syphilis, on the other hand, cardiolipin antigen may be adjusted to be more strongly positive on a quantitative basis than standard antigens. In terms of dilution units (not Kahn units, which are arbitrarily and unnecessarily four times as great) the cardio titer may be two to eight times higher than with standard tests, and is practically always at least as great. Thus, one finds such results as:

Specimen	Eagle flocculation test	Cardiolipin flocculation test
1	2	4
2	16	32
3	1	4
4	128	512, etc., etc.

In following the results of treatment in, e.g., early syphilis, the positive cardiolipin test is the last of a battery of tests to revert to negative.

Tests for the nature of reagin: "verification" tests

For 40 years many serologists have attempted to develop technics capable of differentiating positive results in syphilis from those produced by other nonspirochetal diseases or conditions. Some of these have been called "verification tests," a name popularized in this country by Kahn. Unfortunately the name is a misnomer since no such test so far developed actually verifies anything. In most such tests, including the Kahn verification test, the result depends largely on the quantitative titer of the specimen tested. Those serums with low titer content, whether derived from patients with syphilis or BFP's, tend to provide verification results of the "general biologic" type. Those with high titer content again, regardless of origin, tend to give results of the "syphilitic" type.

The only one of these tests which seems likely to be of promise is the technically complicated Neurath euglobulin-inhibition test which is not yet ready for general application. All such tests, moreover, depend on the nonspecific antibody reagin and are likely to be completely superseded when a serologic technic has been discovered for the detection of the wholly different (and perhaps far more specific) antibody to T. pallidum.

Recognition of biologic false positive serologic tests

Confronted with a patient with a confirmed positive STS, but in whom there is reason to doubt its validity as to syphilis, the physician is obligated to carry out most, usually all, of the steps indicated in table 5. Verification tests (other than the Neurath euglobulin-inhibition test if locally available) may be omitted as of no value.

Also, "provocative" tests—attempts to provoke or increase seropositivity by means of antisyphilitic treatment with one or more doses of arsenic or bismuth—should be omitted, since they are valueless and serve only to confuse the final decision.

Table 5.—Steps in the study of patients suspected of biologic false positivity

History	Of possible lesions of early syphilis or other venereal diseases; of previous antisyphilitic treatment; of possible exposure to infection; of precipitating causes of biologic false positivity (see table 4).
Physical examination	A complete medical examination of the entire body, with special reference to skin, mucosae, lymph nodes, cardiovascular and neurologic status, stigmata of congenital syphilis.
Blood serologic tests	Confirm in different laboratory and by different technic. Quantitative tests; serologic pattern; cardiolipin antigen; Neurath euglobulin-inhibition test if available.
Serologic follow-up	Repeat quantitatively titered tests at monthly intervals until spontaneous seronegativity is attained; or alternately, for at least 6 months before starting treatment (exception in pregnant women—see text). Rising titer almost surely means syphilis; stationary titer probably.
Cerebrospinal fluid examination	Obligatory in all cases unless spontaneous reversal to seronegativity within 6 months. False positivity in spinal fluid does not occur except in certain clinically well-defined neurologic diseases.
Other laboratory tests	Blood smears for malaria. Heterophile antibody (infectious mononucleosis). Sedimentation rate (questionable value).
Epidemiologic investigation	Examine all available contacts (parents, siblings, marital partner, children, sexual partners); minimum on each an STS.

Treatment of syphilis on serologic suspicion

Even with the advent of rapid and safe treatment with penicillin, it is better to withhold all antisyphilitic treatment in seropositive patients suspected of BFP reactions until, on the one hand, the diagnosis of syphilis is definitely proved by collateral evidence (see table 5); or, on the other, and in the absence of such collateral proof, serologic positivity has persisted in essentially unchanged quantitative titer for a period of at least six months. It is psychologically undesirable and sometimes disastrous to stigmatize patients as syphilitic in the absence of reasonably definite proof. Further, the premature administration of treatment may make it impossible ever to decide whether the patient actually has syphilis.

The only exception to these statements is in the case of seropositive pregnant women. Here one cannot delay treatment for the weeks or months which may be necessary to reach a decision, because of potential risk to the fetus. To such persons, penicillin treatment should be given at or before the fifth month of pregnancy, though the other studies suggested in table 5, together with subsequent serologic follow-up both of mother and infant (when born), are obligatory.

Finally, in many patients and even after all of the data of table 5 are in hand, together with 6 months of observation, an absolutely certain differentiation between syphilis and BF positivity cannot be reached. In such cases it is desirable to tell the patient that, while uncertainty still exists, the diagnosis of syphilis is at least possible (or probable, as circumstances indicate); and that, for safety's sake, a prophylactic course of penicillin should be given. If this is done, the patient must be subsequently followed as if the diagnosis of syphilis were certain.

INTERPRETATION OF SPINAL FLUID TESTS

Necessity for original spinal fluid examination

It is absolutely obligatory that the cerebrospinal fluid (hereafter abbreviated CSF) be examined routinely in every patient in whom syphilis is definitely diagnosed and in most of those in whom the infection is suspected. Treatment cannot be intelligently planned, nor its results followed, unless this is done.

The CSF should be examined for diagnostic purposes:

1. In all patients with early (primary and secondary) syphilis, at approximately 6 months after the initiation of treatment.
2. In all patients with latent or late syphilis, before any treatment is given.
3. As part of the diagnostic procedure in patients suspected of syphilis (see table 5 above).

Necessity for repeat CSF examination

In early syphilis, if the CSF is normal at 6 months, the necessity for re-examination depends on the patient's further posttreatment progress, as follows:

1. If serologic progress is favorable (blood STS reversed to negative and maintained so, or reduced to low titer seropositivity—8 dilution units or less) and if there has been no evidence of clinical or serologic relapse or of reinfection, the CSF should be retested at 2 years after the completion of treatment. If it is then normal, the test need never be repeated unless
2. There is evidence of clinical or serologic relapse, or of reinfection. If one of these contingencies occurs, the CSF must be retested just as if the patient had been seen for the first time with early syphilis.

Early latent syphilis (of less than 4 years' duration) should be regarded for purposes of spinal fluid testing, as early syphilis.

In latent or late syphilis (of more than 4 years' duration) the CSF, if originally normal, need never be retested unless the patient develops symptoms or signs suggestive of symptomatic neurosyphilis; and this statement holds good regardless of the outcome of treatment in terms of serologic reversal of the blood STS.

In neurosyphilis, whether asymptomatic or symptomatic, the CSF must of course be re-examined at periodic intervals as a guide to the outcome of treatment.

Biology of neurosyphilis in relation to CSF testing

The statements in the preceding paragraphs are based on the known facts of the pathogenesis of neurosyphilis. So far as is known, T. pallidum is present in the blood stream only during the period of its general dissemination, i.e., during the first few months, perhaps the first 2 years or so, the time period to which primary, secondary, and relapsing secondary lesions are practically limited. Once these generalized early lesions have healed, either spontaneously or under the influence of treatment, the organism does not reappear in the blood stream unless a generalized relapse (clinical or serologic) occurs, or unless the patient is reinfected.

The nervous system is involved via the blood stream. The T. pallidum is one of the few micro-organisms which can penetrate the blood-brain barrier with ease. There is reason to believe that during the period of generalized spirochetemia, this invasion of the neuraxis occurs in most if not all patients; and that it cannot occur (unless by direct extension from neighboring structures in exceptionally rare instances) under any other circumstances.

In the majority of cases, this original invasion never produces symptoms, physical signs, or alterations in the CSF, and the organisms which have penetrated the nervous system are spontaneously eliminated by obscure and not yet understood immune processes of the host.

In a substantial number, however, the fact of this invasion can be demonstrated by routine examination of the CSF, in which abnormalities may be found, in some cases even within the first few weeks or months of infection, in all within the first 2 years. Since these abnormalities, when present, are not accompanied by any symptoms or physical signs, the situation is aptly described as asymptomatic neurosyphilis.

The various forms of symptomatic neurosyphilis (a description of which is beyond the scope of this paper) are late developments, occurring usually 5 to 20 years after infection. But symptomatic neurosyphilis is preceded by asymptomatic neurosyphilis. By means of routine CSF examination, in the manner described above, one can predict not only the probability of eventual development of symptomatic neurosyphilis, but also, and with a fair degree of accuracy, its probable type. That is, one can predict these future events if appropriate treatment is not given; if it is, one may go still further and prevent them.

These considerations explain not only the timing of CSF examination, but also its absolute necessity. Clinical neurosyphilis could be almost wholly prevented if doctors used CSF examination routinely, interpreted the results correctly, and acted properly on the basis of the interpretation.

Individual tests on CSF

Cell count

This is perhaps the most important of the several tests on CSF and, unfortunately, the one usually omitted. It must be performed within an hour after withdrawal of spinal fluid, since otherwise cells settle to the bottom of the tube, or actually disintegrate so rapidly as to render the count invalid. This requirement almost necessitates that the cell count be done on the spot by the physician performing the puncture, unless the laboratory is within immediate reach.

This being so, a brief description of technic is essential. An ordinary blood counting chamber with Neubauer ruling is employed. A drop of undiluted spinal fluid is placed in the chamber, and first under low power, checked under high-power magnification, all cells in the entire ruled area are counted. Since the amount of fluid within the ruled area is 0.9 cubic millimeter, the actual count is multiplied by 10/9, in order to provide the number of cells per cubic millimeter.

Normal spinal fluid contains nine or fewer cells per cubic millimeter, usually five or less, and all of these are lymphocytes.

Confusion in counting cells may arise between red blood cells and lymphocytes. If the spinal fluid is grossly bloody (trauma from the puncture, intracranial—usually subarachnoid—hemorrhage) a cell count is valueless. The trauma of puncture may, however, introduce microscopic amounts of blood. In this case, the experienced observer can usually differentiate red cells from lymphocytes under high dry magnification. If he is not sure of correct identification, a fresh count should be done with the aid of a diluting fluid containing 1 percent glacial acetic acid in distilled water (to lake the red cells) and colored with a few drops of alcoholic gentian or methyl violet (to stain the white cells). The diluting fluid is drawn up to the 0.5 mark on the ordinary white blood cell counting pipette, spinal fluid to the 11 mark, and thoroughly mixed; then counted in the usual manner.

The cell count is usually increased to 10 or more in neurosyphilis (as high as several thousand in some cases of acute syphilitic meningitis), whether asymptomatic or symptomatic. However, an increased cell count is not specific for syphilis; it indicates only that there is an inflammatory or irritative lesion within the nervous system.

The major importance of the cell count lies in (1) the early recognition of mild forms of asymptomatic neurosyphilis, and (2) in following the results of treatment (see discussion of the Dattner-Thomas concept below).

Protein estimation

The purely qualitative Pandy, Ross-Jones, and Nonne tests are valueless and should be abandoned in favor of quantitative protein estimation, which requires the use of a spectrophotometer in a reliable laboratory.

Normal protein content by the method usually employed is 40 mg. percent (i.e., 40 mg. per 100 cc.) or less.

The protein content is usually increased in neurosyphilis; but like the cell count, this test is nonspecific, dependent only on the existence of an inflammatory or irritative lesion (which may be due to many other causes than syphilis) within the nervous system.

Its importance depends on the same two points given above for the cell count.

Colloidal tests

Three of these, mastic, gold, or benzoin, are in common use. The mastic is by far the simplest and most reliable. The test depends on a 10-tube serial dilution of spinal fluid with the colloid suspension, and is reported in numerical terms of the degree of precipitation of the colloid in each tube, thus furnishing a "curve." The usual normal curve pattern is reported as, e.g.:

0000000000 (flat)

A rise as far as 2 in any tube may occur in a normal fluid, and is not significant.

Sample abnormal curves observed in neurosyphilis are, e.g.:

3210000000
0123321000 ("mid-zone")
4321000000 } ("first zone")
5555543210 }
0012355555 ("meningeal"—rare)

The different types of curves depend on the balance between albumin and gamma globulin protein fractions in the CSF. Some observers feel that for this reason, colloidal tests may be eliminated if quantitative estimations of these two proteins are available; but most still feel that information both of diagnostic and prognostic value in neurosyphilis is provided by them (see discussion of CSF patterns below).

Like cell count and protein estimation, an abnormal colloidal curve of any type is not specific for syphilis and may occur in many other neurologic disorders.

Tests for reagin in the CSF (complement-fixation and flocculation tests)

These are the only specific tests for syphilis performed on spinal fluid. When positive, they constitute absolute proof not only that the patient has syphilis, but also, that he has neurosyphilis (certain rare exceptions are discussed below under the heading of "Biologic False Positive Spinal Fluid Tests").

Complement-fixation (Wassermann) tests are more satisfactory on spinal fluid than any flocculation technic (e.g., Kahn) so far devised, and should always be employed.

Moreover, the complement-fixation test must be quantitated, usually with amounts ranging from 0.1 to 1.0 cc. of fluid. If the test is negative it is essential to know that this is so with a large amount of fluid; if positive, it is essential to know the smallest amount which gives a positive result. In the best laboratories, assuming a positive test with the smallest amount of fluid routinely employed, i.e., 0.1 cc., further downward titrations are run with, e.g., 0.05, 0.03, 0.01, 0.005 cc., etc. The degree of positivity of the test is important both in diagnosis and in prognostic estimates. The simple report "spinal fluid Wassermann positive" should never be accepted.

An anticomplementary result on a freshly drawn spinal fluid is a positive result, (i.e., signifies the presence of reagin) unlike the situation with blood serum, which may be anticomplimentary even if seronegative. This is not true, however, if the CSF specimen has stood several days before testing, and has been contaminated by bacterial infection or by contact exposure to a cork.

Biologic false positive spinal fluid tests

This categorization applies only to those fluids in which a false positive complement-fixation test is obtained; and not to those with negative complement-fixation but abnormal cell count, protein content, and/or colloidal curves. False positivity (as to reagin) is far less frequent in spinal fluid than in blood serum; and occurs rarely, so far as is known, only in certain well-recognized clinical syndromes, as follows:

Acute bacterial or coccal meningitis
Tuberculous meningitis
Acute lymphocytic choriomeningitis
Subarachnoid hemorrhage Brain tumor

Even in these conditions, in all of which the patient is obviously and usually seriously ill, with clinical manifestations usually readily differentiated from neurosyphilis, false positivity in the spinal fluid is rare. When it does occur, this may, in some cases at least, be due to the concomitant presence of (blood) seropositive syphilis (but not neurosyphilis) with the passive transfer of reagin from the blood to the CSF because of alteration in the blood-brain barrier by the coexisting neurologic disease. This transfer of reagin from blood to fluid does not normally occur in syphilis; and there is strong proof that, in neurosyphilis, reagin is locally elaborated in the nervous system.

Pattern of CSF tests

The normal spinal fluid, subjected to the four tests described above, is shown in table 6. Here also appear CSF "groupings" constituting usual patterns seen in neurosyphilis, whether early or late, asymptomatic or symptomatic.

Group I are those with minimal abnormalities: cell count and/or protein content slightly to moderately elevated; other tests negative.

Table 6.—Spinal fluid "patterns" in syphilis

Group	Cell count	Protein content	Complement-fixation test (Wassermann)	Colloidal test
Normal ...	9 or less, usually 5 or less.	40 mg. percent or less.	0 with 1.0 cc.	0000000000 to 2111000000 or 0112100000 etc.
I	10 or more, usually less than 50.	40 mg. percent or more, usually less than 100 mg. percent.	0 with 1.0 cc.	As in normal fluids, or, e.g., 3210000000
II	10 or more, usually less than 200.	40 mg. percent or more, usually less than 100 mg. percent.	Positive with 0.2 cc. or larger amounts.	Variable.
III	10 or more, usually (except in acute syphilitic meningitis) less than 500.	40 to 200 mg. percent or more.	Positive with 0.1 cc. or smaller amounts.	First zone ("paretic"), e.g., 4321000000 to 5555554321

Group III includes those with maximal abnormalities: especially the strongly positive titered complement-fixation test, with 0.1 cc. or less of fluid; and the first zone (paretic) colloidal curves.

Group II is made up of these fluids with abnormalities intermediate between minimal (I) and maximal (III).

The major importance of this grouping lies in the grave prognostic significance of the group III fluid. This is the "paretic formula." It is usually present in all untreated patients with dementia paralytica. It may also occur in other clinical forms of neurosyphilis, or in completely asymptomatic neurosyphilis (even during the first few months of infection). Here it may and often does mean that although the patient has not yet developed paresis, there is grave risk that he may do so unless properly treated.

More detailed information as to the prognostic significance of these several spinal fluid groups in the absence of or following treatment is beyond the scope of this paper; and standard text books should be consulted.

Can the CSF be normal in untreated neurosyphilis? Yes, especially in tabes dorsalis (about 20 percent) or in vascular neurosyphilis.

Active versus inactive spinal fluids

The Dattner-Thomas concept of "active" versus "inactive" spinal fluids is based on many years' observation of patients with general paresis. These two workers have evolved an hypothesis relating the character of the CSF tests to posttreatment follow-up, and the possible necessity for re-treatment.

It is generally agreed that in most cases of neurosyphilis of whatever type, two pathologic components are at work—inflammation and degeneration. Dattner and Thomas believe:

1. That the presence or absence of active inflammation in the nervous system (usually in the meninges) is measurable by the cell count and protein count (though not by complement-fixation or colloidal tests); and
2. That progressive degeneration depends on progressive and persistent inflammation.

If cell count and protein content, either or both, are elevated or remain so after treatment, inflammation (and the risk of further degeneration) persists, the CSF is active, and the patient should be treated (or re-treated).

Contrariwise, if both cell count and protein content become and remain normal (regardless of the presence or absence of regression toward normal of complement-fixation and colloidal tests), this is evidence of subsidence of the inflammatory process in the nervous system (and of the risk of further progressive degeneration), the CSF is inactive, and there is no indication for further treatment.

Not all investigators agree with this concept, since there do exist instances of neurosyphilis (especially tabes dorsalis but also general paresis) in which there is steady downward clinical progression in the face of an inactive fluid (both cell count and protein content normal) even in the absence of any previous treatment. Nevertheless, and while there are exceptions to the hypothesis, it is a good working rule of thumb, in the posttreatment management of most cases of neurosyphilis. Moreover, its importance is so great as to lend particular weight to earlier statements of the absolute necessity of accurate cell counts and quantitative protein determinations in all CSF examinations.

This directory is for the information of health officers, physicians, nurses, and social workers in referring persons unable to pay for private care to public or semipublic medical agencies for the diagnosis and treatment of the venereal diseases.

The directory is recommended for use in clinics as an aid in the transfer of patients and in agencies whose clients may be in need of medical care for the venereal diseases.

The listing is by State and municipality. The name and address of the clinic is given with information on the types of patients who are eligible for treatment on the cost of treatment, and on the disease treated.

This directory is for the information of health officers, physicians, nurses, and social workers so that they may be able to refer persons to clinics for the diagnosis, treatment, and post-treatment observation of the venereal diseases.

It is recommended for use by all persons and agencies who may refer persons needing medical care for these diseases.

The listing is by State and municipality. Following the name and address of each clinic, information on days and hours of clinic sessions is given in abbreviated form. Thus, TTHFS 830 1030AM means that the clinic holds sessions on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 8:30 to 10:30 A. M. If the clinic holds separate sessions for syphilis and gonorrhea, males and females, whites and Negroes, children and adults, this fact is indicated by listing these sessions individually.

The types of patients who are eligible for treatment, the fee system and the diseases treated are also presented.

This directory is for the information of health officers, physicians, nurses, and social workers so that they may be able to refer persons to clinics for the diagnosis, treatment, and post-treatment observation of the venereal diseases.

It is recommended for use by all persons and agencies who may refer persons needing medical care for these diseases.

The listing is by State and municipality. Following the name and address of each clinic, information on days and hours of clinic sessions is given in abbreviated form. Thus, T., Th., F., S. 8:30–10:30 a. m. means that the clinic holds sessions on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m. If the clinic holds separate sessions for syphilis and gonorrhea, males and females, whites and Negroes, children and adults, this fact is indicated by listing these sessions individually.

The types of patients who are eligible for treatment, the fee system and the diseases treated are also presented.
